The first round of the co-ed Glory Daze Lacrosse League for adults, ages mid-20s and up, will start in September and end in early November. The league will consist of pick-up games, probably one, maybe two, evenings a week, on a field in Hingham.

Dates and times will be available shortly, but anyone interested in participating should contact Victoria O'Doherty-Popp via email to victoriaodp@gmail.com or call 339-788-1783.

The Glory Daze League will be stress-free with friendly competition, and low cost.

Happy August

Hi there Cohasset! What a great week we have had as we welcomed the beginning of August. I am hoping that everyone is really taking some time to slow down and enjoy what Summer in New England has to offer. Before we know it, September will be here and the crazy Back-to-School time will arrive. Head to the beach, look for and attend one of the farmers markets that are held around the South Shore, go for a fun-filled family swim and enjoy it all. Happy August 2011, Cohasset.

Happy Birthday!

Bill Enos, a retired Red Sox Scout, turns 91 on Aug. 5. A happy birthday goes out to him from all his friends in Cohasset. Bill, a lifelong Cohasset resident, retired to Scottsdale, Ariz. 10 years ago.

Fairfield

Fairfield University announced the following Cohasset residents have been named to the dean's list for the 2011 spring semester: Kenneth P Muir, a junior studying in the College of Arts and Sciences; and Gabrielle M Rodman, a first year student studying in the College of Arts and Sciences.

To be selected for the dean's list, a student must attain a grade point average of at least 3.5, of a possible 4.0.

Great work!

Bridgewater State

Hats off to Samantha P. Snow and Ellen Tarpey, both of Cohasset, who have earned dean's list recognition at Bridgewater State University for the 2011 spring semester.

Cheer chat!

Members of the Cohasset squad share what they loved about camp, and what they're pumped for this year.

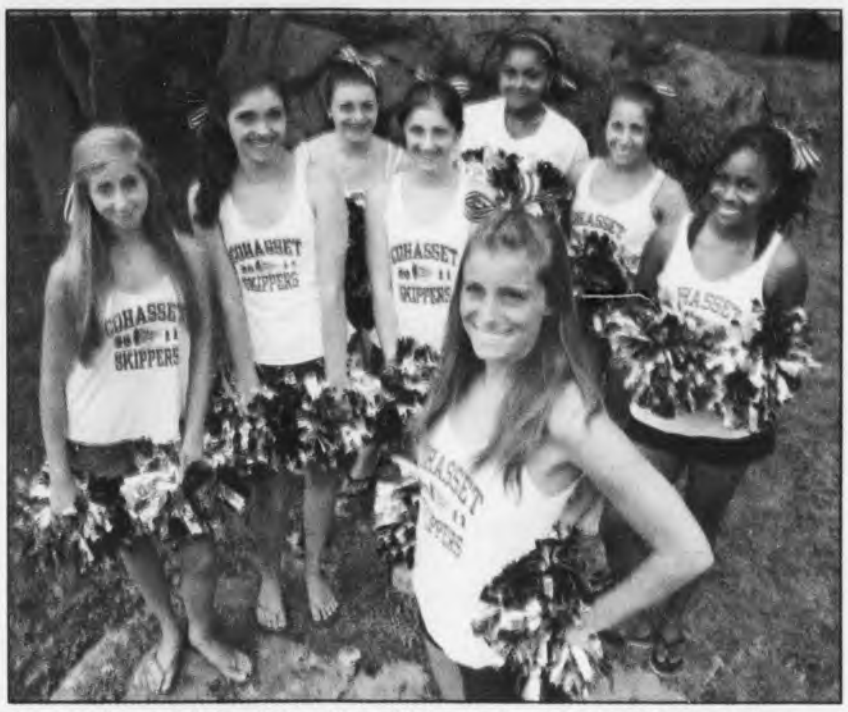
Kyhla Desire, sophomore
At camp, I learned: "A lot about basing, and it made me feel closer to my team. We had a lot of bonding chances."
Can't wait for: "The football games, definitely; they're the most fun."

Shannon Silvia, freshman
At camp, I learned: "Better stunting skills."
Can't wait for: "The competitions."

Maya Crawford, sophomore
At camp, I loved: "The dances and the stunting; they were really good."
Can't wait for: "The football games and the competitions, because I've never competed in cheerleading before."

Sarah Naughton, senior and Captain
At camp, I loved: "How we were able to bond so well together and really become a united team."
Can't wait for: "Definitely cheering for all of the football games and the pep rally."

Jesse Lyons, sophomore
At camp, I loved: "The team bonding; we all got to be closer."



Mackenzie Voke, sophomore
At camp, I loved: "Our improvements in stunting."

Lexy Ritz, sophomore
This school year: "I'm looking forward to having a bigger team than we did last year."

At camp: "I just moved here, so I didn't really know anyone before; I got to meet people and learn a few things."
This school year: "I'm really excited to cheer for the football games because I've never gotten to do that before."

CHEERLEADING

was our first time going to a cheerleading camp, and we did not know what to expect."

Also attending the camp were seven other cheerleading squads from around New England, whose members severely outnumbered the 10 Cohasset cheerleaders in attendance (the squad has 17 girls total). Naughton noted that these bigger teams, typically made up of 20 girls or more, boasted "at least two to four coaches [per squad] with two to three different uniforms daily — it was right out of a cheer movie."

Cohasset's small squad was undaunted.

"The first night, of all the teams there, we won the spirit stick; the second night, we won the coveted team unity banana. You can imagine hundreds of girls and all these coaches, and they are serious competitors. And when we kept winning these things, it just drew our girls so tight and so close. I ended every single night in tears because I was so proud of them."

Defying catty cheerleader stereotypes, the claws did not come out during the camp competitions.

"All of the teams and the other coaches wanted them to [win], because they worked so hard," Naughton said. "They did stunts that no one had ever seen before, and with just the 10 of them, they were able to take it from a team of 24; it was like David and Goliath. And it was beautiful to watch their growth as young ladies."

The camp also taught the girls how to stunt, and do so safely. Naughton, in her first year as cheerleading coach (she spent two years as assistant coach), is committed to having a safe squad.

"The girls want to do stunts, but I won't allow them to unless they're safe," said the coach. "There's no point in someone getting hurt and not being able to participate." Rather than getting caught up in crazy stunts and competition, Naughton wants her girls to remember to "above all, have fun, or nobody else will have any fun."

The girls will soon take what they learned at camp and apply it to football games, pep rallies and cheer competitions. But for Naughton, the lessons learned in cheerleading will take the girls even further than that. These are "huge life skills" that will "carry them through the rest of their high school years, their college years and as young women in the business world," the coach said. "I'm teaching them how to market themselves as a team; I gave them all business cards. I want them to know that, regardless of what they choose to do, they'll succeed in everything if their heart is in it."

The business cards have certainly come in handy for the squad's fundraising efforts. Besides becoming fixtures at the weekly farmers market, "face-painting, helping their community and helping the team," the girls will also hold a car wash and have been selling ad space to local businesses to include on their team calendar.

All the fundraising helps to defray the cost of the squad's uniforms, warm-ups, shoes and competition fees, but the Skippers still have a long way to go. The uniforms for an entire squad of 24 girls (20 team members and four alternates) costs about $2,400, "and that's just the uniforms," said Naughton. "That doesn't include jackets and sweatpants — the girls have to pay for those."

While the school athletic department's budget can provide tops and skirts, warm-ups are an essential part of any cheerleader's attire, especially in the colder months.

"If they don't wear warm-ups, they're going to freeze," Naughton said. "You can't have them running around in 30 degree weather wearing mini-skirts!"

Since the uniforms are issued by the school, they get passed down to new squad members year after year. Naughton shared that the cheerleaders haven't had new uniforms in nearly six years, even though cheerleading uniforms "do have some wear and tear," Naughton said. "These girls are out there in the rain, on the sidelines, throwing each other up in the air, doing cartwheels... The uniforms have to hold up.

"The girls get to keep their sweatpants and jackets since they're paying for them," said Naughton. Plus, "If the girls on the squad now choose to cheer again next year, they'll already have all the stuff."

The coach believes the fundraising has been worth every hard-earned penny. "The girls are going to look awesome out on the field."

For many of these young cheerleaders, it's their first time in the spotlight.

"We have a lot of beautiful young women here who are very shy," Naughton shared. "But when they put those uniforms on and are under those lights, it's as if they've transformed. You can tell when you see them — they just glow."

There are 17 girls ready to go, but Naughton hopes to add a few more cheerleaders this season, rounding out the team total at 24. The Cohasset team has never had more than 16 members, according to the coach, but this is one squad that doesn't fret beating the odds.

"Our motto is, 'Teamwork makes the dream work,'" said sophomore Kyhla Desire.

Added Sarah Naughton, Captain, senior and daughter of the coach, "We're basically coming from nothing and are finally making it up top."

If one thing's for sure, their new coach will be watching proudly from the sidelines.

"Look how beautiful they are," she said. "They're going to shine."

Museums are open for the season

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums showcase the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open from 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

CSCR STUDENT

Ashley Howard was awarded the Henry David Thoreau Scholarship last spring. She is the 11th CSCR student to have won this award. COURTESY PHOTO

CHS graduate awarded Thoreau Scholarship

By Caroline Collins
Special to the Mariner

"The greatest thing that CSCR has provided me is a desire to learn more about the environment, specifically that of Cohasset and the surrounding areas."
Ashley Howard

For the past five years, Ashley Howard has been spending her summers a bit differently from most high school students. She visits Sandy Beach and Cohasset Harbor frequently, however she is usually carrying laboratory equipment, such as an instrument used to measure the salinity, dissolved oxygen and conductivity of the water, rather than a beach chair and towel.

Over the years, Ashley has been a devoted student at the Center for Student Coastal Research in Cohasset, participating in a total of two staff teams and five research projects. One research project that Ashley has particularly enjoyed working on is the Cohasset Beaches and Bacteria Study. This research group travels to six different locations in Cohasset including Little Harbor and Sandy Cove to collect water samples, which are then processed and analyzed by students at CSCR. Ashley is a dedicated member of the group and appreciates that the samples processed at CSCR are comparable to those processed at a professional laboratory.

The Cohasset Beaches and Bacteria Study is only one example of Ashley's participation in CSCR. In addition to the beaches study, Ashley was a member of Cohasset's State of the Harbor Initiative that helped to organize a knowledgeable panel of professionals that met two winters ago in 2010 to discuss issues that impact Cohasset Harbor. Also, Ashley has helped to construct scientific tools known as drifters, which provide a better understanding of tidal flushing in and out of the harbor.

In Ashley's words, "the greatest thing that CSCR has provided me is a desire to learn more about the environment, specifically that of Cohasset and the surrounding areas."

As a result of Ashley's involvement at CSCR she was a competitive applicant for the Henry David Thoreau Scholarship, which she received last spring. The Thoreau Scholarship is awarded annually to a Massachusetts student who has shown a desire to "safeguard the environmental welfare of future generations." Ashley is the 11th CSCR student to have won this award. This scholarship will help connect Ashley to other students and adults who share a passion for environmental research, and has also provided her with funds for future projects. After all of Ashley's work at CSCR she is prepared and excited to continue research in environmental science at the University of Michigan in the fall.

Caroline Collins is a graduate of Cohasset High School; she will be a freshman at Connecticut College this fall and intends to major in biology.

WILLCUTT CORNER

Plans in place to deal with emergencies

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

When 100-degree temperatures arrived last month, it became clear the weather wasn't the only thing percolating in town. A first-ever collaboration dedicated to ensuring citizen safety has also warmed up. Via a partnership among Elder Affairs, Cohasset Police and Fire, Cohasset Emergency Management, the town nurse, and the Town Manager's office, strategies are now in place to insure the wellbeing of all citizens, with an important focus on those who may be more vulnerable during emergency situations.

From the record-breaking heat in July to the December 2010 storm that left large portions of the town without power this new coordinated effort has already had a direct and positive impact on the quality of life of the residents of Cohasset. During both the July and December, special attention was paid to Cohasset's Community Contact List (3C List), comprised of citizens with limitations requiring additional assistance. Maintained by Elder Affairs but serving anyone regardless of age, this list is distributed to Police, Fire, the town nurse, and the Elder Affairs Outreach Coordinator. Police department representatives were able to use the list to contact more than 100 people to confirm their safety. When phone lines were down after the December storm, personnel from all groups used four-wheel drive vehicles to physically contact those without phone service.

Other new programs include a Visible Emergency Notification System (VENS) involving distribution of reflective cards to folks on the 3C List. Recipients hang the card on a doorknob or in a window during an emergency when phone service may be out and assistance is required.

The Fire Department has also actively highlighted the "Knox Box" program, which features a locked box holding house keys in the case of individuals who are frail, disabled or who have recently returned from the hospital. The Fire Department holds keys to the box and as a result, will have easy, timely access to enter a home, if an emergency call is placed.

Each of these programs bears witness to how partnerships maximize resources and benefit a community. Through these initiatives, all Cohasset residents, but especially those needing extra support, can be assured that this town takes an active interest in their wellbeing. For more information on these or other programs, or to register for the 3C List, contact Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112.

Liza Carens Salerno is a freelance writer and a volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

POLICE

Metal detector

A 68-year-old Cohasset man was spoken to after police received a complaint about a man using a metal detector on the common and digging small holes in the grass last Friday (July 29) around 1:24 p.m. Police said an officer talked to a man who he said he did not want to cause any trouble and stopped the activity.

Tracked down

Police located the man who, witnesses say, got into a tan Ford truck with an open alcoholic beverage in hand and drove off last Sunday (July 31) at about 1:37 p.m. near the Olde Salt House. Witnesses said he appeared drunk and also fell into the water. A plate number and description of the truck were provided. Police tracked the truck to Ripley Road and spoke with the 53-year-old operator. They told him about the complaint and gave him a warning. At that point, they could not prove he had been operating under the influence, police said.

Bike found

Police found a bike in the bushes next to the post office that had been reported as missing by a Ripley Road resident last week. The bike was blue and white with a large reflector on the back.

Threats

A 71-year-old Scituate man made verbal threats last week to the owner of the UPS store in Cohasset Plaza when the package he had ordered had not arrived, police said. He was issued a no trespass order.

OUR VIEW

Common sense gone?

Simply put: if you spend more than you take in – sooner or later, you are going to get into a financial mess. So where did we lose our common sense in terms of our financial houses whether at home or in Washington, D.C.?

In going through the microfilm for this week's Hingham Journal Yesterdays column we came upon an interesting front-page story in the Friday, Aug. 4, 1911 Hingham Journal that turns out to be timely today in light of our nation's financial woes. (The Journal has the same editor as the Cohasset Mariner; the office for both papers is in Hingham Square).

In 1910, our state Legislature passed "an act to provide for compulsory instruction in thrift in the public schools." The following year (1911), the Legislature took the matter of teaching children about thrift one step further and passed "an act to authorize savings banks to receive deposits from schoolchildren."

The Journal story stated: "It is not the purpose of this act to open banks in the school, but to encourage thrift among the pupils by having them save their pennies, which are collected by the teacher or some representative of the local savings bank, and deposited in the savings bank."

The Editor is old enough to recall having a savings passbook and making deposits at school. Those days are long gone – but the principle was a good one: getting children to save their pennies.

We are so concerned today with our children's education and with their performance on high-stakes tests, dubbed MCAS in Massachusetts, there is little room in the curriculum for some old-fashioned lessons on thrift.

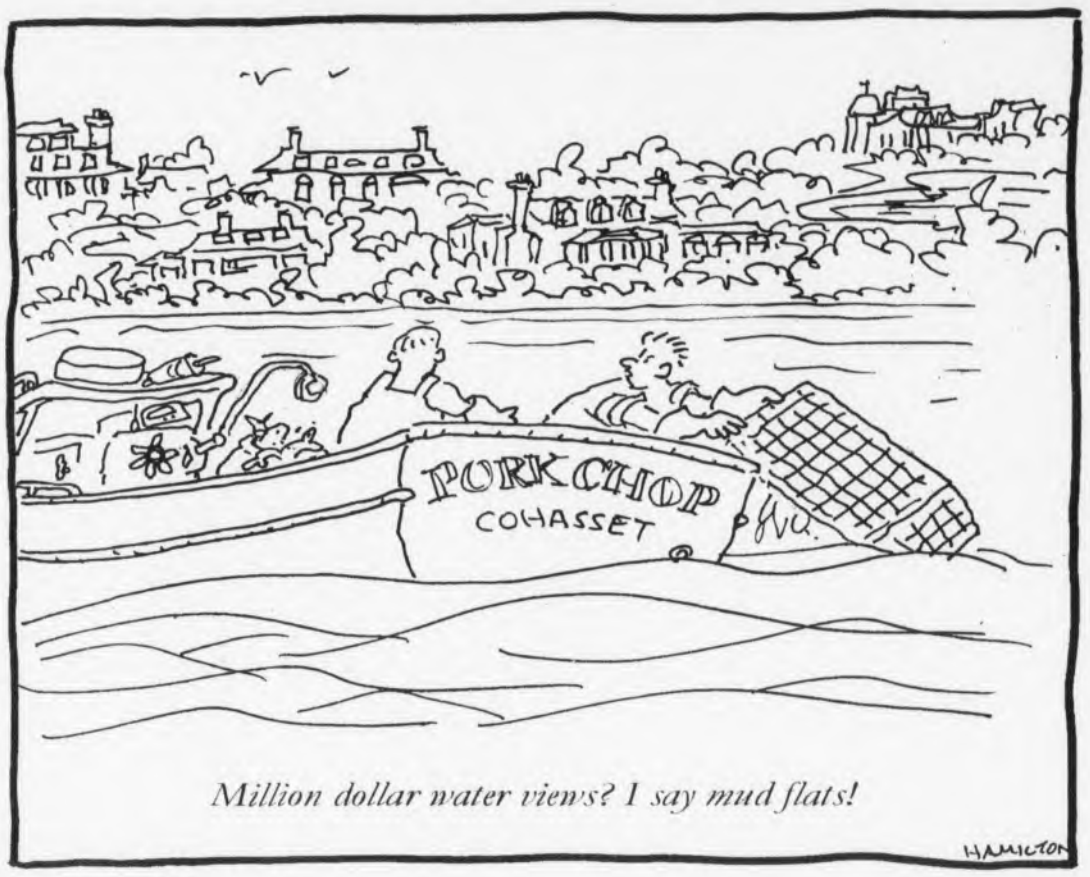
That is too bad. We think the Legislature had the right idea 100 years ago.

Thrift and managing one's finances are as critical to one's future as learning any other school subject and getting into college.

We would love to see those old fashioned school bank passbooks make a comeback. Children need to learn more about saving money. Those lessons also need to be reinforced at home.

One day we came across a couple of kids in our neighborhood rolling pennies down the street into the storm drain. Many would argue that a penny has little if any value – while, that may be true – anyone with a penny jar knows they can add up quickly.

YOUR OPINION MATTERS



We welcome letters from our readers. Writers should include their name, address and a contact number (for verification purposes, not for publication). We include the street address on letters. We do not accept anonymous letters.

Deadline for letters is noon, Wednesday. We can stretch that deadline a little, if the letter can be sent by email. Please call Mary Ford with questions at 781-741-2933.

Longer letters may be used as commentaries at the discretion of the editor.

Letters may be sent by email to Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com; by mail to the Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043, dropped off at the office, or sent by fax at 718-741-2931.

Loss of cursive writing in our schools

You are not old-fashioned; in fact, you are being very current and practical to worry about the loss of cursive writing in our schools. In fact, the lack of instruction in handwriting has been an obvious problem that we see frequently at The Fluency Factory. We have assessed more than 500 students here. One of the tools we use to examine handwriting performance is to have each student write their name as many times as they can in a minute. Of the students we have seen, at least 475 have chosen to print rather than write their names. They are faster and more efficient when printing, and it is the way they choose to sign their names.

"So what," you might ask. Here's the problem. These students have gotten very little instruction in handwriting at any grade level. Most students do not know how to hold a pencil, and their grips are so bad that they are liable to have serious carpal tunnel issues when they have to write extensive notes or longer drafts. They often will be considered to have issues with reading comprehension, when the problem is actually that writing is slow or even painful for them, so their answers are brief and incomplete.

As you mention, there are people who feel as though handwriting is a dying skill. I have had quite a few educators tell me that it is easier to teach typing than handwriting. That is simply not true. Both are complex tasks. We make sure that every student who comes to us acquires fluent handwriting skills – and if possible we teach them how to hold their writing implement properly, saving them from painful side effects.

But there is more. I have helped researchers who are looking at the impact of handwriting on literacy skills. There is now quite a lot of new data that indicates handwriting has a powerful and positive impact on reading. Moreover well-taught cursive writing is faster and more efficient than printing, and will consequently have a greater long-term effect on the student's performance in school.

A recent article in the Wall Street Journal summarized some of the results and quoted a professor at Indiana University. "It seems there is something really important about manually manipulating and drawing out two-dimensional things we see all the time," says Karin Harman James, assistant professor of psychology and neuroscience at Indiana University who led the study.

Quite simply our brains do better with the opportunity to both say and write letters and words. Improving brain function is the most critical reason for adding well delivered handwriting training, including cursive, to the curricula our children experience in their schools.

Spare the pencil and spoil the child! – Richard McManus, The Fluency Factory, 165 Beal St. Hingham

Supports balanced budget amendment

Why are we so surprised that our country is on the verge of a loan default? This debt and deficit has been a burgeoning problem for a few decades now.

It was never given much attention this past election season and given the reckless spending by our government, inadequate tax code and corporate loopholes each party should take full responsibility and blame. The fact is we as a nation have been irresponsible consumers and keepers of our books renders us all culpable. A balanced budget amendment should be a law and set an example that our nation is a discerning and responsible creditor. $14 trillion in debt and growing with no end in sight the national debt is weighing this economy down and has serious implications for the United States remaining a leader in the free world economy. Are we going to pass the ball and try to let our children deal with this potentially ruining the very dreams that make this country the sought after place it is?

I would like to see a national referendum on a balanced budget amendment and timeline for bringing our national debt down to what may be deemed a responsible number given our GDP and country's tax revenue.

We as a people need to come together and demand that this is done regardless of party affiliation or ideology. Cut spending and increase revenue by closing loopholes in the corporate tax code and reforming the tax on the wealthiest Americans so all of us are responsible for our proportionate fair share of taxes. – John Nestel, 132 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

Relay For Life support appreciated

As the co-chairs of this year's American Cancer Society Relay For Life of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate we would like to extend our sincere appreciation to the many individuals that attended and supported this year's event at the Cohasset High School. More than 200 people participated, helping to raise more than $62,000 for the Society's fight for every birthday, threatened by every cancer, here and throughout the world. While the current economic climate continues to make fundraising more challenging for everybody, we are continually inspired by the dedication of all of our fellow volunteers who have redoubled their efforts to ensure this year's success.

Relay For Life supports the Society's critical mission to save lives and create a world with less cancer and more birthdays by helping people stay well, by preventing cancer or detecting it early; get well, by being in their corner through every step of their cancer experience; by finding cures, through groundbreaking research and treatment discoveries; and by fighting back, through influencing public policy. The outstanding support received at Relay proves that the Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate communities are truly committed to the fight against cancer.

We were honored to be joined by 45 survivors who participated in the opening lap and survivor reception. These survivors are the reason we continue the fight. Their participation inspires hope in those currently battling cancer.

A special thanks to the many Relay For Life volunteers who worked to make this event a success – celebrating the lives of those who have battled cancer, remembering loved ones lost, and pledging to fight back against the disease. The Relay For Life committee did an outstanding job of putting the event together, including Harry St. Onge, Craig Bleicken, Jacqui Vitello, Tricia Cifrino, Jen Piepenbrink, Lauren Koncious, Lisa Laporie, Julie Laugelle, Deanna Boyle, Kristyn Stevens, Beverly Asnault, Marcella Hoehn, Jeri Herman and Robin Teauge.

We also appreciate the generosity of our sponsors Wicked Local and the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Again, thank you for supporting the American Cancer Society, and remember it's not too late to turn in any outstanding donations to support this year's event, and never too early to get involved to help us plan for next year!

Pond bottom gets special treatment

Meeting House Pond — Over the past week the contractor was able to compact the new clay bottom of the pond. Then, a soils engineer was engaged to conduct a test to make sure that the bottom clay was adequately compacted. This week we received our engineer's approval of the test results so that the pond is ready to be filled. But, now lets back up a bit and talk about some additional work that was done after the pond was emptied, but before it was compacted.

Actually, before the pond was emptied we knew that the pond was losing some water. Small depressions appeared in the pond bottom near the edge of the pond. When the pond was drained, as the photo shows, there were several holes around the perimeter of the pond. Since the pond had never been completely compacted, apparently the pond water found "soft spots" in the bottom where it could find a pathway downward out of the pond.

The engineers along with the contractor put their heads together and did some exploratory digging as shown in the second photo. Essentially, what you see in the second photo is the sidewall of the pond. The new sidewall rests on a concrete footer that extends about a foot beyond the wall and serves as the foundation for the new wall. It turned out that the leaking holes were at the interior edge of the footer. The subsoils in this part of town are very gravelly, and readily allow water to drain through it. Thus, any leaking pond water had an excellent path to drain through the gravelly soil. Rather than risk a reoccurrence of this leaking after the pond was compacted and refilled the engineers decided that an additional "ounce of prevention" was necessary.

The solution was very interesting: A 10-foot wide thick rubber membrane was procured by the contractor. The membrane was glued to the horizontal surface of the footer with a special adhesive. Then it was run down the face of the footer to the bottom of the trench visible in the photo. Finally the membrane was run along the bottom of the trench, up the interior side of the trench and approximately five feet further over the pond floor. Then the trench was backfilled over the membrane. Lastly, the clay bottom of the pond was re-laid from the new pond wall to the center of the pond and properly compacted. So, essentially what was done is, like on a roofing job, the edge of the pond was flashed to avoid any potential leaking at the joint of the wall and floor. It is important to note that all of this work was accomplished within the original budget for the pond reconstruction. So, by the time you read this the pond should be filled.

Cohasset paving this summer —We have received notes and calls from several asking why there has been no apparent progress on paving some of the roads that are in need of attention, especially since we mentioned it some time ago. It's not that we lost sight of it. Cohasset just didn't have the money. Here's why. The funds to do this paving come from the Commonwealth via the Town's annual Chapter 90 allocation. (Chapter 90 funds are an annual fund allocation from the Commonwealth to each town. These funds are to be used "for maintaining, repairing, improving and constructing town and county ways and bridges which qualify under the State Aid Highway Guidelines adopted by the Public Works Commission.") New funds can only be released after the beginning of the Commonwealth's fiscal year that begins July 1st. So prior to July 1, no funds were available. Thus, we couldn't' even make any commitments to pave, since that is illegal. Rest assured we are now making plans with the paving contractor to schedule and begin this work at the earliest opportunity. It should be complete with in the next 60 days.

Revitalization, Phase III —If you have been around Cohasset since 2005, you may remember the project that refreshed the central parts of the Village on South Main Street, Brook and Elm streets and Depot Court. Over a two-year period these areas had their drainage structures reconstructed, the sidewalks totally rebuilt and widened, granite curbing was added, the road was were reconstructed and numerous visual features to enhance the appearance of the area were added. Most residents expressed to us that it was a significant improvement over what was there before. This was accomplished via two Public Works Economic Development (PWED) grants from the Commonwealth. This type of grant is for projects that will improve economic development in the area designated by the project. The net goal is to improve jobs in the area and by encouraging additional development, which should increase the real-estate tax base.

In September, Cohasset will be applying for another PWED grant for a Phase III Revitalization project in order to improve adjacent commercial areas. Our focus will be focused on four principal needs:

1) Adding parking spaces

2) Add improvements to the Town Parking Lot to encourage development along the rear of South Main St., as well as add visual and aesthetic improvements to the lot

3) Improve the pedestrian and vehicular safety of the Depot Court / Ripley Road / Pleasant St. intersection

4) Add improvements similar to those from South Main St. to the Ripley Road business district and better link this area to the rest of the commercial area

Over the next several weeks, as space permits, we will be talking a bit more about these plans.

HEALTH NOTES

Physical health and exercise

STEVE BOBO

All physical exercise is healthful. But what exercise is best? Suppose body physiques were capable of being changed to make it more adaptable; that all muscles should have appropriate strength for a person's habitual tasks. Simple: Do what you want to do. If you agree that exercise is healthy, then select the exercise you like.

The benefits of exercise have been known since antiquity. Marcus Cicero, around 65 BC, stated: "It is exercise alone that supports the spirits, and keeps the mind in vigor." However, the link between physical health and exercise (or lack of it) was only discovered in 1949 and reported in 1953 by a team led by Jerry Morris who noted that men of similar social class and occupation (bus conductors versus bus drivers) had markedly different rates of heart attacks, depending on the level of exercise they got. Bus drivers had a sedentary occupation and a higher incidence of heart disease, while bus conductors were forced to move continually and had a lower incidence of heart disease.

Physical fitness is generally achieved through correct nutrition, exercise, and enough rest. In previous years, fitness was commonly defined as the capacity to carry out the day's activities without undue fatigue. However, as automation increased leisure time, changes in lifestyles following the industrial revolution rendered this definition insufficient These days, physical fitness is considered a measure of the body's ability to function efficiently and effectively in work and leisure activities; to be healthy within ones range of activities. It also prevents many chronic health conditions brought on by unhealthy lifestyle or aging. Working also helps people sleep better and stay healthy.

"Categories of Exercise," Paige Waehner, July 15, 2011: Low impact exercise is often recommended for people who can't or don't want to do high intensity exercise – to help you burn calories and lose weight as well as high impact moves.

Trying to lose weight, getting to about 65 percent to 85 percent of max heart rate, is important for burning calories; easier when you're jumping around. For some, high impact exercise isn't an option because of injuries in the joints, bones or connective tissue; chronic problems like arthritis, osteoporosis or stress fractures, overweight – or if you're just beginning. While it's important to have some type of impact for healthy bones, you don't necessarily have to jump around to get an intense workout. Many low impact exercises; one foot always in contact with the ground, can get your heart rate into your target heart rate zone but you may have to work a little harder.

If you've ever added running into your walking workouts or tried some jump roping for the first time in years, you probably noticed how high your heart rate shoots up. But, if you can't or don't want to do high impact exercises, there are some alternatives. The following are just a few of the most popular low impact activities along with some tricks for getting the most our of your workouts.

Walking is by far the most popular low impact exercise, but in order to get your heart rate up, you may need to:

• Walk faster. One mistake we often make is walking too slowly to get the heart rate up. Picking up the pace can help you up the intensity of your workouts. Holding weights as you walk can cause injury; consider using walking poles as an alternative. Try interval training; adding short bursts of speed or an occasional steep hill to your walking workouts, you can increase the intensity of your workouts as well as your calorie-burn.

• Mix things up. If walking is your sole source of cardio; cross-train with other activities to keep your body challenged. Walking is something we do every day and, therefore, we're very good at it. Learning something you're not as adept at can be a great boost to your endurance – and fat loss.

Walking up stairs can be an incredibly intense workout and a great way to get your heart rate up. If you're a beginner, try adding a few minutes of stair climbing to your usual workout or hop on the stepmill at the gym for a quick 5 minutes toward the end of your workout. You'll find you don't have to go very fast to get your heart rate up.

Hiking can be another tough low impact activity, especially if you're hiking up an incline. The changing terrain requires a lot of work from the lower body and walking up a mountain involves the large muscles of the glutes, hips and thighs – exactly what you want for an intense cardio workout. Add a backpack and you're burning even more calories.

Step aerobics can be a great alternative if you like choreographed exercise but don't want the pounding of hi/lo aerobics. Because you're stepping onto an elevated platform, you can typically get your heart rate up without doing any jumping. Using the arms can add more intensity the workout as well. Cathe Friedrich is just one video instructor who offers low impact workouts for the more advanced exerciser such as Low Impact Circuit, Low Impact Step and Low Max Step. You can also try group fitness classes or other more advanced videos that may include high impact and modify the workout to keep it low.

Other alternatives that have no impact but still offer high intensity workouts like cycling, swimming, cross-country skiing, rowing. Any of these activities can be intense if you work hard, but you may also want to cross-train with impact activities to keep your body challenged in different ways.

The key to doing low impact exercise is to work harder by involving your entire body. Try some of these ideas for making your workouts more intense:

• Add upper body movements. Upper body moves can contribute to your overall intensity so think of swinging your arms when you walk, raising the arms overhead during step or other types of aerobics.

• Go faster. Picking up the pace, whether walking or cycling is another way to make your workouts a little tougher.

• Most cardio exercises involve the lower body, but you can add intensity without impact by doing things like squats or lunges to get the legs involved.

FOR THE RECORD

Reflecting on the last 10 years

"Where were you when the world stopped turning on that September day?"

The lyrics from country singer Alan Jackson are as relevant today as they were when he released that song back in November of 2001, just months after the terrorist attacks that changed the world.

As we approach the 10-year anniversary of Sept. 11, 2001, we plan to use our newspapers and websites to reflect on what has happened over the last 10 years — both good and sad.

While we know many of the local families who had direct connections with the events of Sept. 11, 2001, there's probably a lot we don't know about the local impact of that day.

That's where we could use your help.

Beyond your own personal story of where you were on that fateful day, please let us know if you or your family has any stories to share as they relate to Sept. 11, and the years that followed.

For instance, we know of the many brave men and women who joined the service following 9/11 to fight in the war against terrorism.

GREGORY MATHIS

Many have gone and come back to share their stories, while some have not returned and we have told their stories through their families' eyes.

We know of a Rockland mother and daughter who went to war together recently in the wake of 9/11. Marilyn Gonzalez's brother-in-law was working in the World Trade Center that day and was killed. Her daughter, Jessica Pedraza, was 10 at the time, but the attacks left a lasting impression. Jessica and Marilyn both signed up to serve in the Army National Guard and were sent to Iraq in January 2010.

Christie Coombs, an Abington resident, has been much more than a spokesman for the local victims of 9/11. Christie's husband Jeffrey was killed on American Airlines Flight 11 that day. Christie has spent the last 10 years working with families who lost loved ones in the attacks through the Jeffrey Coombs Foundation. Since November 2001, the foundation has distributed more than $275,000.

There has been a lot of sadness, but also a lot of good that has come of the tragic events of Sept. 11, 2001. If the attacks showed the worst of humanity, the effort to rebuild — not only structures, but lives — has shown the best of people.

As we plan our coverage of the 10th remembrance of Sept. 11, we're interested in your stories. How has your life changed? What impact has 9/11 had on your life? Please send us an email and we may include your story in one of our articles, or perhaps we'll run what you send in the newspaper or on our website.

You can go to your Wicked Local website and look for the reader callout asking for 9/11 stories, or simply email your story to me and I will make sure it gets to the proper person.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Carillon recitals on two more Sundays

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife Grace stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

The 87th annual Summer Recital Series continues each Sunday until August 14 at 6 p.m.

• Aug 7: Lee Cobb (Lake Wales, Fla.)

• Aug 14: Jonathan Lehrer (Cambridge, Mass.)

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

SENIOR SCENE

Join us for lots of laughter

LOUISE S. MULLEN

When we gather to break bread together we have a good time.

It's been pretty quiet at the Senior Center, with exercise classes, line dancing, and seminars suspended for the summer months. However, lunch is still served on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of each week. It is a good deal for only $2.50 a plate.

When we gather to break bread together we have a good time. Some of us don't see so well, some are hard of hearing; some have stiff joints and some use canes or walkers. When we get together these things are put aside, and we enjoy reminiscing about the old days, sharing life's stories, bragging about our children and grandchildren, talking about the economy and other news of the day. Best of all there is laughter – lots of it, which I understand, is good for one's health and well-being. Why not join us? Remember, those in their 60s and on up would be most welcome. Just call the Center to make your reservation.

In July the Seniors were invited to a complimentary lunch at Allerton House. After lunch we adjourned to the music room where we listened to tunes played on the piano by Lynda Chuckran. Then we played "Name that Tune" with several prizes being awarded.

The following week Cohasset joined other surrounding towns for a barbecue at Glastonbury Abbey. This is an annual affair and enjoyed by all.

Trudy Salerno has lined up tour trips for the coming season. The first is Tuesday, Aug. 16, the Viva L'Italia show at the Aqua Turf restaurant in Plantsville, Conn. This includes a family style five-course meal. Next, on Sept. 26, enjoy a guided tour of Fenway Park and lunch at the Venezia Restaurant. Then on Oct. 17, lunch at the Branscom Lodge atop Mt. Greylock and a guided tour of the Hancock Shaker Village. This would be a good opportunity to see New England's fall foliage in all its splendor. The last trip takes place on Dec. 2, when we can enjoy a Blithwold Christmas Experience and witness a dazzling Christmas display. Then we will savor a holiday feast at Federal Hill in Providence. Don't they all sound exciting?

It is so disappointing when a trip is cancelled because we don't have enough people to just about fill the tour bus. So speak to your friends and get together to sign up. Just call Trudy at 78-383-9112 for more information and to make your reservation. There is also more information in the Cohasset VISTA.

Creating a Straits Pond Preserve

JUDETH VAN HAMM

I would like to ask you to hold a vision of an 8-acre Straits Pond Preserve as part of the Weir River Estuary Park.

We are asking the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) to purchase an undeveloped 2 acres owned by the Lofchie family to help create the Straits Pond Preserve. During the coming week, Jim Comeau of the DCR's Acquisition Division is making a site visit to evaluate the land. Staff from The Trustees of Reservations, Massachusetts Audubon and Coastal Zone Management is helping assess the property's challenges and opportunities.

The Lofchie land is adjacent to the 6-acre "Straits Pond Island," a peninsula with a tail bordering the pond. The "Island" was recently received by Hull for back taxes and voted by Town Meeting to be put under conservation. Together the two parcels would create the 8-acre Straits Pond Preserve. Most of the Straits Pond Preserve would be within the Weir River Estuary Area of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC).

The Straits Pond Preserve would be part of over two miles of almost continuous protected habitat along the Estuary in Hull ending to the west with the Weir River Woods across from World's End. Scientist E.O Wilson has documented that the larger the protected area, the more species it supports. Over 100 species of birds use the Weir River Estuary either for nesting or migrating.

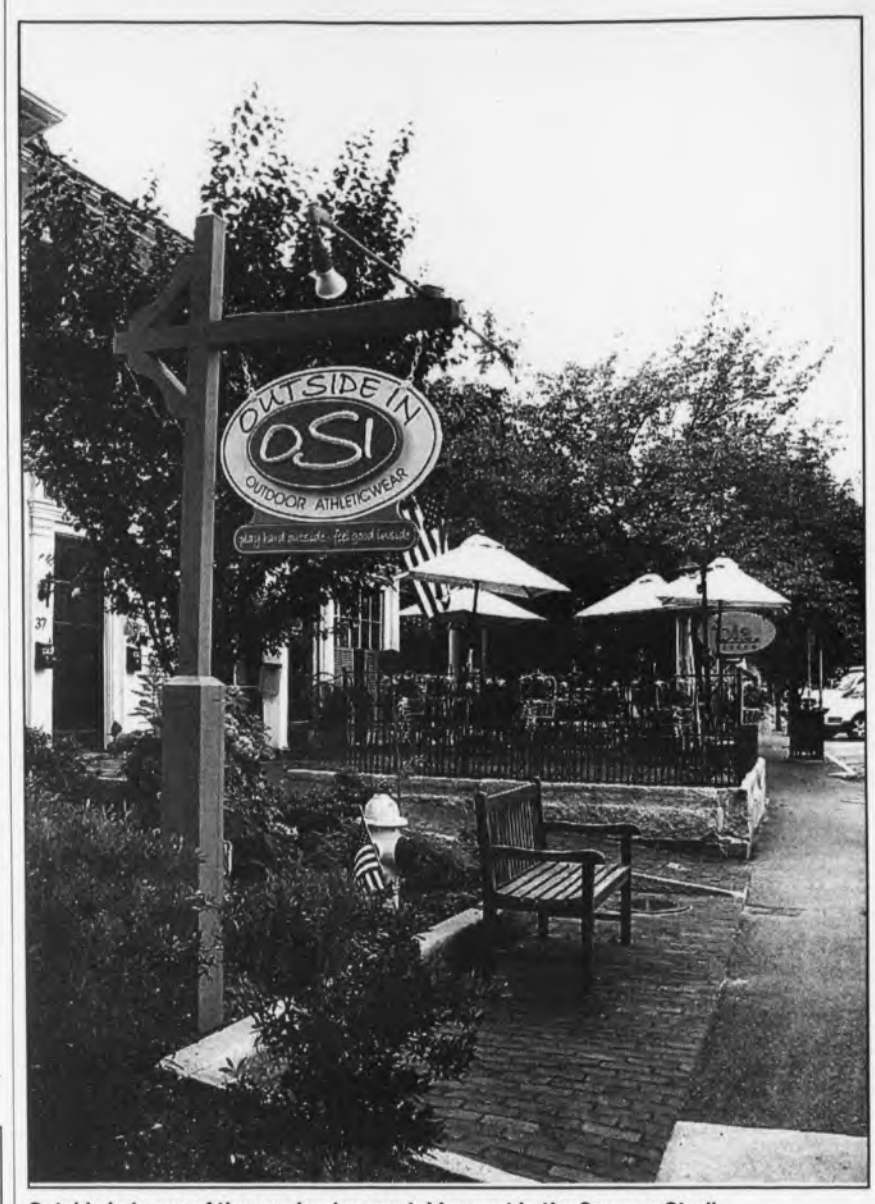
We are working on developing a vision of Straits Pond as a Waterfowl Viewing Park as part of the larger Weir River Estuary Park, with a walking loop around the Pond and signage along the way. Sally Avery, well known Cohasset birdwatcher, has been leading bird walks around the Pond for many years for the Straits Pond Watershed Association. A Cohasset Eagle Scout candidate is planning signs about birds and viewing locations to be placed near the West Corner tide gate and at the Winsor conservation area in Hull at the east end of the Pond.

Acquiring the Lofchie property would create the possibility of a trail along this preserved land from Richards Road to Eastman Road to complete the walking loop. I expect the trail would be lightly used similar to use of the trails at the Weir River Woods, creating a balance of caring visitors and wildlife habitat.

Protecting the Preserve will complement the efforts to restore Straits Pond's water habitat. The new West Corner bridge and tide gate have made the 90-acre Straits Pond the Commonwealth's largest water habitat restoration project. We are witnessing the return of fish and shellfish, which in turn improves the habitat for birds.

If the land is purchased by DCR, it would be given to the Town of Hull. Hull Town Meeting voted to accept the land in 2004 when DCR had funds to purchase four parcels in Hull and Hingham for the Estuary Park. After the vote, the highest priority parcel at the bridge on George Washington Boulevard suddenly came up for sale, leaving the Lofchie property off the list. The Lofchie family, who had prepared a subdivision plan for the land, has been waiting since 2004 for the Hull Land Conservation Trust to find a way to protect the land. Recently Sue Lofchie, who lived in the house abutting the land, has moved to another home in Hull. Thus, the land is for sale. We are grateful that Sue and her brother Butch Lofchie hope that the DCR purchase will be a way to protect the land.

For more information, please go to www.HullLandConservationTrust.org



Thank you for holding a vision of an 8-acre Straits Pond Preserve. I believe that thoughts are powerful and that when people hold the same thought, it amplifies the thought's power.

Rock Tour

Outcroppings of 600-million-year-old puddingstone on the Lofchie property are part of the fascinating geology of Straits Pond. Join us for a Rock Tour around the Pond with geologists Declan DePaor and Carol Simpson starting at the Estuary Center, 333 George Washington Boulevard, at 9 a.m. on Saturday, August 6.

Celebrate summer with a stroll

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Summer is going strong in Cohasset Village, and next Thursday afternoon, some of the town's best businesses will be getting in on all the fun. Whether you're new to Cohasset or a long-time resident, the Summer Village Stroll is a great time to roam around the Village and see what's new.

This year marks the Summer Stroll's third. Starting at 4 p.m. on Thursday, August 11, folks can browse the sidewalk sale, indulge in face painting, scurry through a scavenger hunt, and groove to the sounds of Jackson Wetherbee playing live on the Common.

The scavenger hunt is one way the Chamber of Commerce hopes to encourage folks to explore each store; it's also a fun activity for the kids. The hunt begins at the Chamber's table in front of St. Stephen's. Once the hunt is completed, strollers can head over to the Red Lion Inn for a raffle.

"We're hoping for a good flow of people to come relax and celebrate summer," said Darilynn Evans, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. Her store, Darilynn's, will offer starfish decorating for the kids and wine tasting for the adults.

Amie Theriault of Santi Holistic Healing is an officer in the Chamber of Commerce. During the Stroll, Santi will hand out a discount coupon and perhaps raffle a chair massage, as they've done during past Strolls.

"For kids, we'll have a coin toss," said Theriault. Santi's activities and table will probably be "set up next to French Memories."

Evans is hoping to see strollers show their support for Village shops both old and new. A few new establishments have popped up, including Bumble Bee Landing Floral, Mangia Neopolitan Pizza and athletic apparel store Outside In, which opened in February and is joining in its first Summer Stroll.

"Cohasset is the perfect spot," Tracy Cameron of Outside In said of opening her store in the Village this past winter. "It's a fun town, and people are so active — running, biking, triathlons, going to the beach... People have been very responsive; they're happy to support local businesses here."

Outside In plans to have an electrolyte cooler and protein bar samples, since "we try to be healthy!" said Cameron.

Speaking of healthy, strollers can also weave their way over to the Farmers Market, which is open from 2 to 6 p.m.

"Not everyone who attends the Farmers Market also attends the Stroll, and vice versa," said Evans. She is hoping that this year, visitors will take advantage of both.

If you join in the Stroll, look for the balloons to see which shops are onboard — participating businesses will have them on their storefronts.

Strolling along

The following participants will offer tables, refreshments and entertainment during this year's festivities:

- 5 South Main
- All the Best
- Bia
- Darilynn's
- Focus Gallery
- French Memories
- JJ's
- Outside In
- Paperscapes
- Pink Tulip
- Ports
- Santi Holistic Healing
- South Shore Music Circus
- The Red Lion Inn
- Twist

And more!

Mangia's Neopolitan Pizza sets up shop in the Village

Once the Stroll wraps up at 7 p.m., patrons can head over to Mangia's, which opened for business last month. While the new pizza place isn't part of this year's Stroll, owner John Allen was happy to open a branch in Cohasset.

"Locals enjoy our pizza," said Allen. "We've made deliveries out to Sandy Beach, all over Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate."

So far, Mangia's most popular pizzas are the Tuscany, an all-vegetarian option "very popular with the older folks," and the Buffalo Joe, which the "younger crowd" favors.

Allen warns that those who want try to Mangia's gourmet pizza should call ahead on Friday nights.

"The wait can be up to an hour — it's very popular," he said. "We make each pizza by hand." Luckily, Cohasset patrons are willing to wait for good pizza.

"They've been very understanding of the wait and patient as we're going through our growing pains," said Allen.

ing sites so that potential clients know just how much they'll save by selling their wares through Cbay). The remaining 40 percent is divided between Filbey (10 percent) and his chosen charity, Wellspring in Hull (30 percent).

"I see it as a win-win-win situation," said Filbey.

Monica McKenney, development director at Wellspring, called Filbey "a young entrepreneur who also has this philanthropic ideal," adding, "It's a wonderful thing to see a college student giving back."

Filbey takes his clipboard, equipped with its own calculator, to clients' homes and has them fill out an official form with their contact information and description of the item being sold, including its price. He also uses his own state-of-the-art camera to photograph the item for the online listing.

"I research on eBay and Amazon to see how much the item will sell for," Filbey said, though he tends to list goods on Craigslist "since it's free to list; otherwise the client pays seller fees." Craigslist also requires less shipping, as buyers tend to be local, and "packaging takes a long time."

Cbay, launched on July 7, 2011, was over two years in the making — it's taken that long for Filbey to cut through the red tape of the charity registration process.

"Mike's been talking about Cbay for a long time but got caught up in the bureaucracy," Suzanne said. "But it's been a great learning lesson."

"You have to be a limited liability company before you can be a professional fundraiser," said Filbey. "I did a lot of paperwork and research on non-profits, filling out legal forms during finals. I made a hundred phone calls and probably wrote 200 emails."

Filbey did have some help meeting the financial requirements (see sidebar) for setting up his business—a grant from the University of Wisconsin's Entrepreneurial Residential Learning Community (ERLC) called the Dream Big Award.

"I've gotten everything from a septic insinkerator to Louis Vuitton bags. It's quite the contrast."
Michael Filbey

Cbay by the numbers

$500 to register as an LLC
$450 to the Attorney General's Office
$25,000 charity bond (purchased for $250)
$1,500 Dream Big grant
$2,830 profit
$1,029 raised for charity

The $1,500 grant is "what made it all possible," said Filbey. "So far nothing's come out of my own pocket. I couldn't have done it without the grant... It was much more work than I thought!"

So far, all of the hard work has paid off nicely. In less than a month's time, Cbay has already made $2,830: $1,029 of which has gone to Wellspring. The folks who work there are grateful for the help.

"I'm very impressed with Michael's perseverance," said McKenney, the development director at Wellspring. "I know how hard it is to raise money."

Filbey's donated funds have been a boon for the organization. "We help a lot of people," said McKenney. "In these trying economic times, these types of services are needed even more."

Filbey said that he's "more excited about tallying the Wellspring total" every time he makes a sale. "It's a great local multi-service nonprofit," he said.

With Cbay, McKenney said, "We've had a wonderful situation. One seller even donated his profits back to Wellspring."

Filbey got involved with Wellspring after hearing about it from his mom, who instilled Filbey with charitable values from childhood.

"I always felt that, in life, you have to give back and remember that not everyone lives the way people do in Cohasset," said Suzanne.

So far, Filbey is off to a good start. But how does the Business/Psychology double major plan to keep up with Cbay when he heads back to school?

"I have a couple people in mind to see if they'll volunteer — drive around, do the shipping, take pictures of the items at seller's houses," said Filbey. Meanwhile, he plans to do all the listing and billing from his dorm in Wisconsin. "Worst-case scenario, I'll pick it up again in the spring, but I want to keep it going the whole year. There's a lot of momentum right now, and I'd hate to kill it."

Could Cbay be the next big online charity vehicle? Filbey seems to hope so.

"I'm really hoping it can keep going and expand," Filbey said. "I think it's pretty scalable; there's not much like it."

Of her enterprising son, Suzanne said, "I'm just amazed...He's really done so much on his own; he just went up one day and did a website!"

"I love having the ability to give back and am happy at making a difference," said Filbey. Not to mention, "I get the experience of starting a small business."

McKenney added, "And helping people!"

Pilgrim Bank announces board elections

Pilgrim Bank announces that local residents George W. Ellinger, Phillip A. Lehr, and Christopher J. Haggerty have recently been elected to the Board of Corporators , the governing body of Conahasset Bancshares, MHC, the bank's Mutual Holding Company. They were chosen because of their long-standing relationships with the Bank and their commitment to the community.

"Pilgrim Bank is fortunate to have Corporators comprised of such dedicated members of the community," says Frank Campbell, President and CEO of Pilgrim Bank. "The way the bank is structured ensures that local residents have a voice in the future direction of the Bank and a vote that ensures that the best interest of our depositors is represented."

"The way the bank is structured ensures that local residents have a voice in the future direction of the Bank and a vote that ensures that the best interest of our depositors is represented."
Frank Campbell, President and CEO

The Board of Directors of the bank and holding company also recently re-elected three directors for a new three-year term - Cohasset residents Melissa J. Browne, and Brian W. Noonan and Scituate resident J. Michael Buckley. These dedicated directors have been members of the Board for several years.

Founded in 1916, Pilgrim Bank is committed to giving local residents the best banking value around. The Bank formed its holding company in 2010 As a mutual institution, holding company is owned by its customers, not by stockholders, which allows it to remain focused on superior level of customer service. The commitment to quality is what is known as the "Pilgrim Difference." Pilgrim Bank has two branches in Cohasset and one in Marion, Mass. For more information visit www.bankpilgrim.com.

EXTRA in YOUR NEWSPAPER

NAME: Connor Bagby
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Senior
STATS: A potent attackman for the Rams, Bagby scored 30 goals to go along with 42 assists (72 points) this spring. The three-time Atlantic Coast League all-star finishes his high school lacrosse career with 96 goals, 117 assists, and 213 points (number three all-time at MHS).

NAME: Derek McInnis
SCHOOL: Hingham
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Kept opponents off the scoreboard while averaging more than 15 saves per game. A Patriot League All-Star, McInnis is also an outstanding goalie for the hockey team.

EXTRA in YOUR NEWSPAPER

NAME: Ty Martina
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Senior
STATS: One of the top middies on the South Shore, Martina capped off his senior season in style, scoring 53 goals and adding 28 assists. But the most impressive stat from this Atlantic Coast League all-star - he won nearly 75 percent of his draws on the faceoff.

NAME: Brad Prouty
SCHOOL: Norwell
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Prouty could do it all. He led the team in ground balls (150, also a school record) and finished third in points (49). The South Shore League all-star had one of the best shooting percentages on the team and averaged nearly two points per game.

NAME: Kevin Blair
SCHOOL: Hingham
YEAR: Junior
STATS: Outstanding scorer netted more than 100 points while helping Hingham to the MIAA Tournament. Was Hingham's offensive MVP, All-American and Patriot League All-Star. Also plays basketball for the Harbormen.

NAME: Tim Driscoll
SCHOOL: Hingham
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Had 29 goals and 34 helpers while dominating on the draw. Had more than 150 ground balls to lead the Harbormen. Also a hockey star and natural leader. Coach John Todd called Driscoll "One of the most tenacious, hard-working lacrosse players I've ever had," and a "throwback player."

NAME: Joe Ricciutti
SCHOOL: Norwell
YEAR: Junior
STATS: Ricciutti paced a powerful Norwell offense. The junior South Shore League all-star finished as one of the team's top three scorers, netting nearly 30 goals. In Norwell's 4-3 overtime win over Barnstable in early May, Ricciutti scored three of the team's four goals, including the game-winner in OT.

NAME: Alex Kinnealey
SCHOOL: Cohasset
YEAR: Senior
STATS: The senior midfielder and faceoff specialist was a huge key in Cohasset's offense. Kinnealey won 85 percent of his faceoffs. Kinnealey is also an outstanding wrestler and football player.

NAME: Thomas Flibotte
SCHOOL: Cohasset
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Flibotte notched 75 points for Cohasset and was named All-American for the second straight season. One of the best and most creative shooters in the area, Flibotte is also a football and wrestling star.

NAME: Will Contento
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Teams rarely beat Will Contento, and when they did, the Rams' goalie made them work for their goals. Contento's great vision and quick stick skills kept Marshfield's unbeaten streak rolling this year.

NAME: Tucker Ciessau
SCHOOL: Scituate
YEAR: Sophomore
STATS: The sophomore worked tirelessly on his game in the offseason and the work paid off with a 98-point season that included 80 goals to help Scituate back to the playoffs after missing a season. Also plays golf and hockey.

NAME: John Powers
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Senior
STATS: A big reason the Rams had their best season ever was the play of John Powers. Battling injuries throughout the season, Powers managed to finish as the Rams' top scorer with 63 goals, 42 assists, and 105 points. Only two other lacrosse players in MHS history have passed 100 points in a season.

NAME: Matt Dromeshauser
SCHOOL: Norwell
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Coming off an injury that sidelined him for nearly one-quarter of the season, Drom finished the season as the team leader in both goals (36) and points (50). The South Shore League all-star had one of the best shooting percentages on the team.

NAME: Patrick Hannigan
SCHOOL: Hanover
YEAR: Junior
STATS: A lockdown defender, Hannigan is generally tasked with defending opponent's top offensive player. Is always up for the task. A two-time Patriot League All-Star.

CRANBERRY LEAGUE

Adapting to changing times

Musial Tournament in progress

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

There is no middle-age spread, because the Cranberry Baseball League is 52 years old and growing strong.

The league has provided some of the best local baseball on the South Shore in its time. In fact the motto for the league on its website is: "Excellence in Amateur Baseball Since 1960."

CBL President Joe Paolucci feels that the league is headed in the right direction.

"I think things are moving in the right direction with the League," said Paolucci. "The caliber of baseball is phenomenal. We have some top-notch players that are in the middle of solid collegiate careers and we have players like Frank Curreri and John Folino that are former professionals.

"We have put a lot of good things in place over the past five years. The annual All Star Game, the Open Tryout, and our Hall of Fame banquet have all really shined a bright light on the league. I'm happy where we are at now

AMERICAN LEGION BASEBALL

Wrapping up a great season

Post 118 makes historic run

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

A wrap up of an American Legion team at this time of the year in this area means in most cases that it was a successful year for that team.

That applies to Cohasset Post 118, which possibly had its best season in history.

Post 118 secured its first win in the Zone 6 playoffs, but they also made it to the Final Eight State Tournament for the first time when they defeated Braintree in their sectional at Braintree.

The good news for Cohasset is that it might be the start of something big for them. They will only graduate three players from their big season.

"We are looking pretty solid for a couple of years," said Cohasset general manager Scott Arnold. "We can pretty much pick up where we left off. We were all thinking about it as coaches during a rain delay. We were talking about that in a game that was delayed against Morrissette. We were talking about how much talent we have. The

GOLF NOTES

Midsummer full of notes and quotes

PAUL HARBER

This is the best time of summer. Mid-summer. The last major is a couple of weeks away, every day is hot and the golf courses are in their best condition. That means the fairways are harder and our low, screeching, thinly hit drives roll another 10 yards. Here are some notes as you wait for Tiger's return to the PGA Tour this week. And, as the eminent golfologist Dr. Mark Devereaux once observed, "the older you get, they better a player you use to be."

A pair of aces

It's not a case of being competitive, but rather a case of whatever you can do, I can do, too.

Sue and Mike Curtin are diehard golfers and members of the Boston Golf Club in Hingham. They have a combined handicap of 9.8, despite that fact that he has an thriving insurance career and she has two young chidren.

Sue won several club championships at Thorny Lea in Brockton before joining the Boston Club and she worked for the Massachusetts Golf Association, the Ouimet Fund, and was executive director of the New England Golf Course Owners Associations over the years.

Well, two years ago both scored holes in one just four days apart.

Then this year, Sue was playing in the Boston Golf Club's Two-Day Invitational when she knocked a 6-iron into the hole from 148 yards for an ace. Two days later – on Father's Day – Mike aced the eighth hole at the Boston Golf Club, using a 6-iron from 190 yards out.

On the way out the door before his round Mike told Sue, "Well, I'm just gonna have to make a hole in one."

Ouimet tourney

Several local golfers did well at the Ouimet Memorial tournament last week. Reigning State Amateur champion Ryan Riley was one of four tied at 212 after three rounds, but lost in a playoff to Indian Ridge's John Gilmartin. Herbie Aikens of Pinehills was sixth and Blue Hill's Chad Stump was tied for 16th. But the best performance was by the teenage phenom Meghan Khang, who plays out of the Harmon Club in Rockland and Pembroke CC, won the women's division, becoming the first women in the eight-year history of the event to break par, fashioning a 1-under 71 at Woodland Golf Club in Auburndale. She was consistent, hitting 16 of 18 greens on the way to victory. Isabel Southard of Harmon Club was second at 72. Two years ago as an 11-year-old, Khang made her debut at the Ouimet and lost in a playoff and she missed last year's tourney due to a conflict with a national event. On Friday, Khang returned and had to overcome a double-bogey on the second hole before recording a 2-under 34 on the back nine to fend off Southard, her friend and chief local junior rival.

"We've seen some sensational golf in the women's division in recent years," said Bob Donovan, executive director of the Ouimet Fund. "It's been unbelievably impressive how well these young girls can play and post the kind of scores that they put up these days. It's a good time for the game of golf locally for the women. Megan has a bright future. She's so gifted, and so determined."

There's no rest for Khang. She and her family are in Fort Wayne, Ind., where she will compete in this week's Junior PGA Championship. She is also the first alternate for next month's U.S. Women's Amateur at Rhode Island Country Club where her odds are very good of getting into that tournament as a local qualifier.

Riley is ready

Speaking of Riley, don't be surprised if he regains the State Publinx championship this week at South Shore Country Club in Hingham. The 2009 champion played a practice round at South Shore last week and felt comfortable.

"My game is in great shape right now," Riley told reporters. "I played a practice round [at South Shore Country Club] a few days ago and I really like the layout. A key to South Shore will be keeping your approach on the correct side of the pins."

Course management was indeed a major key to Riley's huge victory last month at Wyantenuck Country Club. He was able to maneuver around the challenging layout on the way to his second state title this year. Could three be a charm?

GOLFERS OF THE WEEK

John & Mary Mulcahy, Hatherly Country Club

John and Mary Mulcahy did not realize they won the 2011 Massachusetts Father & Daughter junior title title until they were at the scorer's table after playing their round at Red Tail Golf Club in Devens.

The Hatherly Country Club pair finished with a final score of 4-over par 76 to win their second straight title by a single stroke.

"I didn't play well, but Mary played well so I can't complain," said John. "I really had trouble hitting my sand wedges and getting them to the green, but I am happy that we won."

Although John relied on Mary's accuracy and power off the tee and her clutch short game, John came through when it was most needed.

Standing in the fairway on the 411-yard, par 5 18th hole, John had a 7-iron in his hand and was contemplating his next shot. Unfortunately, his eye couldn't stray from the water hazard located in the front of the green and his mind couldn't help but remember what transpired two years ago.

Competing in this event at Willowbend in 2009, John was in the fairway on the 18th hole when his 7-iron approach shot found the hazard. The Mulcahys ended up finishing second as a result of the ensuing bogey.

On this day in Devens, however, John was not to repeat history as he sent a beautiful 7-iron shot onto the green to 15 feet that set up a two-putt birdie. As it turned out, that birdie was the difference. Their margin of victory was just one stroke.

"I didn't know exactly where we stood, but I had that shot running through my mind," said John. "Somehow I got lucky and hit a good shot to 15 feet."

After winning the overall title last year with a score of 5-under par 66, the Mulcahys were the prohibitive favorites to win the junior division this summer. Through the first nine holes, however, the defending champions found themselves trailing by four strokes following a front-nine score of 5-over par 41. The duo was 4-over par through four holes before carding their first birdie on the 142-yard, par 3 5th hole when Mary drained a 15-foot birdie putt.

"I think that the greens were tough to get a feel for," said Mary, 17, the 2010 MIAA State Individual Girls Champion who advanced to the Round of 16 at the 2010 WGAM Amateur Championship. "The hardest part was getting a feel for how hard to hit putts."

Both Mary and John soon figured it out as they played 1-under par golf on the back nine with key birdies coming on the 402-yard, par 5 10th and 411-yard, par 5 18th holes.

This marks the third year that they have finished second or better in this MGA Championship.

A couple of contenders

Aikens is a threat at South Shore. The 29-year-old from Kingston has already accumulated a resume in 2011 that many would envy. He won the Massachusetts Four-Ball Championship in May, advanced to the Round of 16 at the 2011 U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship in June and most recently was medalist at 2011 U.S. Amateur Sectional Qualifying. Scott Congdon, 24, of Foxborough CC, could take the title. The 2009 graduate of Bryant University advanced to the Round of 16 at the 2011 Massachusetts Amateur Championship and then was the second top Massachusetts finisher at the 2011 New England Amateur Championship.

CRANBERRY

but I also have a vision of where I want us to be, and we aren't there yet."

The Cranberry League doesn't have a team in town, but has teams in nearby towns like Rockland, Weymouth, Plymouth, Braintree and Brockton.

Paolucci, who was a former player in the league, put together a strong Weymouth Phillies team over a decade ago. He has watched the league take its next step forward, but he has some concerns with development of collegiate leagues such NECBL and newly formed the Future Collegiate Baseball League of New England, which has one of its franchises (Martha's Vineyard) put together by Brockton Rox President Chris Carminucci.

"The future of the league definitely worries me a little bit," Paolucci said. "It could go a few different ways for us. With all of the new collegiate leagues popping up all over the place we are going to start losing some talented players. In fact, (former Plymouth North standout) Jordan Wylie who played for Plymouth last season was one of the best pitchers in our league. He signed with a team in the Futures League this year.

"The NECBL teams that are battling injuries are pulling players from us as well. We need to figure out a way to keep our players and compete with those leagues. Otherwise we could become an older league, in the 23-30 range. The way to keep these college kids around and to get the college coaches on board with us is to focus on having strong organizations with solid baseball people running them."

The league went through the process of being an "older league" before in the 1990's according to some coaches and lost some of the younger players to other leagues.

There is also the discussion of what is more important for the league as whole between having league playoffs or sending teams to the Stan Musial Tournament or having both take place in a season.

The league has had some great finishes in the national Stan Musial Tournament including the Braintree White Sox fourth-place finish and the Easton Huskies recently were the runners-up in the tournament.

"We also continue to look every year at the Musial Tournament vs. League Playoff," said Paolucci. "I know there are teams in our league that would like to do away with the Musials. However, we have two teams, the Braintree White Sox and the Easton Huskies, who live for the Musials. Since '06 we have had one of them make it to the Stan Musial World Series three times. The Huskies finished second in 2006 and the White Sox finished fourth last year. If we wavered from the Musials we might lose those organizations, and that would be a tough blow."

"The way to keep these college kids around and to get the college coaches on board with us is to focus on having strong organizations with solid baseball people running them."
CBL President Joe Paolucci

"My biggest concern is our franchises. We need strong people at the top of these organizations. Joe Reis is the President of the Rockland Cardinals. He runs that organization like a business. He cares about every aspect of the team from top to bottom and it is a year round job for him. P.J. Thompson with Braintree and Tony DeSilva with Middleboro are two other guys that work very hard at it. And of course Bob Wooster with Easton runs one of the best amateur baseball teams in the country. We have had three teams exit from the league over the past four seasons. Their leadership at the top wasn't strong and that's why they folded. So the focus needs to be on improving our individual organizations and making this league as strong as can be."

Another one of the problems for the league in its decision between the Musial Playoffs and/or have the league playoff is the time frame. There is the situation of having some of the local collegiate players complete their school year and join their respective CBL teams.

There is also the conflict with the high schools on some of the use of the field as the schools are wrapping up their seasons in the early part of the season and the Musial Tournament's start has been pushed back in July because of the date for the National Tournament.

"The CBL Playoffs has been very difficult over the years to stabilize because of a variety of factors," said Paolucci. "We only have seven weeks to play our regular season because the Musial tournament starts on July 23rd. During that seven-week span I try to leave about a week in there where teams can make up games if there is a lot of rain.

"So, this year our playoff is going to be just a one-game championship between the top two finishers in the CBL. The winner will be the league champion for 2011. We will be sending five teams to the Musials this year. Braintree is hosting the North Atlantic tournament so they get an automatic bid. Traditionally, the winner of the MA/RI tourney comes out of the CBL so we are all looking forward to that this season."

The Musials started last with games in Braintree and Rockland.

The Weymouth Phillies and the Braintree White Sox are still playing.

Games are at Braintree High School and Rockland Stadium.

Paolucci likes the old school part of the league where people can go to their local field that houses a team and watch and enjoy a quality baseball game for nothing.

"The best thing about our league is that someone in Braintree can drive down to the high school and watch Frank Curreri and Ryan Morgan (two former minor leaguers) hit," Paolucci said. "Someone in Weymouth can go down and watch Nick DeVito, who is a 5-tool player in centerfield, and watch Brian Tanguay pitch. Residents of Rockland can go watch the Cardinals at Memorial Field which is the best field in Eastern Massachusetts. And it's all free. We aren't in this to make money like the collegiate leagues are. Nobody in our organization makes a dime. It's about the baseball. That was Connie Spillane's vision when he founded the league in 1960 and Louie DiTullio continues to oversee that model today."

The league will be inducting its Hall of Fame Class of 2011 in September at Weymouth Elks Hall.

"The CBL Hall of Fame banquet is set for Friday, September 16 at the Weymouth Elks," said Paolucci. "We are going to honor the Weymouth Elks teams of the 1980's. This year marks the 25th anniversary of the 1986 team that was the first Cranberry League team to go to the World Series. We will be inducting nine new members this season: Dickie Doyle, Bob Payzant, Bob DeChristopher, Ed Grueter, Steve Ferroli, Tom Thurberg, Jim McCulloch, and Gary Shuffrain.

"In addition, we will be presenting our most prestigious award, the Connie Spillane Award for Outstanding Contributions to Amateur Baseball, to Frank Niles.

Local Comedian and former CBL player Graig Murphy will be performing at the event and Main Street Grille in South Weymouth will be catering the Hall of Fame induction.

players were warming up on the field and it looked like a Norman Rockwell painting, because they were having fun. We were thinking about that this could go on for a long time."

The state tournament was tough for Cohasset, which fell in both of its games in the double-elimination tournament to Hudson and Gloucester.

However, the opportunity to reach the tournament was special according to Arnold, who said that it "opened my eyes to how hard it is to get there."

The team was constructed from a Cohasset team which was coming off its second straight Div. 4 State title and Scituate team that is annually in the post season.

The best part of the team was that everyone had a hand in the success of the team.

"Everyone had a part in it," said Arnold. "We were deep in every position.

"We put the team together in tryouts with the feeling that everyone who was on the team could provide us with some part of the game. There is nothing worse than a good athlete that is sitting on the bench and is not happy."

Post 118 needed all of its parts as they started the season without some the Cohasset players that were wrapping up the MIAA Tournament.

The good news is that they will have their starting pitchers back.

Chase Michaud, Casey Burns, Anders Goetz, Henry Lockwood and Jeff Cavanaro, will have a successful year under their belts in a staff that is eight deep.

"We got enough 15 and 16-year olds to put a feeder system together," said Arnold. "It would take the right person to run it. We had 18 talented players on the team that love to play baseball. They were the right players for the team at the right time. I have been watching these kids play for a while. They are serious players, who love to play the game."

They had to go without the players who went to Kentucky for their group to work on building houses for a week.

According to Arnold, Kyle Dauphine, Matt Sheehan and Pat Stewart are graduating and the rest of the team is eligible to come back.

THE ORDINARY ANGLER

Fly fishing in the middle of the night

JOE DANUBIO

The middle of the summer is the time of year when the temperatures are so inflated that it is unappealing to be out on the water during the daylight hours. The other disagreeable element is that the fish appear to perceive the conditions in a similar regard. As a result, both sides are disinterested. This usually leads to some extremely unproductive angling.

Depending on the climactic patterns which vary from year to year, it sometimes seems like a more prosperous idea to be chilling out in the comfort of air conditioning or participating in some of the numerous social engagements that spring up during the summer months. As much as I would prefer to direct or convince you otherwise by providing an unprecedented angling secret that leads you to an abundance of fiery weather fish, taking a short break form the water and firing up the grill for a few burgers and dogs may be my best fishing tip during the season of unrelenting heat.

Earlier in the year I recommended angling for largemouth bass in the evening and just after dark. My only advice during this time of the summer is to embrace an opportunity to fly fish for largemouth bass in the middle of the night after midnight and until 3 a.m.

The humidity and heat often possess an ability and tendency to manufacture merciless insomnia. It has been stated by many from the beginning of time that if you cannot sleep, you may as well do something productive. The difficulty here is that if you are handcuffed by the man and need to arise every morning for work, angling in the middle of the night might not be a suitable idea. The weekend or any other opportunity void of obligations related to work or family on the following day might be a more practical time to surrender to the idea of allowing that fly rod and line to combat its slumber and do its swanky dance while the rest of the world in your adjacent time zones are counting the sheep.

One strategic manner in which to approach such an engagement is to plan it in conjunction with the lunar cycles. The prime fishing time during a full or new moon always seems to fall around midnight on the night of the new or full moon. The day or two to follow will also align well with the best feeding times for the fish from midnight to three am. The secondary benefit is the illumination provided by a bright moon overhead. On a quiet still night with a light breeze, this angling environment can provide a relaxing peaceful bliss, even on a fishless night.

On a good night it is possible to pull in a couple of lunkers that erupted from the deeper cooler water cruising for an easy meal in the shallows. The best approach during the warmest portions of the summer is to work the bottom contours with a weighted fly and slow retrieve. I find that if a lighter fly without dumbbell eyes or a wire core is allowed to descend slowly over a period of thirty or forty seconds, the bass will often hammer it even on its gradual descent to the bottom prior to the initiation of a retrieve.

If your work or family obligations afford you an opportunity to toss your waders on and initiate the pendulous cadence of your fly rod and line frolicking under the moonlight in the middle of a lake or pond in the middle of the night with the owls and bats, get out there and see what you can produce from it. Just be cautious that you do not catch one of those bats, because they will make attempts at gobbling your fly as it performs its tantalizing oscillation through the air.

If this type of engagement does not suit your schedule or life responsibilities, don't lose any sleep over it. Even in the middle of the night, productive angling is an arduous mission during this time of year that is enhanced only by enduring patience.

A summer social engagement, regardless of the magnitude of the dread that you may feel in response to the perceived obligation to attend another family cookout or work outing to score a few points with the boss that you could do without but respect that power and ability to give or not give you that raise you are seeking, may well be a bit less frustrating than a perspiration filled affair on the water with a great possibility of little or even nothing to show for it. Some nights you may have a better shot at catching the bat in the air before the lunker in the water.

SEMI PRO FOOTBALL

A labor of love

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

He experienced an NFL work stoppage firsthand. A standout with the Eastern Football League's Marlboro Shamrocks, Bill Turner played for the Patriots during the NFL strike in 1987. " I played two games, went up to coach Raymond Berry and said, " I'm going to miss the Houston game and play in the EFL championship. I don't owe you guys anything. I owe those guys everything," said Turner, now the defensive coordinator of the EFL's Bay State Bucs, who play their home games at Bridgewater-Raynham Regional High. EFL meets NFL? Not these days.

For the past 38 years, Peter O'Kane has been involved in a football world far removed from the land of the NFL. "I'm just happy to be involved in semipro football," said O'Kane, the owner-general manager of the EFL Randolph Oilers prior to last Friday night's game with the Buccaneers at B-R. "The guys give up work and buy their own equipment. They do it all for the love of the game."

Garrett Perry, owner-offensive lineman, of the highly successful Middleboro Cobras echoes O'Kane's sentiments. "I hope this won't come out as a negative," said Perry, who has been with the Cobras for 24 years. "I've spent my entire adult life surrounded by adults who work a job all day and then come to practice and play at night. It's a labor of love. Any labor situations involving sports make me shake my head."

There aren't any problems surrounding a collective bargaining agreement in the EFL. Lockout? Just open the gates, place the ball on a kicking tee and blow the whistle.

Bill Turner's father, Bob, the current head coach of the Bay State Bucs, has been a lifelong football fan. "I'm kind of disappointed in the whole mess," the elder Turner said. "Owners in the EFL like Peter O'Kane and Garrett Perry work very hard. Getting people to run the concession stands and sell tickets isn't easy.'"

The elder Turner also has something he'd like to say to the area's football fans."You go to an EFL game and it's exciting," said Turner, who guided the Taunton Gladiators to the league title a year ago. "These teams are very good. Taunton, Middleboro and the Bay State Bucs. They play on great fields in the local communities. You pay six or seven dollars to get in and two bucks for a hot dog. You can't beat that."

So if you are a football fan looking for outstanding football at affordable prices look no further than your local EFL franchise that plays in Quincy, Braintree, Bridgewater-Raynham, Middleboro or Taunton. The Randolph Oilers are playing all games away this season as the Randolph High football field is being upgraded to an artificial surface. Games are usually held each Friday or Saturday evening until mid September.

Help the Food Pantry

Do you have a garden? Fresh vegetables may be left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m.

Other needs include coffee, juice, clam chowder, corned beef hash, mayonnaise, jelly/jam, canned fruit , spaghetti sauce, applesauce, maple syrup, cereal, dish and laundry detergent, toothpaste/toothbrushes and bar soap.

Donations can be dropped off at the rear entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays, at Stop & Shop or at local churches on Sundays. Donations may also be left at the St. Anthony Parish Center, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3.m.

To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call.

Sweet Relief Preschool Enrichment Program

Sweet Relief, an early education learning center in Cohasset announces the launch of its new, Preschool Enrichment Program. The program is open to all preschool-age children, age 3 and older, residing in Cohasset and surrounding communities. Registration is now open for fall 2011 enrollment.

The Preschool Enrichment Program will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on Mondays and Fridays, beginning in September, and will include science, music and the incorporation of a reading specialist and a yoga instructor. In addition, the program will include outdoor activities and community involvement. Students will be given the tools and resources to combine their classroom lessons with hands-on learning opportunities; stimulating the senses and encompassing the elements of playing to learn. Lessons are reinforced and integrated using arts and crafts, music and books.

The Preschool Enrichment Program at Sweet Relief is designed to supplement the student's current preschool experience – working to enhance the curriculum they are following in their various preschool classrooms. Its purpose is to expose students to a broader, deeper level of pre-kindergarten enrichment, provide the opportunity for students to experience more classroom time and receive additional social and academic development opportunities.

Sweet Relief is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care is insured and is led by owner and director, Lyn Congdon Previte, holding more than 20 years experience in early childhood education. Working alongside Previte in the Preschool Enrichment classroom is current Sweet Relief teacher's assistant, Ashley Allen, yoga instructor, Kim Spires, and reading specialist, Amy Linnell.

Allen holds a bachelor's degree in elementary education with a minor in child psychology and has been the assistant at Sweet Relief for the past year and half. Yoga instructor, Spires, is also part of the Sweet Relief Preschool Enrichment Program team. She is founder of the South Shore kid's yoga program Inspire Kids Yoga and has been a certified instructor for more than six years. Spires is the current yoga and fitness director for Sweet Relief's nursery and preschool classrooms. Reading specialist, Linnell, holds a master's degree in science in special education, pre-K through ninth grade. Linnell is certified in both reading programs Orton-Gillingham and Project Read and is a special education teacher and reading specialist.

"We are delighted to bring our new Preschool Enrichment Program to families in our South Shore communities. We are committed to providing an environment in which students can advance their academic, social and personal development through this unique supplemental classroom experience. We have an exceptionally talented staff that is excited to be an integral part of this special program," said Previte.

Space is limited in the Preschool Enrichment Program and enrollment is currently underway for the 2011-2012 school year.

In addition to the Preschool Enrichment Program, Sweet Relief also offers its morning Toddler Program for students age 20 months through 2.9 years from 8:30 a.m. to noon, on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays; and afternoon Nursery Program for students age 2.9 through 4 years from noon to 3 p.m., on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Applications for both programs are also currently being accepted.

For more information, or to have an information brochure sent, call Previte at 781-383-9723 or email sweetrelief143@aol.com. Sweet Relief is at 38 Summer St., Cohasset, Massachusetts. Visit the Sweet Relief website at www.sweetreliefcohasset.com.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Music is the common denominator

EVE MONTAGUE

Music affords all of us an opportunity to work on non-musical goals – we learn to socialize, communicate, move our bodies, breathe, manage our pain and express ourselves – all through the inherent structure of music.

Imagine the child reaching up to play chimes along with the piano independently, despite the diagnosis of cerebral palsy. Imagine the grandmother with dementia singing "In the Good Old Summertime" without any hint of forgetfulness or confusion. Imagine the young teen singing hello and shaking hands with his peers regardless of the diagnosis of autism. Imagine the chorus of adults performing at the State House, singing Beethoven, Bennett and the Beatles, even though they had lived in state institutions for most of their lives.

Music is the common denominator in all these cases – a powerful tool that is available to every person no matter the age or ability. As a board-certified music therapist, I am trained to find creative ways to use music to help people achieve greater independence, control and satisfaction in their lives. Music affords all of us an opportunity to work on non-musical goals – we learn to socialize, communicate, move our bodies, breathe, manage our pain and express ourselves – all through the inherent structure of music.

At South Shore Conservatory we provide direct service to individuals across the age continuum. As the Music Therapy Department chair, I assess, plan and implement treatment based on individual needs. Music therapy interventions can be designed to fit into a child's Individual Education Plan, helping to strengthen skills being learned in other settings. I work with occupation, physical, and speech and language therapists, as well as special education teachers to be sure there is consistency in learning across all settings.

Older people as well benefit from using music to help them reminisce, relax and respond to music and activities. There is nothing more amazing to me than seeing an individual with Parkinson's disease play a drum in steady beat and sing along with smooth voice – or when a nonverbal person living with Alzheimer's begins to sing an old familiar tune with me – this is the power of music at work.

Music has a place in everyone's life. From early intervention to hospice and bereavement support, music therapy can be designed for each unique person. Students of all abilities study privately at SSC, learning an applied instrument. I work with our teachers to help identify optimal learning strategies for those who may learn differently. That may mean that the music needs to written differently, the instrument needs to be adapted for easier access or the environment needs to be structured to minimize distraction and optimize learning. This too is music therapy.

Music therapy is portable and services can be provided at SSC or in the community. Individual, small group or large groups can be designed based on need and interest. SSC Community Voices, a chorus for adults and young adults with developmental disabilities, will be starting up again on Sept. 14 and is open to all those interested.

Music therapy is a degreed, allied health profession with national certification. To discuss music therapy and the potential benefits for someone you know, feel free to contact me at e.montague@ssc-music.org or call 781-934-2731, ext. 20.

Eve Montague MT-BC is a board certified music therapist, working for more than 23 years with both children and adults in educational and vocational settings. Chair of the Conservatory's Music Therapy Department, she is skilled in instrument adaptation and modification, as well as adapted technology and access.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 15, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You sometimes go to extremes to prove a point. But this time, you won't have to. Supporters are ready, falling over themselves to help you make your case.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Venus might be your ruling planet, but Mars is in the picture as well. So don't be surprised if your romantic relationships are a bit rocky at this time. But they'll soon smooth over.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Geminis might rush into romance and risk being wrong about someone rather than be left with no one. But this is one time when it's wiser to be wary of where your heart takes you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) With all (or most) of those pesky problems behind you, take time for your family and friends. Travel aspects are favored, with long-distance journeys high on the list.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might have started to question the wisdom of being open with someone you hoped you could trust. But be assured you won't be disappointed. You'll soon hear good news.

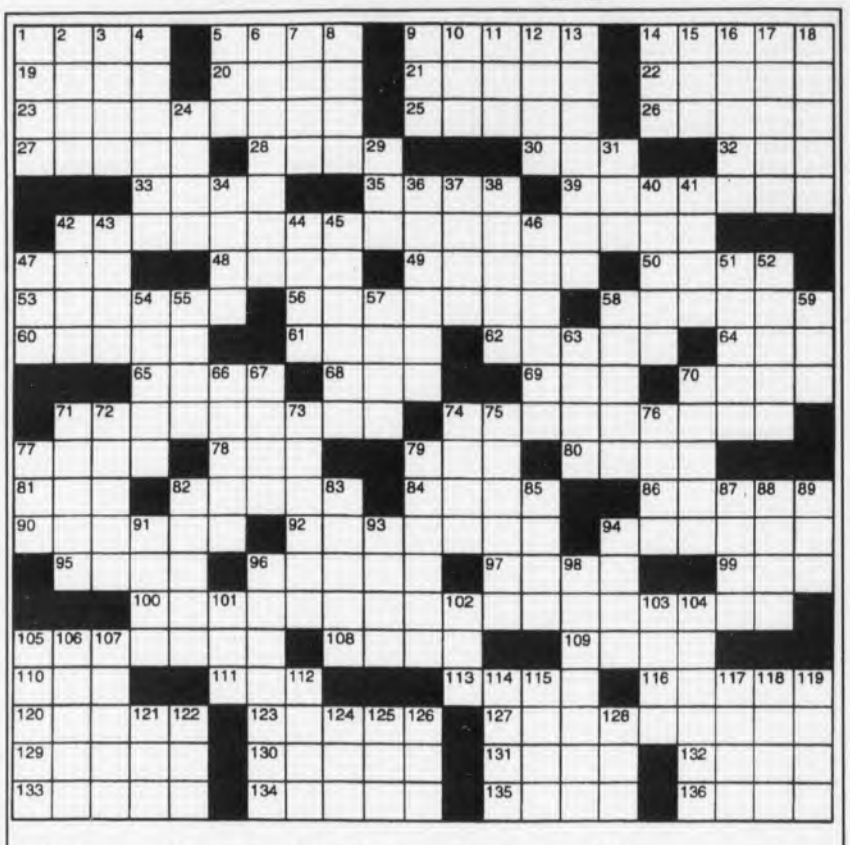
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You have a reputation for honesty and integrity, and that will help turn around a situation that was not only disappointing but also quite unfair. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A happy event creates a closer tie with a family member who seemed hopelessly estranged. Positive aspects also dominate in important career matters.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ruling planet, Pluto, helps you adjust to change. So, stop putting off that long-delayed move, and make it with the assurance that you're doing the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You have a wonderful capacity to learn quickly and well. This will help you when you are faced with an opportunity to move on to a new path in life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: You suddenly find that you're not facing that new challenge alone. You now have someone at your side, ready to offer whatever support you might need.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your versatility — which is just one of those aspects of yourself that make you so special — helps you adapt to the challenges of a new and exciting opportunity.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sensitive nature picks up on the needs of others. But what about your desires? You need to take more time to assess what your goals are and, if necessary, redirect them.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You give your trust openly and easily. People find you easy to be with and enjoy your wit, your good sense, and your capacity to love and be loved.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

EF HOME STAY PROGRAM

Slice of Italy right here in Cohasset

By Linda Fechter

This article is not about another new Italian restaurant opening in Cohasset, it's about 35 unique and wonderful students from Italy who have added a bit of Italian flavor to this small New England town. On July 19th a bus pulled up to St. Anthony's Parish House and thus began a three-week adventure for the students and the 30 local families who welcomed them into their homes. It's all part of the EF (Education First) Home Stay Program. This is the 2nd year that Cohasset has participated. This time around the amount of students and host families is significantly smaller than last Summer and the rewards of having such an intimate group are bigger for both students and the families.

"Last year we had nearly 90 students from three countries," says Anna Smith, Homestay Coordinator for the Cohasset Program. "This experience is better all around — the smaller numbers allow all of us to do more with the kids, and gives our teachers a chance to get to know each student."

Most of the Italian teenagers, ranging in age from 14-19, are from Novara, Italy, outside of Milan. Nearly all are classmates at the same school in their home city. Their teachers, Lucia Devanna and Cluadia Gulli accompanied them here and are being hosted by Anna and Mike Abbruzzese.

While in Cohasset the students go to "school" at St. Anthony's Parish House where they are taught by Site Coordinator, Stephanie Noble, along with Stephanie Granda. Their lessons include a sampling of American culture and history. Each afternoon, after class, a bus takes the students for an excursion; they've been everywhere from Newbury Street to Newport, R.I. Their first activity was a fun scavenger hunt around Cohasset that gave them an introduction to local people, businesses and lore. Last weekend was spent in New York City where they met other EF students from Spain, China and France. Evenings are spent with their host families....there are many great stories to tell.

The following families have generously opened their homes for this program: Barbara and George Baumgarten; Sarah Peacock and Tom Clay; Sean and Christine Cunning; Renate and Bill Devin; Lisa and Mark Dunne; Selene and Doug Eymer; Catherine and John Harvey; Linda and Michael Fechter; Lorraine and Mark Healy; Stephanie Peabody-Hudson and Brian Hudson; Diane and Patrick Kennedy; Lori and Conrad Langenhagen; Pamela and Todd Marshman; Katie and John Naples; Heather and Malcolm Nichols; Stephanie and Howard Noble; Suzie and John Montgomery; Gitte and Rick Shea; Anna and Matt Smith; Martin and Maria Osborne; Dr. Roger and Ann Pompeo; Deb and Scott Robbins; Susan and Michael Sardina; Mary and Hugh Sease; Lilly and Joe Sestito; Eva and Filip Trulsson; Tracey and Jerry Vainisi; Tracey Merrill and Eric Wellman; Barbara and Greg Wipf; and Susan and Andrew Willard.

The Marshman Family is host to Alice Airoldi.

"We learned that Alice loves blueberries so we went blueberry picking in Scituate," says Pam Marshman. "We made blueberry desserts, blueberry pancakes and ate blueberries with every meal! She's a great cook. She even made us a lobster dinner with pasta she brought from Italy."

Christine Cunning and her family are hosts to "Ludovica," who is fondly referred to as "Lulu."

"My favorite expression she uses when given a choice, is her very polite 'It's the same for me.' That's much more charming than our 'It doesn't matter to me.' I may even start adopting the idiom for myself," says Cunning.

Lulu came here with twin sister Adelaide who is staying with Diane Kennedy and her family. The Kennedy and Cunning families took the Mossina twins to see the Red Sox this week.

"The girls high-fived one another as they walked onto the "hallowed" ground at Fenway Park," recalls Diane Kennedy. "Even these Italian sisters felt the magic of the Park. David Ortiz hit a grand slam just for them that night and the Sox beat the Royals 12-5."

A highlight of the American baseball experience was the "peanut boy" throwing the peanuts into the stands. Luckily Lulu is a good catch, as she grabbed the pack sent her way just before it hit the person seated in front of them in the head.

The Peabody-Hudson family is host to Beatrice and another Ludovica — the only two students from a separate region of Italy...Padova, which is very close to Venice.

"They have worked extra hard to learn the English language and to make new friends from their homeland," says Stephanie Peabody-Hudson. "They are courageous, bright, radiant, appreciative and funny. Our family is blessed in the opportunity to host 'Bea' and 'Lud.'"

Dinner has become an "event," with most host families having to slow down and cook together and talk in a way that has become ever more challenging in American culture. Peabody-Hudson calls dinners "more spirited and laughter-filled celebrations." The most popular and memorable foods fed to these Italian men and women seems to be "lobsta," corn on the cob, ice-cream, hamburgers, and yes, even pizza, and lots of it.

This year's students have all come prepared with their Italian family recipes. Mark and Lisa Dunne are hosts to Matteo Rossetti. The family is enjoying the Italian influence on their lifestyle.

"Matteo made the most delicious Risotto a la Milanese," says Lisa, "I'm so happy to have a reason to eat slowly and remain at the table even after we've eaten, rather than finishing and rushing off somewhere. We've been enjoying the time together. Matteo can also drive a standard transmission better than most American adults."

My own family is host to Sofia Bobbio who has proven that humor and laughter transcend language barriers. From my awful attempt to learn the Italian she is so patiently teaching me, to the music and phrases that our kids are teaching her, there's always something to make us laugh. One night Sofia taught us to make "American Pizza." I envisioned a pizza made with the healthiest and freshest ingredients. Then she explained that "American Pizza" is topped with tomato sauce from a can, sliced HOT DOGS, and FRENCH FRIES...frozen, store-bought french fries! So that's what we made..it's a favorite at take out pizzerias back in her city.

As for activities, the students seem to have integrated into American family life. At "home" Playing Wii, specifically the "Just Dance, Dance" game has proven that music is universal. Host families have also spent a lot of time introducing their students to new experiences like boating and fishing and playing baseball. The Fechter family is grateful to the staff at CMI for allowing Sofia to not only see a scull for the first time, but to actually row with a crew. It's just one example of so many that show how this small town has rolled out the welcome mat.

On Saturday, the students return home to Italy. There are sure to be tears — the EF program has created friendships and experiences that will last a lifetime.

"Our student will forever be an Italian sister to our kids. We LOVE this program," says Pam Marshman.

WORSHIP NOTES

Summer Worship at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us in this exploration on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday our summer schedule continues. We will have services at 7am and 9am instead of the usual 8am and 10am. The 7am service is at Sandy Beach in Cohasset. This wonderful service takes place with the gorgeous ocean backdrop and is truly a highlight of the summer. Our 9am service takes place in the church as usual.

Also, this Sunday, the 87th Annual Summer Carillon Concert Series continues. Come out to the Cohasset Common and listen to the Cohasset Carillon, beginning at 6pm. Our guest carillonneur this week is Lee Cobb, a carillonneur from Florida.

During the summer, our normal Godly Play and youth programs do not meet, but they will pick back up again when school begins in the fall. Instead, our more relaxed summer children's program, which meets at 9am on Sundays, is working on projects to help those in need in the surrounding community.

AA now meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Please call the church office at (781) 383-1083 or visit ststephenscohasset .org for more information.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Betty I. Jenkins

COHASSET – Betty I. (Brown) Jenkins of Cohasset formerly of Yarmouth, Scituate, and Harrison, ME passed away at South Shore Hospital on July 30, 2011 after a lengthy illness.

She was the wife of the late Lt. Cmdr. Ret. John K. Jenkins. She is survived by two daughters; Terri Donohue and husband Tom of Pembroke, and Luanne Brady and husband Richard of Auburn; four sons; John J. of Harrison, ME, Glenn P. of Scituate, Paul K. and his wife Lisa of Hull, and Peter E. and his wife Christene of Harrison, ME; two sisters; Jean Berry of Yarmouthport, and Doris Pratt of Abington. She is also survived by 15 grandchildren; one great-grandson and a daughter in-law; Carol Jenkins of Scituate. She is predeceased by her daughter, Cindy L. Rodriguez.

Betty was very involved in the Cape Cod chapter of the Special Olympics and a member of the Retired Officer Wives Association. In her spare time she enjoyed cooking, reading, and traveling. Betty also enjoyed quilting. She hand stitched quilts for all of her children and grandchildren. She was a very loving, caring, and giving person who will be greatly missed by all.

Visitation was held at the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Rd., Scituate on Wednesday, Aug. 3 at 8:30 a.m. followed by a Mass of Christian burial in St. Mary of the Nativity Church, Scituate at 10 a.m. Burial will be in MA National Cemetery, Bourne at 12:45 p.m.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Cape Cod Special Olympics, 805 West Main St., Hyannis Port, MA 02601.

OPINION

Are we still refusing to look in the mirror? We have run up debt and deficits for decades and the blame lands squarely on both parties. Reckless spending, not paying down debt when we had a surplus and a tax code that needs a major overhaul. We need more tax revenue and constraints, which should be shared fairly.

WOODSIDE CEMETERY

Families disagree over placement of markers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When a loved one is laid to rest, most families wouldn't dream of moving them from their final resting place. But once in a while, especially in older cemeteries, overcrowding becomes an issue, and markers must be moved. And while the bodies remain buried, the newly moved headstones don't always end up where they were originally intended to go; and sometimes, it turns out that the stones were placed on the wrong spot in the beginning.

This seems to be an ongoing issue at Woodside Cemetery, where at least one family's headstone is currently blocking another's. The marker in question, the headstone of Kenneth Jason, was placed in line with the Rose family's stones, and then moved forward at the Roses' request. However, a field survey conducted by the town revealed that Rose family stones are over the plot line.

Since the town first asked the Jason family to have their stone moved, both families involved have sought the counsel of the Board of Selectmen to find an agreeable solution. The issue was raised at the July 26 Selectmen's meeting; so far, the Board has agreed to take a look at the stones with representatives from each family present.

Both the Roses and the Jasons have purchased a number of plots at Woodside over the years. Both families seem willing to cooperate with one another, the Department of Public Works, and the Board of Selectmen to reach the best possible solution.

It all started when a headstone for Kenneth Jason was placed in line with the Rose family's markers at Woodside in 2008. The Rose family

DEP INVOLVED IN

Cat Dam

ConCom decision has been appealed

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Cat Dam is back in the news.

The Conservation Commission's decision to approve the Notice of Intent that set up a new flushing schedule for inner Little Harbor has been appealed to the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Former selectman Karen Quigley of 27 Clayspring Road, and about 21other residents signed the appeal asking the DEP for a superseding order of conditions for the operation and maintenance of Cat Dam.

The DEP has accepted the appeal and a site visit is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 1 at 2pm.

This is the latest chapter in an ongoing saga for Cat Dam — a tide gate mechanism with three gates — that has been used to control the water flow for more than 100 years off Nichols Road at the entrance to inner Little Harbor.

The Conservation Commission voted 4-0 on Monday (July 25) to approve the NOI (Notice of Intent) for the operation of Cat Dam, supported by the Environmental-20, a powerful group of abutters to inner Little Harbor who believed their quality of life and property values were at stake. A NOI application is a presentation of information to the Conservation Commission for which the commission is

WHAT'S GOING ON HERE?

Free child safety seat installation

What:
Free child safety seat installation/instruction service at the Cohasset Police Station.

Why:
Motor vehicle crashes are the number one killer of children ages 2-14.
Children need to be in the right restraint for their size and age. Studies have shown that children ages 2-5 who are moved to safety belts too early are four times more likely to sustain a serious head injury than those restrained in booster seats.
In a traffic crash, the shoulder strap of a safety belt will hit a child shorter than 4 ft. 9 ins. across the neck or face rather than the chest, and there is also a greater risk of internal injury because an adult belt hits across the child's stomach rather than his/her lap. These children need a booster seat — which raises them up so that adult safety belts fit over their chests and hips properly — and protects them in the event of a crash.

Guidelines:
- Use rear-facing infant seats in the back seat from birth to at least two years of age, or the highest weight limit of the seat, usually 30 lbs.;
- NEVER place a rear facing infant seat in front of an airbag
- Use forward-facing or convertible child seats in the back seat from age two and above to about age four and 40 pounds;
- Use booster seats in the back seat from about age four to at least age eight — unless the child is 57 inches or taller;
- Use safety belts in the back seat at age eight or older, or taller than 57 inches. All children age 12 or younger should ride in the back seat.
- Police can stop your vehicle if a child 12 or younger is not properly restrained.

Free service:
The Cohasset Police Department provides free child safety restraint installation service by appointment. Please contact child safety restraint technician, Sgt. Jeff Treanor at 781-383-1055. Treanor, who said it is preferable to bring the child along so the seat can be adjusted accordingly, suggests the parent bring something along to occupy the child during the installation.

Sergeant Jeff Treanor works with a local mother to make sure her baby is properly restrained. The free child safety seat installation/instruction service at the Cohasset Police Station has been going on since 2003. MARINER FILE PHOTO.

Aquarion calls for voluntary water conservation

In the event the water demand is not reduced immediately through voluntary measures, the Company will be forced to reduce the water demand through mandatory water restrictions.

Aquarion Water Company is asking customers in North Cohasset to voluntarily reduce their water consumption. The higher demands are due primarily to watering of lawns through irrigation systems.

The Company is requesting all customers with irrigation systems, both permanent and temporary, to use water wisely. This means limiting the use of an irrigation system to no more than two days per week, before 6 a.m. and after 6 p.m., and ensuring the system is operating properly.

For additional information and conservation tips call the Aquarion's Customer Service Department at 1-800-928-3734, or visit www.aquarionwater.com.

Drinking water violation explained

The following was provided by Aquarion Water Company:

Aquarion Water Company of Massachusetts that serves north Cohasset violated a drinking water standard. Although this was not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we did to correct this situation.

We routinely monitor your water for turbidity (cloudiness). This tells us whether we are effectively filtering the water supply. Normal turbidity levels at our treatment facility are 0.1 turbidity units (NTU) or less. Water samples taken on July 8, 2011 showed levels greater than 1.0 NTU. This was above the standard of 1.0 NTU. Because of these high levels of turbidity, there was an increased chance that the water may contain disease-causing organisms. Please note that we tested the water and found no indication of disease-causing organisms.

What should I do?

There is nothing you need to do. You do not need to boil your water or take any other actions. No contamination occurred during this event and none of our testing has shown disease-causing organisms in the drinking water. We reviewed this occurrence with MA DEP on July 8, 2011 and no further immediate action was required.

What does this mean?

This was not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified within 24 hours. Turbidity has no health effects. However, turbidity can interfere with disinfection and provide a medium for microbial growth. Turbidity may indicate the presence of disease causing organisms. These organisms include bacteria, viruses, and parasites, which can cause symptoms such as nausea, cramps, diarrhea, and associated headaches. Our testing found no such organisms in the water sent to your homes. These symptoms are not caused only by organisms in drinking water. If you experience any of these symptoms and they persist, you may want to seek medical advice.

A problem occurred with the treatment system at the water treatment facility located in Hingham. This was caused by an increased flow from one of our wells due to high demand for water.
Aquarion water company

What happened? What was done?

A problem occurred with the treatment system at the water treatment facility located in Hingham. This was caused by an increased flow from one of our wells due to high demand for water. The well contains high iron and manganese. The turbidity spikes were a result of the iron and manganese flowing through the filters. We were able to correct the flow and treatment issues that same day and bring the turbidity levels into compliance. Chlorine levels were monitored closely and were at acceptable levels. Additionally, samples were collected at the water treatment facility and within the distribution system and all were found negative for total coliform and e. coli.

'Lockdown' routine when suspicious person on site

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

In this case, the suspect was arrested and removed from school property. Drills are performed each year at all the schools for these types of occurrences.

At 9:55 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 5), officers responded to the Dunkin Donuts restaurant on Route 3A for a man throwing sandwiches at the restaurant windows. This 24-year-old, from Cohasset, was spotted walking on Sohier Street and ran into the woods at the sight of officers. The Deer Hill School, which was hosting summer camp, was ordered into lockdown as a precaution. All campers were brought inside.

Police said the suspect was observed walking in the driveway of the Deer Hill and was placed into custody without incident. He was upset over losing a black duffel bag in front of the restaurant. He was charged with disorderly conduct and vandalism to a building. He was transported to Quincy court for arraignment. The summer camp was allowed to resume normal activities.

The following day a caller asked police for information about the "incident at Deer Hill yesterday." Police explained that schools deemed to be at risk from an unknown person near school grounds are put in lockdown, keeping the children inside the school until the danger passes. In this case, the suspect was arrested and removed from school property. Drills are performed each year at all the schools for these types of occurrences.

Revoked license

At 1:19 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 1), the Hull Police Department called to report a resident of their town was operating a 2008 Toyota Camry toward Cohasset. The 86-year-old male operator's license was revoked due to a previous accident in Cohasset. Following that incident, police filed an immediate threat with the Registry of Motor Vehicles that revoked his license.

An officer on patrol observed this vehicle in the Super Stop & Shop parking lot. The owner was cited for operating after revocation of license. His 81-year-old wife, who was a passenger in the vehicle, was cited for allowing an unlicensed operator, as the vehicle was registered to her. She was allowed to drive the car home.

Paper plate

At 10:26 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 3), an officer on patrol on Ripley Road observed a 1995 black Chevy Blazer displaying a homemade, paper license plate. Queries of the registration showed the plate belonged on a white Chevy. (Homemade paper registrations are illegal; the R.M.V. does issue temporary plates for new vehicles, police said.) The 27-year-old operator, from Dorchester, is being summonsed to court for having an unregistered vehicle, an uninsured MV and attaching wrong license plates. The vehicle was towed.

Defective taillight

At 12:40 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 4), an officer on patrol observed a 1992 GMC pickup truck operating on South Main Street with a defective taillight. Queries of the registration indicated that it was revoked for no insurance. (All vehicles in Massachusetts are required to carry the minimum compulsory insurance. Failure to keep the policy paid up results in the registration being revoked, police said). The 29-year-old operator/owner, a Scituate man, is being summonsed to court for operating with suspended registration (subsequent offense); operating an uninsured motor vehicle and for an equipment violation (taillight); the truck was towed and impounded.

Revoked license

At 5:32 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 1), an officer on patrol observed an illegally parked vehicle on Border Street. While clearing the jumpers off the Mill Bridge, he queried the registration. The 28-year-old male registered owner, from Dorchester, had his license revoked for an out-of-state drunken-driving arrest. The man driving away matched the information in the officer's computer and the vehicle was stopped.

The operator was positively identified and was arrested for operating after revocation for drunken driving, police said. The vehicle was turned over to a licensed passenger. (Many states share information about out-of-state violations, including parking tickets, it is called reciprocity, police said.)

OUI arrest

At 11:08 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 4), an officer on patrol observed a man, who was unsteady on his feet, get into a 2003 Dodge pickup truck parked on South Main Street and drive toward Scituate. This same vehicle was swerving over the yellow line and was immediately stopped. The operator, a 54-year-old Scituate man, showed signs of intoxication, failed several field sobriety tests and was arrested. His vehicle was impounded and he was cited for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol; marked lanes violation; and operating a vehicle negligently so as to endanger.

Found property

• At 1:58 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 2), a Parker Avenue caller who reported finding two kayaks, a blue Ocean Cruiser and a Yellow Pursuit.

• At 7:51 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 2), a walk-in brought in two keys on a key chain, bankcard and Sanyo cell phone found on Atlantic Avenue.

• At 7:15 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 4) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, a caller picked up a briefcase and brought it to his business. The briefcase was returned to its owner, police said.

Car found

At 12:53 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 3), a 59-year-old Cohasset woman entered the police lobby to report her 2001 Mercedes had been stolen from her garage on Atlantic Avenue, while she was out for a bike ride. A B.O.L.O. (be on the lookout for) was sent out to surrounding communities and the vehicle and registration was entered in a national database for stolen vehicles. A short time later, the reporting party had discovered that the vehicle was left at her workplace in Hingham. All entries for the vehicle were cancelled.

Scooter

At 4:45 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 3), an officer on patrol observed a motorized scooter go through a red light at Pond Street and Route 3A. The operator, a 57-year-old Cohasset man, was given a verbal warning for the red light violation. (Scooters and mopeds must abide by the same vehicle laws as cars and trucks, police said.)

Window smashed

At 3:26 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 5), a 48-year-old resident from Deep Run reported that the driver's side window to her 2010 Subaru had been smashed out while parked in the driveway to her residence. Nothing had been taken, and it is undetermined how the window broke.

MUSIC CIRCUS

Banding together

Local musician to join Chicago in concert

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

For the first time in 20 years, Chicago is bringing its Windy City sounds to Cohasset. Joining the legendary band onstage is local music producer and performer Brian Stratton, who will team up with the group to play some hit tunes and fundraise for cancer. Chicago will be in the house at the South Shore Music Circus on Friday, August 19, and Stratton is thrilled to be singing along.

While singing with Chicago seems like a sweet gig, what's even sweeter is that the band is partnering with the American Cancer Society to raise money and awareness for breast cancer, donating the proceeds of their 2011 tour to the charity.

Stratton has also been involved with the American Cancer Society over the years. When he worked for Universal Music in the 1990s, he produced two compilation CDs called "Women for Women" that benefited breast cancer research. These albums, featuring the likes of Celine Dion, Sheryl Crow and Carole King, sold over 100,000 copies.

Stratton and Chicago go way back. The band appeared on a compilation album that Stratton produced in 2000 for Universal, the proceeds of which went to the Boston charity Stop Handgun Violence.

"I've been involved with the band over the years and am friendly with many of the members," Stratton said. "In the past when I worked with them, they were very giving, welcoming and generous individuals, from the management down to the musicians. I was happy to be brought back together with them for this event."

"In the past when I worked with them, they were very giving, welcoming and generous individuals, from the management down to the musicians. I was happy to be brought back together with them for this event."
Brian Stratton

Chicago, Stratton pointed out, is the second best-selling American band of all time in terms of singles and album charts, behind only the Beach Boys (who, coincidentally, are also performing at the Music Circus this summer, one week ahead of Chicago). The '70s era rock-and-roll band with horns last played the Music Circus in 1991.

While this is Stratton's first time singing onstage with Chicago (he will also join them for a show in New Hampshire), he's no stranger to performing at the Music Circus. Stratton, who worked a sub-contract producer for record companies Universal and Polygram starting in the early '90s, was also a touring musician with Hootie and the Blowfish "on and off for a series of three years in the early 2000s." And, more than once, the tour landed Stratton and the band in Cohasset.

"I played with Hootie and the Blowfish at the South Shore Music Circus because I produced some of their work and performed with them in the past," said Stratton. "It's a good gig."

The producer has remained friends with former lead singer Darius Rucker, who had a sold-out solo show at the Circus on June 25. Back when Hootie and the gang played Cohasset, Stratton joined them for golf at the Black Rock Country Club. Now, when Rucker's in town, Stratton offers him the use of his hideaway/rehearsal space by the beach.

When he's not producing albums or jamming with hit bands, Stratton explores other avenues to "stay in the business." Amid the changing tides of the music industry and the troublesome economic climate, the producer/musician has stayed afloat by managing bands, teaching a college course on the music business and music production, and playing shows with his own band, The Infractions.

"I'm very fortunate that I got in [the business] at the right time," said Stratton. "I'm lucky that this music is all I've ever done."

Stratton also feels fortunate "to join with Chicago in another charity endeavor," he said. "We've joined forces, and it's a nice feeling."

Those who wish to make a donation can do so through the American Cancer Society website (http://www.cancer.org/). Or they can just buy a ticket to the show — concertgoers will contribute to a worthy cause by simply showing up to hear Chicago.

Long after the Chicago concerts have ended, Stratton will continue his fundraising efforts through his own band. This fall, The Infractions will release— "You're the Love" and "Song for Susan" — and donate a portion of their proceeds to the American Cancer Society. These songs will be available for purchase on iTunes and Amazon.com. For details and release dates, see The Infractions page on Facebook.

Brian Stratton will be performing with Chicago at the South Shore Music Circus on August 19 to raise money for the American Cancer Society. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

For Michele, one of the greatest advances in cancer care has been the one on the South Shore.

When Michele needed treatment for breast cancer, she was thankful that she could receive world-renowned care at Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in clinical affiliation with South Shore Hospital. And she had confidence knowing that our specialists, focused on cancer, were providing the expert care she needed. But she also found something more: how important it was to be treated in a place that not only cared for her cancer, but also for her life.

"It's a place filled with hope," said Michele. And having all the integrated services she needed close to home helped her maintain a sense of normalcy through her treatments. "With two small kids, I don't know how I would have managed otherwise," she explained. "Having this level of cancer care on the South Shore — it means everything to me."

approached the DPW about having the Jason stone moved.

"They thought the stone that had been placed on the Jason grave was blocking the view of their stone," said Mary Snow of the DPW. "The owner of that stone kindly allowed the town to move it up a little bit to allow for a better view of the Rose stone."

In an April 2010 letter written to Snow, Kathleen Mansfield of the Jason family, who is also acting as Executrix and Power of Attorney for her late uncle Kenneth, said that the stone was first moved without her knowledge or consent.

Her cousin, Doris Small, said that Mansfield eventually agreed to the relocation.

"The Roses wanted Uncle Kenny's stone moved, and Kathleen was very obliging," said Small. "She was heartsick; she didn't want it moved. She didn't know why."

Complicating the issue, Small, Mansfield and other members of the Jason family believed "the Roses' stones are way off their lot, and have been for quite some time."

To accommodate the Rose family's request, the town moved the Jason stone forward by a few inches. Now, according to Small, the stone "is placed on top of where my father had been buried. The stone is across Uncle Kenny's neck, and he's a tall man. The marker stone is out of whack; it's all mixed up."

Small is especially frustrated because she feels that, when it comes to claiming plots in Woodside, her family was there first.

"Our plots were purchased in 1970," Small said. "We bought five plots and kept four open; Uncle Kenny bought five more."

The Rose family made a similar claim in a letter to the Board of Selectmen dated July 26, 2011: "In August of 1985, our father, Charles W. Rose, passed away. It was at that time that our family members purchased 16 lots in Section F at Woodside Cemetery."

Velma Begley of the Rose family explained their side of the story.

"A very large gravestone on Kenneth and Margaret Jason's grave was placed in line with my brother's grave," Begley said. "A town employee said a really big Jason stone was coming in that was a replica of the stone at Cohasset Harbor, about five feet across."

With the Jason stone in place, Begley said that the Rose stone behind it was "not pleasing to see; you can't view both sides of the stone."

"We're trying to come up with an amicable solution so that both families are happy and at peace."
Mary Snow, DPW

And so the Roses asked for the stone to be moved. Then the town and the DPW's Cemetery Commission enlisted the BSC Group to conduct a survey, according to a letter written by Jennifer Oram, assistant to the Town Manager, dated May 6, 2011.

"The survey identified our stones being a few inches over the line," said Begley. "This was news to us. We didn't go there and place the stones ourselves; the town approved it. Somewhere along the way, a mistake was made."

Not uncommon

"This situation is not uncommon in old cemeteries," said Glenn Pratt, who worked on the Cemetery Commission and helped the town and the DPW conduct the recent Woodside survey. "One family brings it up; you start digging and realize, 'This is off.'"

According to Pratt, "there's no real regulation" to keep this kind of thing from happening. "Cemeteries don't work that way — it's too emotional."

Snow agreed that the problem, however upsetting, is fairly commonplace.

"This doesn't just happen here, it happens in every cemetery," she said. "This is an ongoing issue, and I'm not sure if there's a perfect solution."

For now, the town has suggested that, since the survey found the Roses' stones to be four and eight inches over their lot line, respectively, these stones be placed back.

However, Oram noted, "People can have their stones right up to the line. There are a few spots where stones are head to head because people are buried head to head." The major problem here, however, is that "the headstones are back to back. It's a very difficult thing to correct."

"The bodies are in the right place," said Small. "It's the stones that are wrong."

"I hope we can get to the bottom of this," Begley said. "We're hoping some equitable solution will be made."

Snow is on the same page. "We're trying to come up with an amicable solution so that both families are happy and at peace," she said.

Begley empathized how helpful the town and the DPW, notably Oram and Snow, have been throughout this sensitive ordeal.

"They have been so helpful and forthcoming, very sympathetic and respectful of the people whose remains are buried there," Begley said.

At press time, Oram and a few Selectmen will be walking around Woodside with members of the Jason and Rose families. The Board hopes to get a better visual of the situation and make an informed decision. But Selectmen Chairman Tedd Carr hopes the families will reach an agreement and decide the outcome on their own.

"I hope the families will work together to present a solution for us to consider," said Carr. "Otherwise, the only alternative is to adhere to cemetery guidelines and rules and regulations, and that won't satisfy everyone. We're happy to have the families come back to the table to propose a solution; if not, we'll make a decision so the matter can be concluded."

This ongoing issue is being approached with caution, and rightly so. Like the stones that accidentally hover ever so slightly over their lot lines, no one involved seems to want to tread upon the other family's space, cause hard feelings, or make this delicate matter any more uncomfortable than it already is.

"This is a final resting place," said Snow. "We want it to be peaceful for everyone."

AROUND TOWN

High school sports physicals are Aug. 22

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Just relax

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone in town? The weather is better now than at the beginning of the week and I hope everyone is getting some time to enjoy it. I am amazed at how fast this summer is going and that I have my first piece of school news to report. As families prepare for the craziness of Back-to-school, remember to not stress out as our stress gets passed right onto the kiddos. Hold off maybe a little bit on buying all your fall and winter clothing, don't go crazy on back to school supplies until you get your lists and just buy the basics. A few new things like backpacks, lunch boxes and maybe new shoes are enough to make kids smile, be happy and adjust to the new school routine.

Your child gets the name of his/her new teacher and says, "but I wanted to get — —-" is a time to help your child learn that sometimes you can't always get what or who you want but have the chance to learn and love the teacher you got. Enough talk about the school stuff, get out and make the most of August and enjoy a vacation, a day and all of those awesome "moments in time" that will be gone in the blink of an eye! Check back here each week for celebration information, events, what's going on around town and more.

Physicals

Fall high school sports physicals will be held in the high school health office on Monday (Aug. 22nd) starting at 7:30 a.m. All students participating in a high school sport must have a physical on file in the nurse's office that is dated August 2010 or after in order to participate in a fall sport. High school physicals are free of charge and will be performed by Dr. Steve Golden or his staff. No need to sign up ahead, just come to the health office on the 22nd at 7:30, students are taken in the order in which they arrive.

Scholarship

Hats off to Greta Shwachman on her being awarded the Edward T. Mulvey/Pilgrim Bank Scholarship. This scholarship was created to honor Mr. Mulvey, a Cohasset High School graduate who dedicated more than 50 years of service to Pilgrim Bank

The scholarship is intended to recognize a Cohasset High School graduating seniorwho has demonstrated a commitment to an area of the Arts, such as music, drama, dance, and art. This year there were several well-qualified candidates with many accomplishments in music, drama, dance, and art, as well as other academic and personal achievements.

The staff at Pilgrim Bank would like to thank all who applied and wish Greta the best of luck at Rice University where she will be a freshman this fall.

Dreamwold

It is so cool when we have opportunities to explore and learn about Cohasset and surrounding towns and here is one of those times. Come to visit Tom Lawson's World: as a part of Scituate's 375th Anniversary celebration, come and take a walk through Dreamwold, the estate of Thomas Lawson, the "Copper King" on Friday, Aug. 19th at 7 pm at the GAR Hall, 353 Country Way in Scituate.

This will be a wonderful power point presentation by life long Scituate resident, Robert Chessia and will include many never before seen photographs, which will provide an in depth look at "The Copper Kings" life, home and family. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $10. Jump over the town line, head to Scituate and enjoy this wonderful evening.

Benefit

Please join in an afternoon benefit for Dotty Fiori, a woman near and dear to so many in Cohasset and surrounding towns, who has been diagnosed with Lou Gehrig's disease. This event will be held at the VFW Hall on Route 3A in Scituate Aug. 14 at 3pm. Tickets are $20.00 and to order, find out more information or, to make a donation call Sue Jones at 781-383-2251

Happy Tails!

Save the date for the first Happy Tails Walk to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter. Show your support and walk at beautiful, historic Bare Cove Park in Hingham on Sunday, Sept. 11 from 10 am until noon. Enjoy up to 3 miles of paved, gentle paths with stunning water views. Help the Shelter boost fundraising by gathering sponsors — a great summer activity for kids with a passion for helping animals. There will be a prize for the person to bring in the largest total donation collection for the Shelter. Fee is $25 per participant over age 10.

For safety, all dogs must be leashed (no extra-long/flexi-leashes), be 100 percent dog-friendly, and be up-to-date on their rabies vaccination. Register by Aug. 26 to guarantee your event tee-shirt. More information and online registration at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org. For corporate sponsorship information, please call (781) 544-4533.

Gettysburg

Congratulations to Megan Sacks of Cohasset, who graduated Cum Laude from Gettysburg College on May 22, 2011. Megan majored in globalization studies.

UVM

Victor J. Hartmann, of Cohasset, has been named to the dean's list for the spring 2011 semester at the University of Vermont. Victor is a sophomore business administration major in the School of Business Administration.

To be named to the dean's lists, students must have a grade-point average of 3.0 or better and rank in the top 20 percent of their class in their respective college or school.

Great work, Victor!

Have a great week Cohasset and send in all of your photos, birthday wishes, event information and vacation stories to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Glossy photos and write-ups can also be dropped off at the Mariner drop box in Tedeschi's in the village. However, Mary Ford does the final pickup for the week at 8 a.m. Tuesday so be sure to drop anything off before then!

YOUNG SCIENTISTS

CSCR partners with United Water

Benefits students, the town, and the harbor

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) has embarked on a new and exciting partnership with United Water, one with an immediate impact on the quality of educational experiences in the community and the quality of water in the harbor. The partnership entails four initiatives — hiring a high school student as a paid summer intern who learns the protocols, policies and best management practices in operating a safe and environmentally-friendly waste water treatment plant; offering the professional services of United Water compliance officers to conduct a lab audit of CSCR's facility at Parker Ave; to support student-led sampling of Cohasset Harbor to ensure that the plant is complying with federal regulations stemming from the landmark Clean Water Act; and to provide CSCR with grant funding to support its Summer Institute program.

Jane, LeCapitaine, United Water's Community Relations Manager for the North East Division, refers to CSCR as "the perfect community organization for us to support." According to LeCapitaine, "United Water wants to make all of our communities a better place to live. Supporting CSCR helps us support the environment and education in the community. It also gives us a vehicle for meeting and supporting students who share our passion for water management and environmental stewardship."

Toward that end, United Water launched an internship program for Cohasset High School students involved in CSCR. Junior Melinda Dignam, awarded the position from among a field of highly competitive candidates, was selected by LeCapitaine and colleagues John Marcin, Regional Manager, and Plant Operator Joe Hughes. "Melinda is a super intern," says Hughes. "She's bright, learns fast, and does everything we ask whether it's checking the microbes in the sludge, recording instrument readings, doing lab work, checking grinder pumps in the field, or doing water quality sampling in Cohasset Harbor. She's such an addition to our staff and she's really helping us out with the harbor sampling."

Melinda and CSCR peer Ashley Howard meet weekly with CSCR's senior scientist, Dr. Ann Thomae, to conduct "NPDES" sampling of Cohasset Harbor. (NPDES is the federal regulation that requires waste water treatment plants to conduct water quality sampling of the bodies of water into which they discharge treated water.) Howard, Digman, and Thomae conduct measurements of dissolved oxygen, temperature, salinity, and conductivity and collect samples for lab analysis of chlorophyll, nitrogen, and ammonia. "Professional scientists who conduct this work know that it's critical to precisely follow all sampling protocols," acknowledges the Compliance Officer of United Water, Beth Murphy. "By providing CSCR with an audit of all of their lab practices, we're able to not only ensure that the NPDES sampling is properly conducted, but we're able support CSCR's mission of teaching students to collect valid data for all of the stakeholders in the community."

Murphy and colleague Theresa Almeida, United Water's Compliance and Lab Coordinator, conducted a two-day intensive review of CSCR's lab, lab practices, written policies, and documented operating procedures. "Overall we found the CSRC lab to be well run and found the students and staff to be conscientious, willing to learn and enthusiastic," wrote Murphy in her audit documentation. "But, with all audits, issues were identified that should be corrected to ensure and improve the accuracy and consistency of CSRC sampling and analytical practices." CSCR Lab Manager, Princeton Ph.D. candidate in chemistry (and CHS grad) Colleen Richardson, took up the challenge to implement the changes suggested by United Water. "Colleen has really turned CSCR into a professional lab this summer," says Dr. Thomae. "With United Water's guidance, and Colleen's keen understanding of what a professional lab is all about, CSCR students will benefit for years to come with the improvements that Colleen has made."

Finally, United Water has generously supported CSCR's Summer Institute program with a $1,500 grant to support student research, lab consumables, and equipment purchases. "It's great that United Water is such a supportive community partner," says CSCR finance director, Mike Dick. "We're able to support student research with these funds. In turn, students are able to provide the community with needed data, and we're able to call upon United Water for professional consultation. It's a win for the students, a win for the town, and a win for the harbor."

"Supporting CSCR helps us support the environment and education in the community. It also gives us a vehicle for meeting and supporting students who share our passion for water management and environmental stewardship."

Openings in SSCC programs

The South Shore Community Center would like to remind residents that there are still available spots in Summer Gymnastics, Sports & More for Boys and Girls. Join Ruthann and staff for fun filled days of gymnastics, bowling, crafts, water play and more. Each session runs Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The sessions will continue each week with the final session being held Aug. 29 through Sept. 1. The cost per session is $120M/ $130NM with a half off discount for siblings attending the same session.

Registration is open online or by calling the SSCC office at 781-383-0088. The summer office hours are 9 to 11 a.m. Monday through Thursday, but if you leave us a message, they will reserve your spot and return your call at our earliest convenience to complete the registration.

Kettlebell Workshop

The Hingham Community Center will offer a Kettlebell Workshop on Wednesday, August 17 at 7 p.m. with coach Don M. Wood. A kettlebell is a traditional Russian training tool that has been used since the turn-of-the-century to develop full body conditioning and fitness.

Kettlebell training is catching on for both women and men as it offers great strength and core training. The workshop is offered for free to anyone interested in learning more about this of training.

A full schedule of fall programs will be available on the Hingham Community Center website by August 18: www.hinghamcommunitycenter.org.

Reception fetes new and interim town managers

The sun was shining and reflecting off the harbor as well wishers trickled in to meet and greet Coughlin, who started his new role on August 1, and give Lombard a bittersweet send-off.

A who's who of Cohasset turned up at the Atlantica on Wednesday evening to toast Michael Coughlin, the new Town Manager and to thank interim Town Manager Steve Lombard for his service.

The sun was shining and reflecting off the harbor as well wishers trickled in to meet and greet Coughlin, who started his new role on August 1, and give Lombard a bittersweet send-off. With Jennifer Oram, assistant to the Town Manager who also served as interim for the month of July, also in attendance, the evening became a unification and celebration of the old and the new.

Coughlin was honored by the turnout.

"This only reinforces my belief that this appointment is the pinnacle of my career," Coughlin said. "When you're welcomed into a community like this, it just speaks well of this community, and speaks volumes about the quality of the town's leaders. This is also the eve of my move into Cohasset. I'm hoping everyone here shows up and helps me carry in boxes!" he joked.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr welcomed attendees to the "beautiful reception" and invited everyone to "say thank you to Steve Lombard, who's been very special to us, and welcome the new Town Manager, Michael Coughlin." Carr added that Lombard "will be very much missed," but that he was "delighted" to have Coughlin onboard.

"We had many, many distinguished candidates," said Carr. What set Coughlin apart?

"He's a go get 'em kind of guy. He thinks outside the box," Carr said. "He's dynamic and has had an incredible career as a JAG lawyer, and worked in coastal towns similar to ours. He also has a commitment to living in the town where he serves."

Both Lombard and Coughlin were given citations from the Senate and the House of Representatives. Each Town Manager also took time to share their thoughts and express their thanks.

Lombard told the crowd that he enjoying serving Cohasset, and "couldn't have done it without the dedicated employees of this town." While Lombard lives in Mattapoisett, he added that Cohasset hasn't seen the last of him.

"I'll be back to make sure it's still running right," Lombard laughed.

Coughlin addressed the audience with an anecdote expressing his excitement over coming to the South Shore.

"Growing up in an Irish household on the North Shore, I was told if you ended up on the 'Irish Riviera,' you were really going to make something of your life," he said.

"There is an incredible amount of talent in this town," Coughlin continued. "I view myself as a coach. There are great people here, and my job as coach is to put them together and make 'Team Cohasset' win. I'm looking forward to the challenge."

Coughlin told the Cohasset Mariner, "Cohasset has always been served by great people like Steve Lombard and Bill Griffin" and that he's "proud to be Town Manager."

Lombard was eager to give credit where it's due, and told the Mariner how much the town employees, notably Jennifer Oram, and the Board of Selectmen helped him during his tenure as interim Town Manager.

"It's an in the trenches job," Lombard said of the Town Manager position. But "it was a great experience. It's so refreshing to have residents come in and thank me for the job I was doing. It's a real nice town — I'll miss coming here."

"Steve has a wonderful, gregarious nature, but behind that, he's all business," said Oram. "He's decisive, friendly, and wonderful to work for."

While Oram will miss working with Lombard, she is also ready to welcome Coughlin into the Cohasset fold.

"Mike is a consistent leader, and that's just what the town needs," Oram said. "He seems excited to do it."

It may be early days for the new Town Manager, but it appears that Coughlin is off to a good start.

"If you take a look around, like any other town, Cohasset has its issues," Coughlin said. "But that's outweighed by the sense of unity. In small town government and politics, you're going to have disagreements, but it impresses me that everybody is on the same team."

"Coach Coughlin" seems poised to lead "Team Cohasset" to victory.

Alleged threats

At 7:42 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 5), officers were dispatched to Shaw's Plaza parking lot to speak with a 21-year-old man about past threats. The reporting party reported that a 24-year-old Cohasset man, had gone to his father's house the day before and allegedly threatened his father with a sickle. The 60-year-old alleged victim could not corroborate the events as told by his son, and it was determined that there were no overt threats, just odd behavior, police said

Protective custody

At 3:23 a.m. on Sunday (Aug. 7), officers were summoned to the Cohasset Harbor Inn for a reportedly intoxicated man passed out in the lobby. The 35-year-old Quincy man was offered a cab home. A short time later, this man refused to take the cab ride and started walking down Margin Street. He was found a short time later on hotel property and placed into protective custody by police. He remained at the police station holding cell until the late morning. He was released after a breath test determined he was sober enough to leave.

(Protective custody is not a criminal offense, rather a tool for safekeeping of drunken people who have no other place to go or would be a danger to themselves or others due to intoxication. Sobriety is determined by a breath test, which registers the amount of breath alcohol in a body, police said.)

MV accidents

• At 4:21 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 3), officers responded to a single vehicle crash on Route 3A and Schofield Road. A 2005 Toyota Corolla had struck a tree, which had fallen across the roadway. The operator, 74-year-old Hingham woman, was on her way to work and did not see the tree in front of her. She was uninjured and the vehicle was towed, police said.

• At 12:54 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 5), officers responded to the area of North Main and Cedar streets for a reported motor vehicle accident. A 2010 Honda, operated by a 46-year-old Walpole woman, was attempting to turn left onto Cedar Street when 2000 Dodge, operated by a 32-year-old Cohasset woman, struck it. No injuries, both vehicles were drivable, and a citation was issued to the operator of the Honda for failure to use caution in turning, police said..

• At 3:27 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 7), Officers responded to a motor vehicle crash on Route 3A and Sunrise Assisted living facility. A 2006 Audi, operated by a 46-year-old Marshfield woman, was traveling north and was attempting to turn left into the Sunrise driveway when a 2007 Ford operated by a 22 year-old Weymouth man struck her from behind. He was cited for following too close. Police said there were no reported injuries and both vehicles were drivable.

• At 10:21 p.m. on Saturday (Aug 6), a 911 caller reported a car hit a telephone pole across from #159 South Main St. Responding officers discovered a 2001 BMW had struck a tree on Spring Street. The operator, from Braintree, was uninjured. The vehicle was towed. No citations were issued.

OUR VIEW

A silver lining

While summer is here with its accompanying 90-degree heat and humidity, some may already be hankering for those endless wet, rainy, cold spring days.

More than a few weary folk climbed the steps to the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square earlier this week and last week looking a bit overheated and fatigued from the sultry day. They paused to chat a while in our air-conditioned environs before venturing back out into hot Hingham Square.

One thing we've observed from this extended stretch of unfriendly weather dating back to the recent long winter, which now seems to be a distant memory — is meteorological matters seem to bring us staid New Englanders out of our collective shell.

Noted for being stuffy and rather cold in nature, with little small talk, weather conditions get us interacting with one another at the supermarket, gas station or just about anywhere around town.

Complaining about the weather is in fact a passion that we New Englanders all seem to share. Take a moment and think about how often you've grumbled about damp, dark and depressing days this past spring to anyone that would listen.

There was even some humor in our collective misery. In the depths of last winter, we heard weather reports about how much worse temperatures and snow levels were in International Falls, Minn.; and this spring we overheard local remarks such as, "If I wanted to live like this, I'd move to Seattle."

Here in New England we have four seasons, although Mother Nature does trick us from time to time and forgets to give us one of them. Until the thermometer rose in recent weeks, we were worried summer was on her list of omissions this year.

Things could always be worse. Much of our country is in the midst of a 100-plus degree heat wave. Here, at least, we have variety and never find weather boring.

As Mark Twain said, "There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration-and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on people to see how they will go. But it gets through more business in Spring than in any other season. In the Spring I have counted 136 different kinds of weather inside of 24 hours."

So what's left for us to do? Like good New Englanders, when our weather gets up to its old tricks, we continue to grin and bear it (and moan about it to whomever we can).

What do people talk about in places like San Diego where the weather is practically perfect?

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Are we still refusing to look in the mirror?

This morning I woke up and turned on CNN and was met with shocking news of a US Downgrade in our Treasury Bonds by S&P.

Now anybody who did not see this coming down the pike should be examined by a fiscal expert. A national debt of over $14 Trillion and ratio of debt to GDP heading towards 75 percent plus. Any loan officer will tell you sorry but your not credit worthy for more debt. It was interesting to watch as the pundits and politicians tried desperately to throw mud on Standard and Poor's in an effort to discredit them. It was so far fetched that I had to chuckle at the feverish and circuitous attempts.

Are we still refusing to look in the mirror? We have run up debt and deficits for decades and the blame lands squarely on both parties. Reckless spending, not paying down debt when we had a surplus and a tax code that needs a major overhaul. We need more tax revenue and constraints, which should be shared fairly. As I listened to John Chambers from S&P, he could not have been clearer. We want the United States to get its financial house in order and if not, more downgrades could be on the horizon.

It is a bad day as a US Stockholder as the Dow plummets. While I am not happy about this, I think we all need to wake up and get our elected officials to do their job for which we sent them to Washington for as everybody rich, middle class and poor are part of this economic wheel and consequences of inaction will not have immunity.

Congress should get back to Washington and not leave until we have a bipartisan plan to develop a roadmap that will enable for a balanced budget, entitlement reform, tax code reform and a reduction of the national debt to acceptable ratio of GDP. This over time can restore our credit rating and economic leadership in the world. In addition we need to focus our spending on industries that can provide avenues for job growth and help unemployed Americans get back to work back on our economic wheel.

When a person is told by his doctor that he has dangerously high cholesterol does it make sense to blame the medical establishment? The prudent path is to take steps necessary and change your lifestyle so you can over time fix the problem and enjoy a sustainable life. Ignoring this advice brings certain peril and this is what our country faces.

A land of opportunity and prosperity is at stake for our children. This is not the country I want my daughter to inherit because we were reckless, irresponsible and selfish. –John Nestel, 132 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy #210, Cohasset

COMMENTARY

Selectmen: Reinstate ConCom members

The Mariner was provided a copy of the following for publication.

To: The members of the Board of Selectmen

August 7, 2011,

We are a group of current and former town officials, who are joining together with other concerned residents, to protest the recent handling of appointments to the Conservation Commission by three members of the Board of Selectmen. We call upon the BOS to explain and correct these actions by:

1. Reconsidering and rescinding the Con Comm appointments of July 12, and/or calling upon those appointees to resign; further to reappoint Cook, Charron and Karoff to the commission;

2. Establishing an independent commission, appointed by the troika, to review all actions of the selectmen as they relate to Cat Dam and the jurisdiction of the conservation commission, as well as related actions.

The unprecedented and disrespectful action, by which three qualified, experienced and dedicated members of the commission, Sarah Charron, Debbie Cook and Dick Karoff, were replaced, is repugnant to all who have served this town. Our community has always valued the time and talent brought by so many volunteers to a variety of town boards. That tradition of community service is one of the unique qualities that make Cohasset such a wonderful place to live. The three Selectmen have not only failed to treat these public servants appropriately, but they have failed to understand the essential independence required between a regulatory board and the selectmen who appoint them. A conservation commission must operate in an impartial and judicious manner, free from political influence, if all residents are to be treated fairly and equitably. The handling of these appointments serves to chill that necessary independence as well as to deter qualified people from serving the town in the future.

MAKING TRACKS

Cohasset DPW earns applause

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Time spent with the DPW —In our opinion, the members of the DPW are among the unsung heroes of Cohasset. Our office constantly turns to the DPW for advice and support as well as for their incredible infrastructure knowledge. We find the advice, knowledge and support of the DPW to be invaluable in our work.

On Monday and Tuesday we had a chance to spend time with the DPW in support of an investigation we are currently conducting. We are gathering background information for submitting a grant request to the State for an economic development grant. Let us explain. Last year, we prepared an economic development grant submittal to improve the Ripley Road business areas well as to add additional parking to the Town Parking Lot. The proposal although it seemed to be well received did not successfully pass the hurdles necessary to obtain a grant. This year, we are reapplying, but with much more design data in our proposal. This should improve our chances for an award.

So, now what is the DPW's role in all of this? You may remember that when the Town did the original Revitalization in the center of the Village, all of the roads were completely dug up and rebuilt along with new storm drainage systems. The Ripley Road area, especially near Smith Place, desperately needs to have the storm drain system redesigned and reconstructed in a similar manner. But, here's the rub. No one really has good drawings defining the existing drainage system in the area of Smith Place and the Post Office. Initially, there were two totally independent drainage systems that carried the water from Ripley Road to James Brook. One covered the area from about Pratt Court up the hill toward the Library. Another drainage system was south of that and drained the area around the Post Office. Since then, these two systems were tied together. An older pipe was used to drain the meadow next to the Post Office into James Brook. The old pipe was decommissioned and a new a larger pipe was run to James Brook to drain the Post Office parking lot and the meadow to the north of the Post Office. This new pipe crosses and possibly connects to the other storm drainage pipes. On top of all of this work, new sewers were laid in the area and then the MBTA did Greenbush reconstruction in the area. The upshot is no one really knows what lies underground.

Fiber optic camera system.

The DPW's began an investigation, which was able to locate, with a metal detector, two Ripley road storm water manholes that were totally paved over by a prior project. They were buried under four inches of asphalt. Once the asphalt was jack hammered away, the manholes could be opened for visual inspection. Other drain manholes in the area were also opened and visually inspected to check which pipes go where.

However, visual inspection can only gather so much information. This is a case for the DPW's next level of surveillance. The entire drainage in this area was checked out with their fiber optic camera that lets them trace the piping from the inside of the pipes. However, this sounds a lot easier than it actually is. Many of the pipes had muddy debris and or water in the bottom that caused the camera to be blinded. However, based on the optic fiber camera inspection, visual inspection of the drain lines and a smattering of drawings from various sources, we are now able to put together a much better idea of what lies under ground and how it might be improved. Our engineers can now have a much more accurate idea of what needs to be done, thanks to the DPW.

Meeting House Pond — If you drive by the Common you can observe that the Meeting House Pond is on its way toward being filled. The water was officially turned back on last Friday (a week ago today). The water level continues to rise as the pond slowly fills to the correct level. As we write this, even the contractor's porta potty has been removed to put the whole area back in its completed condition. The pond continues to be fine tuned so that it will operate well. We are sure that most of you appreciate how nice the pond now looks as it anchors the southern end of our historic Common.

HEALTH NOTES

Getting around on a bicycle

STEVE BOBO

Not that a bicycle is the best conveyance for many, but they could be used more often for brief trips by some because some of the models are operable by those not always considered candidates for wheeled vehicles.

How much exercise is enough? What, does a body need? All physical exercise is healthful. We all have opinions about what exercise is best but, after all, how much fitness does one need? The first requirement is to be sufficiently nourished to stay well. Next, of course is to be able to do all the things one wants to do. Hopefully, common sense plays a part in exercise decisions, along with your age and condition in relationship to the physical demands you place on your body. Also, of course, your exercise needs are age related. Health Notes suggests you talk to Mary Goodwin, the Town Nurse at Town Hall for dietary advice that takes into account your health status, lifestyle and exercise needs for people in towns like Cohasset.

At this point each of us can decide what exercise over and above just getting around we should use. Walking, of course is always available for most of us, but walking takes time and may not completely fit our needs. Can we fit some more healthy activities into a productive routine? The press has recently published several reports of other exercise options, which may fill in some of our exercise requirements. Some may be appropriate for, and better than getting in a gas-guzzler and going a mile or two downtown to do errands, for example. One recent picture showed Brown, Kerry and Lance Armstrong on bikes! But wait, what about bicycles for getting around town? Too dangerous, you say and, besides, the roads don't all have bicycle paths. Many do, and they go places where those running errands will probably use.

Recent media coverage cited a problem in one of Cohasset's favorite outdoor walking and biking venues: Wompatuck Park. The controversy centers about entry from Cohasset into the property that used to house buildings holding ammunition and its byproduct, toxic perchlorates used in World War II to arm warships built at the Hingham Shipyard. The buildings are on a part of the land later needed for the Cohasset MBTA station, now called the Whitney spur rail trail, called by the media "the bike path to nowhere." The Trustees of Reservations have noted that Cohasset users can still access Wampatuck on one of the trails that branch off the path in Whitney and Thayer Woods but only if they brought a trail map to follow — and a determined cyclist could push through a large hole in the chain link fence marking the border of the State Park.

Not that a bicycle is the best conveyance for many, but they could be used more often for brief trips by some because some of the models are operable by those not always considered candidates for wheeled vehicles. Lets assume, in a shopping trip, an article was forgotten, necessary to complete some item available in the village. With gas prices the way they are, a quick trip to the local grocery store would be cheaper in an internal combustion less vehicle, providing the conveyance is no less capable of injuring the rider than is a car. Frequently, in older people particularly, balance is a major issue and a bicycle is only stable in the hands of a healthy individual (athlete) with no hint of balance problems.

A major, and necessary accessory according to a German friend is a 'klingel' which, translated, is a bell. These inexpensive devices are the most satisfactory noisemakers for a bicycle, since they produce a unique piercing sound.

Balance problems can be solved by another type of cycle: the so-called tricycle. These three wheeled vehicles are enjoying increasing popularity; particularly in rural venues where driving is too expensive and walking takes too much time. They are seen in Cohasset by people who often try new ideas.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

FOR THE RECORD

This, that, and another thing

GREGORY MATHIS

I had a regular newspaper column many years ago called "This, that, and another thing."

It was an expression my mom used a lot when I was growing up and it fit nicely into the concept of the column, which was to find three things to write about each week. It seemed less daunting writing three shorter items rather than one long column.

I decided to resurrect the title and the concept this week because I wanted to tackle a few timely issues.

THIS: This weekend (Aug. 13 and 14) is the sales tax holiday in Massachusetts. The almost annual summer event has been popular in the past, but that was during (slightly) better economic times. With continued news of bond ratings sliding, stock markets crashing and unemployment numbers not improving, consumer confidence is not high.

We ran a poll on one of our Wicked Local websites asking people what they might purchase this weekend and the overwhelming response (73 percent) was "I'm not planning to make a big purchase." There were four other responses tied with 6 percent of the vote: giant, flat-screen television; washer and/or dryer; gas grill; and furniture for a room other than bedroom or living room.

Granted, the polls we have on our websites are very unscientific and the number of respondents was relatively low. But I think those numbers would hold up in a more scientific poll with greater participation.

Still, shoppers will be out there. As one retailer who sells large appliances and home electronics said last week in one of our stories, "We could put a 10 percent off sign out there and we wouldn't have anyone show up. But when people are convinced they're taking something from the government, they'll come out."

Just remember, if you spend $2,500 (the limit) on that big-ticket item, you'll be saving a grand total of $156.25 in sales tax.

THAT: I'm very much in favor of an expanded Bottle Bill. It's about time for Massachusetts to take the next step after more than a decade and add a five-cent deposit on bottled water, sports drinks and other beverage containers. Despite what opponents say, this measure will increase recycling and reduce litter, two areas we could stand to improve in this state.

AND ANOTHER THING: A few weeks ago, I wrote about starting up a Readers Advisory Network, or RAN. I've had a few responses — three from Carver, in fact — but would like to involve more people. In case you missed the column back in July, the Readers Advisory Network will serve multiple purposes.

Readers who join the email network may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, to provide potential sources for stories, for a "digital person on the street" interview or for community commentary.

Once we have some numbers built up, I'll work on setting up meetings with RAN members. The agenda for those meetings would likely include information about our company and give RAN members an opportunity to provide feedback on the newspaper and website.

If you're interested, send an email to gmathis@wickedlocal.com with "RAN" in the subject line and some information about yourself.

CAT DAM

considering developing an order of conditions.

The appeal describes the E-20 as a self-constituted group subset of the abutters who privately paid for the development of the NOI.

The appeal also states the E-20 NOI does not meet the Wetlands Protection Act Performance Standards or the state Water Quality Surface Water Quality Standards.

At the crux of the issue was how often to flush inner Little Harbor to maintain water levels, improve or maintain water quality and prevent the noxious "rotten-egg-like" odors that result when inner Little Harbor becomes a mudflat.

The E-20 group is concerned with leaving a water cover in inner Little Harbor for aesthetic and property value reasons. They believe the planned sewering of the streets around the harbor would clear up the water quality problems in Little Harbor.

A different group of neighbors, who oppose the current NOI, advocate for increased flushing citing environmental concerns: increased algae blooms during the early summer and phragmite growth.

Quigley, who is not an abutter, said she firmly believes the approved NOI is not in the best interests of the health of inner Little Harbor and would not improve water quality to meet the Performance Standards of the Water Protection Act. "The appeal speaks for itself," she said.

Former Selectman Ralph Dormitzer of 111 Atlantic Ave., who is not an abutter and supports the E-20 NOI, said from the outset of the controversy over the schedule of the Cat Dam tide gates, the Selectmen unanimously agreed that the solution should be cooperatively achieved among the abutters.

"I believe that the majority of the abutters also supported this view," he said this week. "The last-minute interference by the ConCom with that process, legitimate though it may have been, was ill advised and certainly lacking in wisdom, particularly when an amicable and environmentally desirable agreement was about to be achieved.

"It was the Selectmen's judgment from the beginning that only those directly affected by the operation of the Cat Dam tide gates were in a position to balance property rights, property ownership, property values and aesthetics, as well as make judgments about environmental consequences."

Dormitzer said the interference of the ConCom and now the appeal to the DEP is more about winning than doing the right thing.

"The DEP is not unbiased, having already weighed in on the issue, and is not the forum to appeal to if one is truly seeking a balanced outcome," he said. "The appeal to the DEP is, in fact, one more attempt to stack the deck using a third party. Lastly, one has to wonder about the wisdom of prolonging this issue when the only sure outcome is more anger and acrimony."

Conservation Commission Chairman David Farrag said the DEP would have "all sides" at Cat Dam during the site visit including abutters, appealers, town officials and interested citizens. He said appeals of Conservation Commission decisions are rare. He said the only other appeal in the last three-to-four years was over a fence.

Interference

The appeal also states that there has been a pattern of interference by the Board of Selectmen.

In an unprecedented action last month, Selectmen (in a majority 3-2 vote) did not reappoint three long-time members of the Conservation Commission whose terms were up. The trio of Conservation Commission members, Debbie Cook, Sarah Charron and Dick Karoff, had been participating in the Cat Dam NOI public hearing and had expected to be reappointed and be able to deliberate on the NOI.

In a separate action, a group of residents including current and past town officials have petitioned the selectmen to reinstate those conservation commissioners (see the petition on page 12).

The Cat Dam process controversy continues as evidenced by an email to Quigley from Al and Barb Stefan of 260 Jerusalem Road asking they be added to the names signing the appeal.

"Please find electronic signatures for me and Barb to add to the list of Cohasset residents appealing ConCom's decision to accept the E-20 NOI — which is both harmful to the environment, and the result of unethical behavior and outright bullying by the Town's Selectmen and a small group of residents."

OLD VERSUS THE NEW

ConCom subcommittee to look at procedures, transparency

Milanoski pushes for new bylaws

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following a recent shakeup of personnel, the Conservation Commission has a few more changes in store. On Thursday, August 4, the committee met with all three of its newly appointed members present: James Gilman, Alexander Koines and Jim Marten.

At a Board of Selectmen meeting held on July 12, three members of the Commission were unexpectedly unseated and replaced by three newcomers. Of the three commissioners ousted – Sharon Carron, Debbie Cook and Dick Karoff – only Karoff was in attendance on Thursday night as an associate (non-voting) member.

New associate member Michael Milanoski presented a draft of proposed bylaws to bring the Commission into compliance with state laws and regulations, pulled from bylaws used by other conservation commissions around the state. The Commission voted to establish a subcommittee consisting of three members to review and revise these suggested bylaws.

"These have been monitored and tailored to Cohasset," said Milanoski.

Gilman suggested that this compilation of bylaws represented a "best of breed."

Milanoski empathized that the document he brought before the committee was a draft and an important step to "start to establish procedures" and "bring new [commissioners] onboard with what the ConCom does."

The bylaws he presented are "standard for a committee, stating what the Commission is and its purpose." Milanoski also stressed that the Commission must approve its minutes.

"I've been looking for approval for the minutes from the past year— there are none," Milanoski said. "Hopefully this is a start, and will encourage all members to make changes and quickly adopt bylaws."

There are wetlands bylaws in place, Milanoski pointed out, "but nothing on the governance side."

While adhering to state policy and "trying to bring the town government into the 21st century," as Chairman David Farrag observed, Milanoski's plans were met with opposition by a few veteran members.

Ed Graham asked to make a statement.

"I've been in the Commission for several years, and am amazed to see what [Milanoski] is dictating," Graham said. "The first thing we took [as new commissioners] was an understanding of rules and regulations, and we asked the Chairman for guidance. We didn't learn them in a day or a week; it took several years. It takes a long time to become a commissioner in the conservation area — you don't learn this overnight. You may have a different opinion, but the strictness you're asking for just doesn't come overnight."

"While I agree with a lot of what you said," Milanoski said, "I'm not interpreting environmental regulations — I'm talking about the other half of our responsibilities:

"Hopefully this is a start, and will encourage all members to make changes and quickly adopt bylaws."
Michael Milanoski

governance, following open meeting regulations, and keeping up with minutes under Mass. general laws.

"I have a lot of experience with governance," he added. "That's what I'm bringing as a new member."

"We're required to post when a meeting will be held in Town Hall," said Graham. "We already follow that."

Graham also pointed out that meetings are always recorded, articles are read and voted on verbally, and that the recording is given to the secretary.

"I don't believe we're in violation," Graham said.

Both Farrag and Milanoski explained how the new open meeting laws have been a game changer.

"Last July, the state passed sweeping reform on how were to be conducted and minutes produced," Milanoski said. "Regulations have not been up to snuff for the past year. I don't want to nitpick, though; that's the past."

"The state did create new Open Meeting Law," said Farrag. "It's a matter of brushing up. These policies and procedures are already cursory; we're just codifying that and putting it to paper."

"I'm comfortable with having the governance down on paper," Marten said. "It's helpful for new members trying to go 50 miles an hour trying to keep up."

"There's been a lot of controversy in the past," said Commissioner Jack Creighton, "and we should try to move forward."

Milanoski agreed, but added that the committee cannot "move forward until we fix the processes."

"This isn't about looking at the past, it's about going into the future," Creighton said. "These changes shouldn't be jumped at; they should be looked at and studied."

Creighton suggested the committee let the draft "percolate" over the next few meetings.

The bylaws should describe the committee's "day-to-day business operations," said Creighton. "Let's keep it simple, transparent, and easy for us to live with."

The Commission voted to establish a subcommittee to further review and revise the bylaws, consisting of Creighton, Marten and Graham. The subcommittee is expected to have an update ready for the September 8 meeting.

Establishing bylaws should help the committee in "trying to create bureaucracy," said Milanoski. "Once that's done, the process should be streamlined."

"Putting a new system in place with compliance" will help the town "be ahead of the game, not behind the curve," said Farrag.

"At the end of the day, the Commission is a steward of public funds," Milanoski said. "There needs to be transparency."

Sheriff urges sign ups for free program

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti's "Are You OK?" program for the elderly recently recorded its 77th save, and the sheriff is urging more people to sign up for it.

"The "Are You OK?" program provides someone to call you on the phone every day to check on your well-being," Bellotti said. "Even if you never need them to get help for you, it's comforting to know someone is making sure you're all right on a daily basis."

Each day, an "Are You OK?" officer places calls to people enrolled in the program at a mutually agreed-upon time. If the enrollee does not answer the phone or otherwise indicates that something is wrong, the officer can summon emergency medical help immediately.

Stormwater Committee honors student scientists

Also announces internship

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Research conducted by three Cohasset High School students was recently recognized at Town Hall. On August 4, the Stormwater Advisory Committee honored soon-to-be seniors Emily Castro, Maggie O'Grady and Ellie Tedeschi, along with their advisor, Dr. Ann Thomae, for their study on the Cohasset Harbor foam. Their research, originally part of a Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) project, netted them a second place ribbon at the Massachusetts State Science and Engineering Fair.

The winning science project caught the attention of the Stormwater Advisory Committee, which Chairman Noel Collins said they learned about in the Cohasset Mariner.

"The purpose of the internship will be to compile and catalogue all information concerning bacteria testing in Cohasset from any and all sources."
Noel Collins, Stormwater Committee

"Their research was related to our mission to raise awareness on stormwater issues," said Collins. "Stormwater runoff is a contributing factor to the bacteria levels of the foam people see in the harbor."

The students' findings have become part of the SAC's newest project, Collins said, which will be developed during a fall internship for interested Cohasset High School and college students.

"The purpose of the internship will be to compile and catalogue all information concerning bacteria testing in Cohasset from any and all sources," Collins wrote in an email. "The Committee hopes to create a 'one source' book of information spanning years of testing from many different departments and sources."

Collins also told the Mariner, "We hope the book will become a historical reference for the town."

The SAC seems to be enthusiastic over student involvement in stormwater projects, eager to recognize the work of "the young ladies who comprised the foam study team."

At last Thursday night's meeting (Aug. 4) , the SAC presented certificates to the three young scientists and Dr. Thomae, and "thanked the CSCR for making it all possible."

"Town specific news insures local residents read the paper and see my ad."

Cohasset Police investigating scam

CHIEF MARK M. DELUCA

It is never a good idea to send money without verifying exactly who you are dealing with.

Cohasset Police Department is currently investigating a scam here in town and I would like to warn all of its substance. A resident here in Cohasset received an email from a friend's email account explaining that she was a victim of a crime, while traveling, and had all of her money and credit cards stolen. The email further added that the friend was stranded with no resources whatsoever and was requesting money be sent via Western Union. The entire story was a scam. The person that sent the email hacked in to her friend's account and made it look like the friend had sent the email when she actually did not.

It is never a good idea to send money without verifying exactly who you are dealing with. If you are contacted for any type of solicitation and there is any doubt with whom you are dealing please contact the Cohasset Police Department, prior to sending money. Get as much information from the solicitor as possible, such as phone number, address, or email. If you receive an email from a friend, as in this instance, speak directly with your friend to verify the legitimacy of the request or call Cohasset Police Department.

Mark DeLuca is the Cohasset Chief of Police.

FOR CHILDREN

Summer Reading Over!

Time to bring in your summer reading logs. Remember every reading log is worth a $1 toward our goal of providing a llama (from Heifer, International) to a deserving family in South America. With everyone's help we will be able to donate a llama so that a family can start a successful family business. We need 150 reading logs to reach our goal. If you have any questions or problems with your logs come see Mrs. Moody so that we can work it out. Everyone counts! One small town can make a difference in the world!

Thanks to Friends of the Library

Many, many thanks to the Friends of the Cohasset Library for funding all the year-round programs for children. The 2011 summer reading program was one of our most successful yet due to the support of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. With your continued donations to the Friends of the Cohasset Library we will sustain, plan and provide more quality programs for our children. MamaSteph, movies, all children's programs, Cohasset Reads Together books for each classroom PK-6, the Homeworks Center, The Teen Advisory Board, and quality museum passes are among the many programs funded by The Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Thanks to Cohasset Democratic Town Committee

Many thanks to the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee for sharing the cost of the Movie Site License with the Friends of the Library. Their generosity allows us to show legally licensed films in our Meeting Room.

Museums are open for the season

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums showcase the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open from 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

NAME: Deanna McMahon
SCHOOL: Hanover
YEAR: Hanover
STATS: The senior hurler had a 0.46 ERA and notched 158 strikeouts. She didn't allow an earned run until the last game in April. A solid hitter and outsanding fielder on the mound, McMahon was a huge factor in Hanover's 17-3 regular season. Had a streak of six shutouts in seven games during a seven-game winning streak early in the season.

NAME: Morgan Walsh
SCHOOL: Norwell
YEAR: Sophomore
STATS: Walsh tore the cover off the ball this spring. The sophomore first baseman batted .527 (second highest in the South Shore League), and she had 28 RBI with 12 doubles. A South Shore League all-star, Walsh hit a three-run home run in a key conference win over Rockland during the regular season.

NAME: Lisa Nagi
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Talk about going out in style. Nagi, a center fielder, hit .439, scored 25 runs, and knocked in 46 RBI in her senior season. Had a career-high six RBI in a win over Scituate. The Atlantic Coast League all-star was also an exceptional player in the field, coming up with clutch plays in the outfield.

NAME: Katie Casey
SCHOOL: Braintree
YEAR: Sophomore
STATS: Casey came on strong on the mound and at the plate for the Wamps in 2011. She led the hitting in batting with a .429 average with 4 homers and 23 RBI in 63 ABs. On the mound she was 9-3 with 82 Ks in 84 IP with a 1.42 ERA.

NAME: Amanda Abromson
SCHOOL: Braintree
YEAR: Senior
STATS: A veteran player and captain, leading the Wamps to third straight Bay State Carey Division title. One of the best shortstops in the league and hardest out in the league. She was a three-sport star at Braintree and won letters in each sport for three years.

NAME: Mel Reichelt
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Sophomore
STATS: One of the top shortstops in the Atlantic Coast League, Reichelt had a breakout year for the Lady Rams. The Atlantic Coast League all-star batted .483 and drove in 33 runs. She led the team with 13 triples and was nearly flawless in the field with a .995 fielding percentage.

NAME: Devon Kelly
SCHOOL: Scituate
YEAR: Junior
STATS: Versatile junior played outfield, catcher and shortstop for Scituate while batting .492. Had 27 steals and knocked in 15 from the leadoff position. Was named a Patriot League All-Star.

NAME: Kelly Norton
SCHOOL: Abington
YEAR: Junior
STATS: Norton pitched the Green Wave to a 19-1 regular-season mark. She had 173 strikeouts with just eight walks. She tossed three no-hitters (two in one week), including one perfect game, posting a 0.70 ERA. The two-time South Shore League all-star is now 36-8 in her career.

NAME: Ericka Stearns
SCHOOL: Hanover
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Led Hanover with four homers and 28 RBI while playing solid defense at first base. Also led the team in walks and doubles. Had 3 doubles and 5 RBI against Scituate and 5 hits, 2 homers and 8 RBI in a win over Randolph.

NAME: Alex Alicea
SCHOOL: Hanover
YEAR: Senior
STATS: The Patriot League All-Star and captain was one of the area's top hitters. Had a three-run homer described as a tomahawk against Duxbury and notched six hits in a win over Randolph. Had a big RBI double in a win over Middleboro.

NAME: Stephanie Cornish
SCHOOL: Abington
YEAR: Sophomore
STATS: Cornish was one of the top hitters in the South Shore League and the leading batter for the Green Wave. She had a .490 batting average, clouting 5 home runs and knocking in 23 RBI in just 49 plate appearances.

NAME: Rachel Lynch
SCHOOL: Norwell
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Lynch had arguably one of the greatest four-year varsity softball careers at Norwell High School. The South Shore League all-star led the team and league in hitting with a .535 batting average, played every inning of every game for the fourth year in a row, and had one of the best gloves at shortstop.

YOUTH SOCCER

Cohasset youth in National Soccer Finals

Local Crusaders header to Florida

Several local players from the Mass. Premier Soccer U13 Lady Crusaders, coached by Gavin MacPhee, will travel to Tampa, Florida in December for the United Soccer Leagues 2011 Super Y-League North American Finals. The Lady Crusaders are one of only two teams to qualify from New England in the U13 Girls group.

The Lady Crusaders, comprised of players from the South Shore and Rhode Island, finished second in the New England Premiership League behind the MPS Renegades (west of Boston), and qualified for the finals after defeating the Portland Phoenix 2-0 on Sunday in Maine.

Local players include: Kristen Shanley of Marshfield; Emily Damrell and Kaitlin Forsyth of Scituate; Abby Osmanski and Camerin Rawson of Cohasset; Abby Carchio of Lakeville; Grace Thomas, Nicole Geraghty, Kelly Blanchard and Amelia Burke of Bridgewater; Kaitlin Brown, Alex Stockman, Alyssa Rosen, Jenny Grimes, and Julia Sandquist of Walpole; Sarah Crofts of Medfield; Kelly Arani of Dover; Madeline Smith of Rhode Island; and Brylee McLaughlin of Raynham.

The Super Y-League finals event will feature 132 boys and girls teams and nearly 2,500 players from throughout the U.S. and Canada competing for the right to be called North American champions.

Founded in 1999, the Super Y-League serves as one of the first steps in developing elite youth soccer players in North America. Affiliated with U.S. Soccer, the league is designed for talented youth players striving for professional careers. Participating clubs represent the youth academies of some of the top professional clubs in North America, including Waltham-based Mass. Premier Soccer.

Wakeman, Davis and Noon score title

By Anthony Everett
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

Three lifelong sailors, friends and long time Cohasset residents are now national champions after sailing to victory in the International 210 Championship Regatta last weekend in Cohasset.

Skipper Wiley Wakeman, and crewmates Taylor Davis and Carter Noon held off a strong field of competition during eight races held August 4-7 to capture their first national championship.

In a field of 23 boats, the trio took first place in four of the races and ended up winning the regatta by nine points over their closest competition, Steve Clancy from Hull. Gordon Baird from Gloucester finished third.

Hosted by the Cohasset Yacht Club, the Regatta drew close to one hundred sailors to town for four days of racing that saw everything from light wind conditions to the intense 25-30 knot winds and pounding seas that tested the sailors on the final day of the competition.

Through it all, Wakeman, Davis, and Noon sailed fast and smart in their boat Wahconda. The men, who grew up sailing together in Cohasset and who all coached at the Cohasset Yacht Club, have come close to winning the International 210 championship before. Last year, they finished second in a tightly contested regatta in Gloucester, but this year, sailing on their home turf, they were not to be denied.

Wakeman, the son of Sam and Linda Wakeman of Cohasset, said, "we were extremely happy to win in home waters, with friends and family watching and against such strong competition." It is not the first time Wahconda's name has been

South Shore Four-Ball comes down to the wire

PAUL HARBER

Carl Jacobson and Andrew Harvey captured the South Shore Four-Ball Championship last weekend in Hingham and it came right down to the final hole. Jacobson and Harvey had a one-stroke lead over Frank Messina Jr. and Bob Cutting heading down the 18th hole and the Jacobson-Harvey pairing birdied the hole to shoot their second-straight 5-under 67. Messina came close to pushing the championship into extra holes. He had a 12-foot downhill putt for eagle for the tie, but it didn't drop.

Jacobson is a new member at South Shore CC and will play prominently in the local amateur scene. He is an amateur reinstatement and did not have anybody to play with in the tournament.

For Harvey, it was vindication of sorts, a second chance at South Shore. Harvey is from Olde Scotland links in Bridgewater and he played the Hingham course on Tuesday in the State Publinx championship. He had a couple of birdies, but a couple of the hole gave him trouble and he finished with a 78 and missed the cut. SSCC pro Joe Keefe got the two together and this last minute pairing went on to victory. Also playing in the tournament was the father-son pair of Steve Gregg Sr. and Steve Gregg Jr. The father is an old, retired Weymouth teacher and young Steve is the greens superintendent at Scituate Country Club. On the 201-yard eighth hole, the younger Gregg scored his first hole-in-one.

Bob Locke and John Beale won the net division with a one stroke victory over Jack Hickey and Abi Darvish and in the women's division Maureen Cawley and Carolyn Hart ran away with the women's crown with a 10-stroke victory over second place Alice Lundgren and Susanne Kay.

Girl talk

Megan Khang of Rockland shot an even-par 72 in the final round of the Junior PGA Championship at Sycamore Hills Golf Club in Fort Wayne, Ind., for her best round of the tournament. Khang, 13, started the day in a four-way tie for 23rd place, but finished 14th overall after posting one of just five par-or-better rounds in the finale, finishing at 12-over with a 300. Despite shooting five bogeys, Khang broke even for the round by eagling the par-five fifth hole and scoring three birdies, including two on the final four holes. She finished the four-day tournament with eight birdies and one eagle. Khang, who will enter Rockland High School in the fall, bested all the competition in her grade or younger. Ariya Jutanugarn, a 15-year-old from Thailand, ran away with the tournament crown with a two-under 70 to finish at 15 under, 10 strokes better than Mariah Stackhouse of Riverdale, Ga. . . . Khang will be at South Shore Country Club this week for the State Girls' Junior Championship. She's in the first group off the tee at 8:30, playing along with Mary Mulcahy of Scituate and Isabel Southard, a clubmate of Khang's at the Harmon Club in Rockland . . . The Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts will be playing the Grace B. Keyes Cup this week at Oakley Country Club in Watertown. It is essentially the stroke play championships for the women in the state. Tara Joy Connelly of Cohasset GC has to be considered one of the favorites for this championship. She is a two-time winner, and both were at Donald Ross layouts, the first at Longmeadow CC and the most recent two years ago, at Belmont CC.

Senior moments

The New England PGA held its Senior Championship at Okemo Valley Golf Club in Ludlow, Vt., last week and several local professional did very well.

Overall, Peter Norton of Thorny Lea finished fourth, fashioning a pair of 69s for a 2-under 138. Rusty Gunnarson of Rochester CC put together rounds of 72 and 75 for a 147, Bob Giusti of CC of Halifax (77-72-149) and Jimmy Noris of Dedham Country and Polo (72-77-149) were in the hunt as well. Norton was second in the 50-54 age division and Giusti was fifth in the 60-69 age group.

In the NEPGA Ahead Stroke Play tournament at Montcalm Golf Club in Enfield, N.H., Tom Tobey of Bay Pointe finished fifth with a 3-under 69. Greg Yeomans of the Bay Club at Mattapoisett (36-37-73), Christopher Doherty of Old Sandwich GC in Plymouth (37-36-73), Chip Johnson of Hatherly CC (38-35-73) and Todd Cook of Milton Hoosic Club (37-37-74) were in the field.

GOLFER OF THE WEEK

Scott Congdon

Scott Congdon put on a display of spectacular golf and stony nerve to capture the 2011 Massachusetts Amateur Public Links Championship at South Shore Country Club in Hingham last week.

The 24-year-old amateur finished with a two-round score of 6-under par 138 to best last year's champion, Devin Bibeau, by one stroke.

"This is my first MGA win," Congdon told reporters afterward. "I couldn't be happier that it started here."

For most of the final round, Congdon was doing his best to chase down first-round leader Ryan Riley, who held the tournament lead for 32 of the 36 holes. Congdon put a charge on during the final five holes. He made birdie on the treacherous 14th, a hole that isn't only measured in yards (330) but in cuss words (infinity). After making par on the par-5 15th, which is the No. 1 stroke hole, and par-4 16th, which played as the second most difficult in the tournament, Congdon also birdied the 17th hole.

He was 5-under par with only the 476-yard, par 5 18th hole remaining.

Just as he put some distance between himself and Riley, however, Congdon heard the news that defending champion Devin Bibeau - who was ahead - had turned in a low number.

Congdon assumed that he was one back of Bibeau and would need a birdie on the final hole for the tie.

With pressure mounting, Congdon was all business as he sent his chip to six-feet above the hole and then drained the fast downhill putt to capture his first career MGA title. The only problem was that he didn't realize he had won until he reached the scoring tent.

"I was surprised," said Congdon. "I really didn't know about any of the scores going into that last hole. Ryan had a couple of hiccups and I was able to capitalize on those, so at that point I just wanted to finish strong."

Finish strong is exactly what he did. That final birdie capped off a five-hole stretch where Congdon played 3-under par golf. He also carded four birdies and seven pars through his final 11 holes.

"I was just trying to stay in the moment and focus on one shot at a time," said Congdon, who enjoyed a strong golf career at Bryant University. "I was trying to play my game and stay within myself and give myself birdie opportunities."

It has been a good year for Congdon. He advanced to the Round of 16 at the 2011 Massachusetts Amateur Championship and was the second low scorer from Massachusetts (he finished T6 overall) at the 2011 New England Amateur Championship. He also – just one year ago – finished T2 at the 2010 Massachusetts Four-Ball Championship.

"I have started hitting the ball really well and have been able to make some putts," said Congdon. "I had been making good shots but not converting, so the putting has been the difference. This time, I have been able to roll some good ones in and that gave me confidence through the two rounds."

No putt was bigger than his final one on the 18th hole.

"The course is awesome," said Congdon. "The greens were so good. They putted true and if you had the right line, more times than not the putts would roll in."

15 does in Riley

Besides Scott Congdon, there were plenty of local standouts in the hunt at the Massachusetts Public Links Championship last week at South Shore Country Club in Hingham. Easton's Ryan Riley held the first day lead with a 4-under 68 and had the lead for 32 holes. He finished tied for third at 1-under. Pinehills Golf Club's Herbie Aikens finished tied for fifth at 1-over, while Ponkapoag's Brian O'Leary finished 10th at 5-over. Riley, who once was a junior member at South Shore, looked like he was going to win his third MGA title of the year heading into the final four holes, but on the par-5 15th, he hit his tee shot out of bounds, compounded his error by hitting a bad approach, and made a 7. He then bogeyed the par-4 16th, knocking himself out of contention. "You just can't hit the ball the way you want to all the time," Riley told reporters afterward. "That's golf. Obviously, I'm extremely disappointed because I had a chance. I just didn't execute. It just goes to show you how good the players are in the state. Nobody's going to give you a win out here."

on the C. Raymond Hunt National Championship trophy. Wiley's father Sam won the championship in 1972.

Davis is the son of Tim and Susan Davis of Cohasset, and is Wakeman's cousin. Noon is the son of Nicholas and Constance Noon of Cohasset. According to Davis, ""Wiley was masterful at the helm during four days of widely varying and challenging conditions, and Carts, per usual, was like a ballerina working the foredeck. It's been an honor to sail with these guys over the years." Noon added, "it's always a pleasure to sail with good friends, against great competition, and, of course, winning is not so bad either."

Cohasset Yacht Club Commodore Smudge Gunderson said, "we were happy to host the National Championship Regatta and to have such great conditions for racing. To see the championship won by a Cohasset boat and by three sailors who came through our instructional program was extra special. It is a testament to their abilities and to the quality of sailing we have here in Cohasset."

As for Wakeman, Davis, and Noon, they are happy to have a Championship under their belts after so many years of hard work. Davis summed it up by saying, "it's great to experience the fruits of all that work with this win."

There is more of Lola to love

Lola is healthy and seems to get along with other cats. She has been spayed and is up to date on all her shots. COURTESY PHOTO

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Lola, a black-and-white female, with the most interesting markings. Lola is finally beginning to calm down, after having been surrendered. She is quite large, but in no way obese. She's healthy and seems to get along with other cats. Lola has been spayed and is up to date on all her shots.

Lola is in dire need of a home, but would probably prefer a home without babies or small children.

HSAR has so many adoptable cats at the shelter. If you'd like to visit the HSAR air-conditioned shelter during open hours, and should you find the cat of kitten who's the one for you, HSAR may be able to hold them for you till you return from vacation.

You can check Missy out on the website along with many of HSAR's other cats.at www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the Adoption Coordinator.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, email: hsar@verizon.net.

HSAR is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638. You'll be glad you did.

Thanks to the many people who generously donate to the HSAR cause. They couldn't do it without you.

Outdoor film at Holly Hill Farm

Diners are to bring a dish with local ingredients that serves eight, the ingredients written on an index card, your own place setting and utensils and a comfy chair.

The final film of the Summer Outdoor Film Series at Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, is "Mother Nature's Child" at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 24.

This film explores nature's powerful role in children's health and development through the experience of toddlers, children in middle childhood and adolescents. The film marks a moment in time when a living generation can still recall childhoods of free play outdoors; this will not be true for most children growing up today. The effects of "nature deficit disorder" are now being noted across the country in epidemics of child obesity, attention disorders and depression.

Before the film, there will be a locavore pot luck dinner at 6 pm. Diners are to bring a dish with local ingredients that serves eight, the ingredients written on an index card, your own place setting and utensils and a comfy chair. BYO beverages. Admission to all films is free but donations are gratefully accepted to support the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom.

Outdoor concert series at SSCC

Raffael's and the Greenside Grille at the South Shore Country Club will host an outdoor summer concert series called Summer Sounds. Concerts will take place at the new pavilion overlooking the 18th green at South Shore Country Club, and will feature acts like Livingston Taylor, Bellevue Cadillac and Rebecca Parris.

"We want to bring the very best entertainment – at affordable prices – to the area so our guests can spend the day golfing, enjoy lunch and dinner at Raffael's and The Greenside Grill, sip a glass of wine under the tent and the stars all while listening to some great live music," said Frank Ricci, general manager of Greenside Grille.

The remaining summer concert schedule is; Aug. 26, 8 p.m., Livingston Taylor; Sept. 9, 8 p.m., Five O'clock Shadow; and Sept. 16, 8 p.m., Rebecca Parris. Some of the shows on the summer calendar – Bellevue Cadillac and the All Star Dyn-O-Myte Disco Review – will include dancing, so lace up one's dancing shoes!

There will be food services provided pre- and post-show in the restaurant and doors will open at 7:30 p.m. for all shows. While seating is general admission, first-come, first served, there is VIP reserved seating for an additional cost.

Pilgrim Bank names new VP, CFO

Pilgrim Bank is pleased to announce the addition of Christopher G. McCourt as Senior Vice President, Treasurer & Chief Financial Officer of the Cohasset-based community bank.

"I wanted to try something different," says McCourt when asked why he went from working in a large banking environment to a small community-based bank. "I wanted a better quality of life, I was commuting from Scituate to New York frequently. Working at Pilgrim is the best of all worlds for me."

McCourt has been in the banking business for nearly three decades. Prior to coming to Pilgrim Bank, McCourt was with Bank of America as Senior Vice President of Finance supporting Global Wealth Management and working on merger integrations. He was also Senior Vice President at Fleet Financial where he served as finance executive supporting various lines of business during his tenure. McCourt received his BS in Accounting from Boston College and MBA in Finance from Bentley University.

"We are excited to have someone like Chris in a vital role at Pilgrim Bank," says Frank Campbell, President and CEO of Pilgrim Bank. "His background and qualifications make him an incredible asset to our staff and as a local resident, Chris has a personal stake in our community focused mission."

Chris lives in Scituate. He and his wife, Kit, have three children. McCourt is also a licensed United States Coast Guard Captain - 25 GT Master.

Pilgrim Bank has two branches in Cohasset and one in Marion, Mass. For more information visit www.bankpilgrim.com.

NOW THAT'S ITALIAN!

Sunrise hosts popular singer

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset hosted its annual Italian Feast featuring Mike Miano of Duxbury as its prime entertainer. The Italian Feast has just completed its third year and has been a success every August. Sunrise of Cohasset hosted over 50 senior citizens from Cohasset, Marshfield, Hull and Norwell's councils on aging. Gerry Henry, one of the lead caregivers at Sunrise explained "it was like a big Italian wedding with singing and dancing going on all afternoon." The seniors are truly the people who make this event fabulous, Henry said.

James Barber and Susan Gregorio, both directors of community relations, said: "Every year the event gets better and better. Mike Miano is a fantastic entertainer who stimulates the audience with performances from the likes of Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Tony Bennett and many other classic entertainers." Sunrise of Cohasset truly inspires their residents through live entertainment, trips around Boston Harbor from the Hingham Shipyard and live concerts at the Cohasset Music Circus. Chris Mele, Executive Director for the community said "Our job is to put smiles on the faces of our residents and the seniors around the South Shore on a daily basis. Through events, sponsorships for many local organizations and for the residents of our community, Sunrise of Cohasset is and always will be a special place."

Sunrise of Cohasset is going to be hosting a seafood festival for the residents and their friends and family members at the end of the month. James Barber explains "with our beautiful property and great space, we utilize the outside grounds for large events for the many wonderful people who support our community."

Sunrise of Cohasset is currently running summer savings specials on available apartments. Please do not hesitate to call James Barber or Susan Gregorio for details.

Hingham library hosting Alcott series

The Hingham Public Library is one of 30 libraries selected by the American Library Association to receive Louisa May Alcott library outreach grants to present five reading, viewing, and discussion programs focused on Louisa May Alcott, her body of work, and her era. All programs will be held at Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St., Hingham.

Series Schedule

1. "Little Women" book discussion

Alcott's literary output was large and varied, but the work on which her fame rests is unquestionably "Little Women." Discussion will focus on how and why a book meant for young girls resonated with a far wider audience and became a classic of American literature.

Discussion leader: Kathy Leahy, project director for Hingham Public Library

Wednesday, Sept. 7, noon to 2 p.m. This is a brown-bag lunch event or Wednesday, Sept. 7, from 7 to 9 p.m. Registrants may attend either session.

2. "Setting the Scene: Hingham, New England & the Nation in the mid-19th Century."

A local historian follows with observations on how these issues affected life at the local level, in Hingham and in Massachusetts. Saturday, Sept. 10, 10 a.m. to noon

3. "Louisa May Alcott: The Woman behind Little Women"

Screening of the Reisen/Porter film in its entirety, followed by a scholar-moderated discussion. This program focuses on Alcott's life; since participants may be acquainted only with her fiction, the scholar will focus on providing context for some of the events dramatized in the film. Saturday, Sept. 24, 10 a.m. to noon.

4. "Louisa May Alcott Wrote That?"

Scholar-led discussion of three of LMA's lesser known works: Behind a Mask, Hospital Sketches, and Transcendental Wild Oats. The scholar will discuss each work as representative of a different phase in Alcott's development as a writer: pulp fiction author, memoirist, and satirist.

Saturday, Oct. 15, 10 a.m. to noon.

5. "Louisa May Alcott: Literary Phenomenon and Social Reformer"

Lecture by John Matteson, author of Eden's Outcasts: The Story of Louisa May Alcott and Her Father. The focus will be on how LMA's personal relationships with activists and intellectuals influenced both her writing and her views of contemporaneous political, social, and literary movements. Participants will be encouraged to read Alcott's Work: A Story of Experience, Emerson's Nature, and Thoreau's Life without Principle and Plea for Captain John Brown. Lecture will be followed by audience discussion.

Saturday, Oct. 29, from 2 to 4 p.m.

6. "Louisa May Alcott: Biographical Perspectives"

A discussion of LMA's life, led by the project scholar and based on Harriet Reisen's biography. Participants will read the Reisen book and will also be encouraged to choose one other biography from among the following: Eden's Outcasts/Matteson; Louisa May Alcott: A Modern Biography/Saxton; Louisa May Alcott: A Biography/ Stern; The Alcotts/Bedell; Louisa May Alcott: A Personal Biography/Cheever.

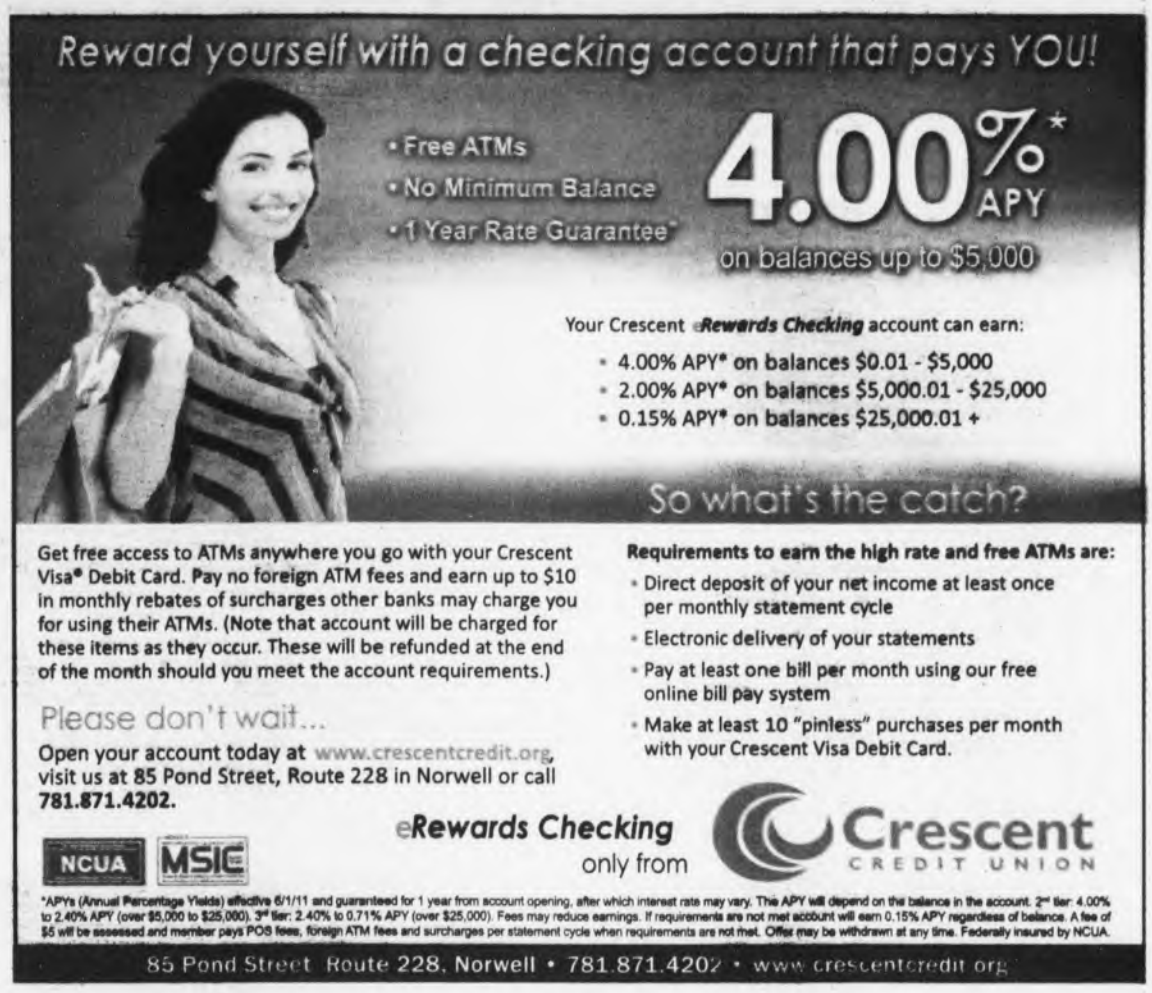
At the end of this final program in the series, the project scholar will wrap up with a summation and evaluation of Alcott and her place in the American literary tradition. Saturday, Nov. 19, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Additional events:

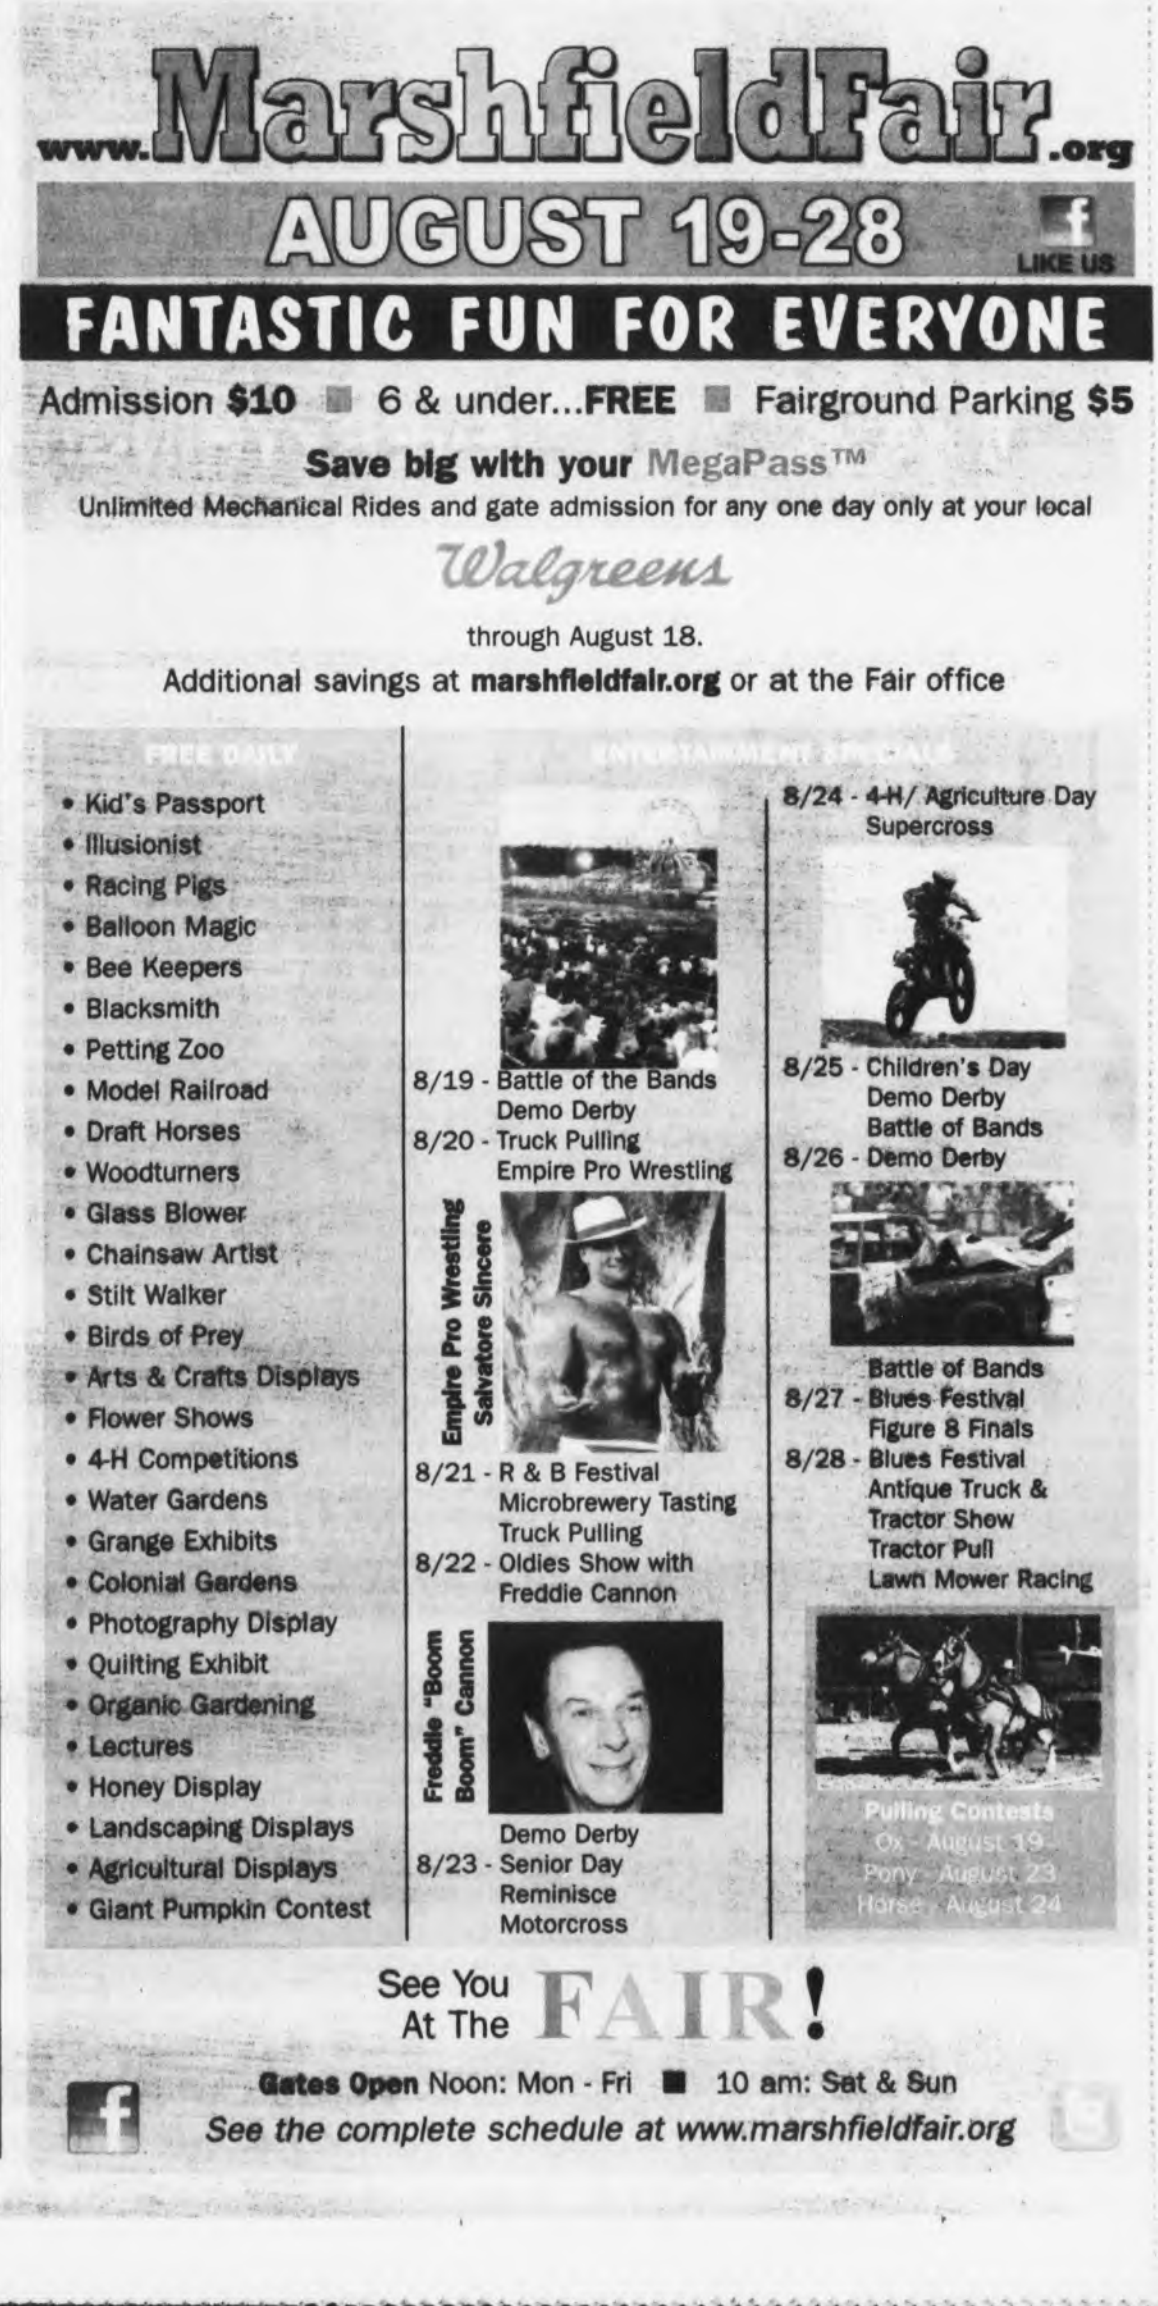
"An Afternoon with Louisa May Alcott"

A living history program featuring Jan Turnquist, director of the Alcotts' Orchard House, in a one-woman performance as LMA. Presented with funding from the Hingham Cultural Council.

Oct. 1 or 8, at Hingham Public Library. Tickets $5.



Orchard House membership: A one-year library pass allowing two adults and four children per day free admission to Orchard House, home of the Alcotts in Concord, Mass.



Sept. 2011 through August 2012

(Available to OLLI members, along with Hingham residents, for a $2 fee)

In-library display of 19th century artifacts September through November 2011

Final Carillon recital Sunday

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife Grace stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

The 87th annual Summer Recital Series continues each Sunday until August 14 at 6 p.m.

• Aug 14: Jonathan Lehrer (Cambridge, Mass.)

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring your lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Summer Worship Schedule Continues Sunday

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us in this exploration on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday (August 14) our summer schedule continues. We will have services at 7am and 9am instead of the usual 8am and 10am. The 7am service is at Sandy Beach in Cohasset. This wonderful service takes place with the gorgeous ocean backdrop and is truly a highlight of the summer. Our 9am service takes place in the church as usual.

Also, this Sunday, the 87th Annual Summer Carillon Concert Series concludes. Come out to the Cohasset Common and listen to the Cohasset Carillon, beginning at 6pm. Our final guest carillonneur this week is Jonathan Lehrer, a carillonneur from Florida.

During the summer, our normal Godly Play and youth programs do not meet, but they will pick back up again when school begins in the fall. Instead, our more relaxed summer children's program, which meets at 9am on Sundays, is working on projects to help those in need in the surrounding community.

AA now meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Please call the church office at (781) 383-1083 or visit ststephenscohasset.org for more information.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 22, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A troubling situation takes a positive turn and moves toward a resolution that should please you and your supporters. Meanwhile, make time to deal with new domestic issues.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time to reassess your goals and consider shifting directions. Remember to keep an open mind, and be prepared to make changes as new opportunities arise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Rely on your strong Mercury aspect to help you close that communication gap before it becomes too wide to cross. A sibling or other family member has news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're about to get off that emotional roller coaster and start experiencing more stability than you've been used to. This is a good time to let someone new into your life.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Good news: A trusted friend comes through for you. But you still need to shed that last scrap of self-doubt and once more become the cool, confident Cat we all know and love.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Things should be getting back to a less hectic pace. Enjoy the more peaceful atmosphere. You earned it. But don't forget about those still-unresolved issues.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive family relationship develops as misunderstandings are explained away. A job situation appears promising, but check it out before you act on it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. That on-the-job situation is working out as you'd hoped. Now's a good time to relax and to enjoy the company of family and close friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might feel as if you're caught in an emotional tug-of-war. But don't be rushed into a decision on either side. Wait for more facts before you act.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Goat's usually high level of self-confidence is brimming over these days. This should help you deal with a situation that you've avoided for far too long. Go for it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Relationships become more intense. But be careful not to be pushed into decisions you're not comfortable with. Remember: You're the one in charge of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You need to show more confidence in your ability to reach your goals. Make that long-delayed decision, and avoid floundering around in a sea of self-doubt.

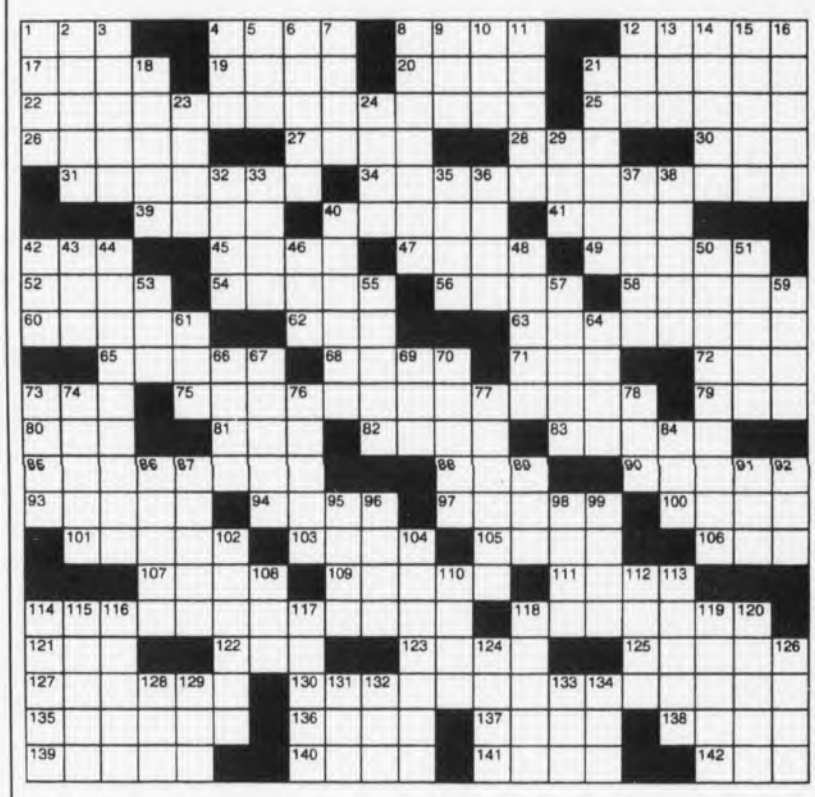
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OPINION

It would help to preserve our good fortune and protect lives and property if that roadway was lined. You will enhance that possibility by seeing that this job is done – and soon!

You are, I believe, depending too much on the care and experience of local drivers. This is a narrow, winding and hilly road.

Mike Coughlin makes Cohasset his home

New Town Manager getting settled

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Michael Coughlin has had a busy two weeks.

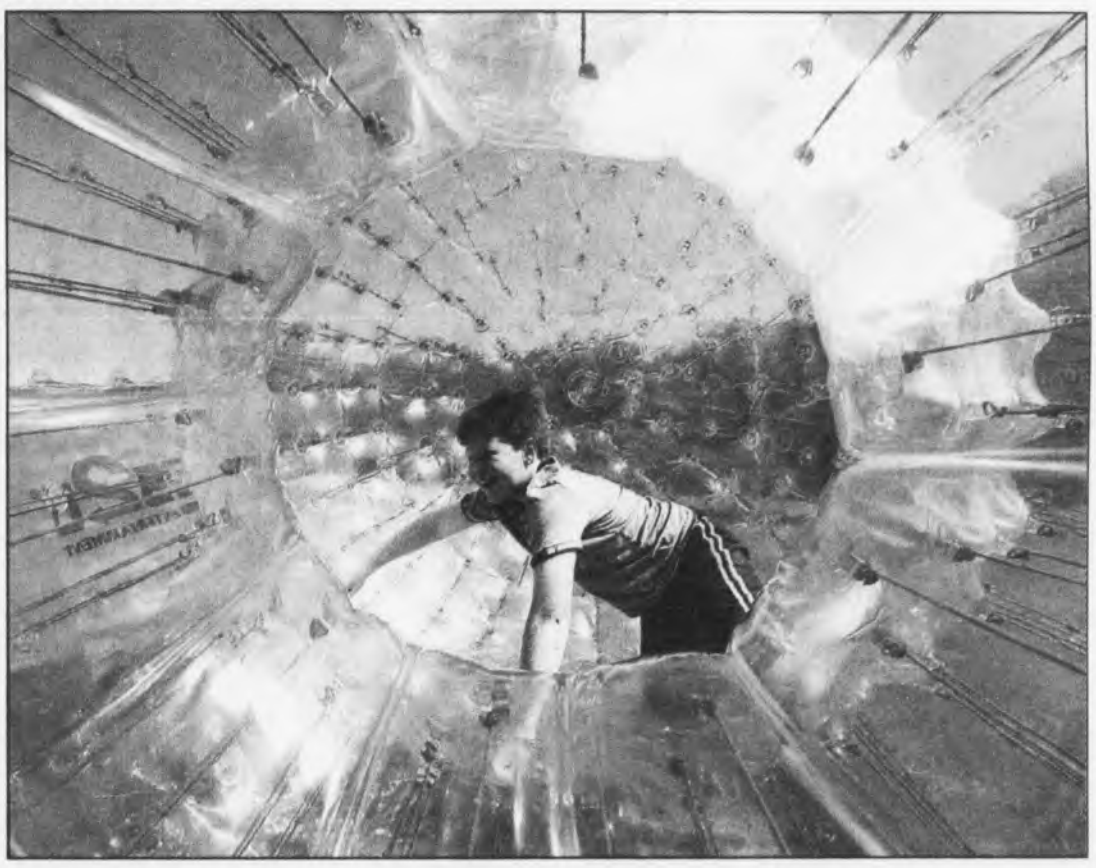
Monday, Aug. 1 marked Coughlin's first day as Cohasset's new town manager. On Wednesday, Aug. 10, he was given a welcome reception at Atlantica, hosted by the town employees. The following day, Coughlin moved into town — he and his wife, Bernadette, are among the first to move into the brand new Avalon apartments.

For Coughlin, coming to Cohasset is the fulfillment of a lifelong dream.

Growing up in an Irish household in Peabody, "It was often repeated around the house that if you ended up on the 'Irish Riviera,' you've made something of yourself," Coughlin said of the South Shore.

Coughlin has called this appointment the pinnacle of his career; considering all he's done so far, that's saying a lot. Coughlin comes to Cohasset from another coastal town he administered for four years, Westport, on the Rhode Island border; previously, he managed the central Mass. mill towns of Southbridge and Northbridge for three and four years, respectively.

Before moving into municipal management, Coughlin, a graduate of Boston College Law School, practiced as an assistant district attorney in Worcester, a JAG lawyer, and in his own private firm in Sturbridge. He also served as a Parliamentary assistant in the British House of Commons.



It was in Sturbridge where

Petition put off

Group told to come back another day

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The hot-button issue at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting wasn't on the agenda.

Last week, a nine-page-long petition was emailed to the Board containing the signatures of 120 residents protesting the Selectmen's controversial decision to unseat three members of the Conservation Commission and appoint three new members in their stead. Twenty of these signers came to the Town Hall meeting room to showcase their disapproval.

Former Selectman and conservation commissioner, Ronnie McMorris of Doane Street, appeared on behalf of the petitioners to ask the Board to rescind the new appointments and apologize to the ousted commissioners.

PUBLIC HEALTH ALERT

Beware of rabid wildlife

EXTRA in YOUR MARINER

What
Rabies is caused by a virus that affects the brain and spinal cord of mammals such as cats, dogs, raccoons, foxes, and coyotes. Rabies is usually a disease of animals but it can spread from an infected animal to a person.
There is rabies in Cohasset; and police warn that any wild animal acting strangely could be rabid. Cohasset police have responded to numerous calls this summer about wild animals behaving strangely. However, sometimes a rabid animal may seem just fine.

How is rabies spread
Rabies spreads when an animal with rabies bites another animal or a person. The rabies virus is in the saliva of the infected animals. Rabies can also be spread if the infected saliva gets into a scratch or other wound, or the eyes, nose or mouth of another animal or a person.

Bats and rabies
Most of the recent human cases of rabies in the US have been caused by bats. Any possible contact with bats should be taken seriously. This includes a bite or scratch, waking up with a bat in the room or finding a bat in a room with a young child. Bat teeth are so small that a person may not realize they have been bitten. Bat exposures need to be carefully evaluated.

How is rabies prevented in people
After someone is exposed to rabies, they can be given immune globulin injections around the bite or scratch. They will also get 4 or 5 shots in their arm over several weeks. As long as the shots are given before the person gets sick, this will prevent them from getting rabies.

If you think you've been exposed
Wash the wound with soap and water right away for 10 minutes. Call you heath care provider and the Cohasset board of health at 781-383-4116. The Animal Control Officer (781-383-1055) may be able to catch the animal that scratched or bit you.

Most of the recent human cases of rabies in the US have been caused by bats.

Precautions
- Teach children not to approach any wild animal.
- Report any animal that behaves oddly to the Animal Control Officer.
- Make sure your pets are vaccinated against rabies; do not let your pets roam freely.
- Keep your garbage securely covered.
- Keep your chimney capped and repair holes in attics, cellars and porches to help keep wild animals like bats and raccoons out of your home.

Quote
"Residents should take every precaution to avoid or stay away from an animal that is acting strangely. Call 911 immediately and we will dispatch a car to the scene to evaluate what is going on," said Police Lt. William Quigley.

New sewer commissioner appointed

The Board of Selectmen and remaining members of the Sewer Commission appointed Bryan Taylor Baldwin to the Sewer Commission on Tuesday to fill the seat vacated by Jim Dow who has moved out of town.

Baldwin comes to the commission with senior management expertise in real estate development and project management. The new commissioner stated he has attended approximately 70 percent of the Sewer Commission meetings over the past four years.

"I have observed the Sewer Commission in operation from a public viewpoint, and how it has evolved over time and succession of commissioners."
— Bryan Taylor Baldwin

"I have observed the Sewer Commission in operation from a public viewpoint, and how it has evolved over time and succession of commissioners," Baldwin wrote in his letter to the selectmen. "Like many of the branches of our government, there has been a migration towards greater transparency and stronger organization to which I would like to contribute."

Baldwin was the only candidate up for consideration at Tuesday's meeting. He will fill the position until the next town election.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

POLICE BEAT

Train service held up for man on tracks

Subject later arrested for trespassing

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Service on the Greenbush Line was held up for over an hour on Wednesday morning (Aug. 17) due to an incident in Cohasset involving a man on the tracks, police said.

At 10 a.m. Wednesday, police were investigating reports of a Cohasset man, identified as Brien Buckley, 24, of 37 Cushing St, acting erratically while walking on North Main Street near the train station. When officers approached Buckley to talk to him he fled in the woods, climbed the fence to the railroad right-of-way and started running down the tracks toward lower King Street, police said.

Cohasset police immediately notified the MBTA operations center to cease operation of the train. As it turned out the MBTA told Cohasset police that a train from South Station was approaching Cohasset and issued an emergency stop on that train. The train was held at the Cohasset station and the MBTA provided buses to transport passengers to Greenbush.

Buckley ran into the brush at the lower King Street grade crossing and disappeared, police said. Police established a perimeter and asked Weymouth and Hingham to send their K-9 units. In about 45 minutes, Hingham K-9 Officer James Foss arrived with Axel and within two minutes located Buckley who was hiding under some brush.

Buckley was ordered to the ground by Foss and Cohasset officers and he violently resisted, police said. Police took Buckley into custody and brought him to the station where he was evaluated by Cohasset paramedics and transported to South Shore Hospital for a mental health evaluation.

Buckley will be summonsed to court on charges of trespassing on the railroad right-of-way, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Unlicensed

A 49-year-old East Sandwich man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop on Monday (Aug. 8) at 7:16 p.m. An officer on patrol on Atlantic Avenue was behind a 2009 Mini Cooper when he observed that the plate appeared to be expired. He ran the plate, which checked out, but the computer revealed the operator's license had expired on his birthday in June. The officer stopped the car and issued the citation. The operation of the car was turned over to the driver's 21-year-old brother, who was properly licensed, police said.

Trespassing

A 19-year-old Cohasset man was charged with trespassing following an incident on Tuesday (Aug. 9) at 3:04 a.m. behind the old Joseph's Hardware building on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. An officer on patrol saw a young man behind the former business in the fenced-in area. He fled into the woods when he saw police. Cohasset called the Scituate K-9 and after about a 25-minute search, the dog located the teen who refused to comply with police commands. The dog then grabbed the teen by the foot and pulled him out of the woods. The 19-year-old Cohasset man, who was intoxicated, was charged with trespassing. He was also issued a $100 civil citation for possession of less than one ounce of marijuana.

Tree down

Cohasset police assisted Scituate police at 2:40 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 9) by stopping a 1992 Peterbuilt tractor-trailer truck that had taken a tree down in Scituate. An officer on patrol stopped the truck, which was being operated by a 44-year-old Marshfield man, at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street.

Irate woman

The security guard at Avalon called police last Tuesday (Aug. 9)at around 6:17 p.m. reporting that a woman became irate and yelled at him when he asked her to move from a restricted area. Police said the 33-year-old woman was looking around but was told she was on private property and had to move.

Verbal warning

A woman called police last Wednesday (Aug. 10) at around 12:30 p.m. after a group of guys in a landscape truck leered at her at Shaw's Plaza and made her feel uncomfortable. An officer in the area found the men who work for a landscaping business out of New Bedford, checked them for any warrants, and gave them a verbal warning.

Following up

A Margin Street resident called police after two teenage boys, about 17 years old, cut through his yard last Wednesday about 10:07 p.m., and chatted with his daughter and her friend about the fact they had been breaking into cars. They showed the girls a Coach handbag and a pair of sunglasses and said they lived in Duxbury. When the father came out, they ran off. Police checked cars near the Cohasset Harbor Inn and none appeared to have been broken into. Detectives are following up, police said.

Collisions

• At 8:35 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 11), police responded to a rear-end collision on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at the lights by Stop & Shop. Police said. A 2006 Ford Expedition, operated by a 55-year-old Scituate woman, had stopped at the light when a 1998 Dodge Caravan, operated by a 45-year-old Marshfield woman, hit her from behind. The Marshfield woman, who was cited for following too closely on a state highway, was transported to the hospital with a head injury. Her vehicle was towed. The Ford Expedition was drivable, police said.

• At 3:04 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 12), police responded to a rear-end collision on Hull Street. Police said when a 2003 GMC Envoy, operated by a 64-year-old Seekonk man, who was traveling toward Nantasket, stopped to allow a motorist out of a driveway, the vehicle was rear-ended by a 2006 Honda CRV, operated by a 58-year-old Hull woman. There were no injuries. The Honda was towed and the Hull woman was cited for following too closely.

Tailgating

At 7:15 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 11), a female caller reported that a 2005 GMC Sierra had been tailgating her and the operator was "flipping out." Police stopped the 21-year-old Scituate man driving the Sierra and spoke with him. He was given a verbal warning and the woman who called with the complaint was OK with that, police said.

Button activated

Last Thursday (Aug. 11) at about 8:12 p.m., police received a call from Toyota reporting they had received an emergency signal from a 2010 Lexus RX350. Police got in touch with the operator of the Lexus who explained earlier in the day she had activated the emergency button due to a flat tire and had not reset it.

Medical issues

A 75-year-old Weymouth man was brought to the station due to medical issues after Scituate police notified Cohasset police last Thursday (Aug. 11) around 9 p.m. that a 2002 Cadillac SUV headed north on Route 3A was being operated erratically. Cohasset police caught up with the vehicle near Good Sport and determined the operator was not fit to drive due to several medical issues. He was cited with failure to drive in marked lanes and was later released into the custody of his son, police said. Police contacted the Registry of Motor Vehicles to ask for a medical evaluation of the motorist.

Intoxicated

Police were unable to locate a woman who was refused service at Village Wine and Spirits because she appeared intoxicated last Friday (Aug. 12) at about 9:13 p.m. The clerk provided a description of her and reported she got into a vehicle and drove off.

Window smashed

Police investigated a report from a 911 caller (a 29-year-old Brighton woman) last Saturday (Aug. 13) at 6:18 p.m. that her driver's side window had been smashed by a pellet shot from a pellet gun on North Main Street. Four boys were in the driveway across the street, police said. Police responded and identified the boys, ages 11-13.The gun turned out to be a plastic toy gun. However, the boys, who were very remorseful, admitted to throwing a rock. Their parents were called and they will make restitution. The motorist was on her way to a wedding.

Harassed

A clerk at Starbucks reported to police that she had been harassed by a drive-thru customer last Sunday (Aug. 14) at 2:05 p.m.

House window

At 10:28 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 14), a Jerusalem Road resident reported that someone had driven by and shot at her house, smashing a pane in a front bay window. She reported the car fled toward Atlantic Avenue at a high rate of speed. Police did not find any evidence that a firearm had been used but determined that the window had been broken by a blunt instrument. They checked the area and the incident remains under investigation.

Earring lost

A guest at the Red Lion Inn last week reported losing an earring described as a large, painted gold earring with emeralds. Police said they have the description and should anyone turn it in, they will give the owner a call.

Giving back to the community

Dependable Cleaners CEO makes that cornerstone of business

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

"I figure our customers have done a lot for us. We should do something for them."
Christa Hagearty, Dependable Cleaners

Christa Hagearty's grandfather started Dependable Cleaners. Her father took over from him. As one of the third generation of owners, she grew up with a unique perspective of her family's business. "A lot of weekends when I was a kid, I'd go into the store. My father would introduce me to the customers and employees, tell me about them, where they came from. Being able to look at the whole picture — the customers, us, the employees, and the community — that really affected me."

Still, she didn't intend to join the family business after getting her MBA. "I tried a lot of other things," she said, including a stint at Walt Disney World. Then her uncle, who co-owned the business with her father, died suddenly and very young. Hagearty came in to help out. Thirteen years later she bought the business from her father, and is now president and CEO of a thriving company. "My dad still works for me, although I'd say he can pretty much do what he wants," she said, smiling.

The Read to Ride raffle is for children ages 6-15 who have read a book. Twelve bikes were given away over the course of 6 weeks.

Her sister, Carlyn Fawcett, also works for her. "She's a key person for me." Hagearty described Fawcett and her father as being amazing at operations, whereas she likes to look more 'big picture.' "It's a nice yin/yang gestalt," she said.

It's certainly working. Last year, Dependable Cleaners won recognition as one of the top 100 businesses owned by women in Massachusetts by the Boston Business Journal and The Commonwealth Institute.

In addition to business strategy, a large part of that big picture for Hagearty is community involvement. Dependable Cleaners has a long history of community involvement. Starting in 1944, for instance, they would clean United States flags for free. Hagearty, a Cohasset resident, sees herself as continuing a tradition. She also wanted to do more. "When I was getting my MBA," she said, "I did an analysis of how we interacted with the community. I didn't think we were doing enough. When I came into the business, I wanted to create more of a wellness contribution."

She started a few different programs. The first program's a natural fit for a cleaning business. Hagearty and Dependable Cleaners support the Boston Chapter of Dress for Success, an organization that provides disadvantaged women with the tools needed to begin or advance their careers. Among these tools are donated business suits and clothes for women, so they feel confident while on interviews. "But it's not just suits for interviews," Hagearty said. "If a woman gets the job, we provide one week's worth of outfits and accessories, like stockings and shoes and jewelry." Dependable Cleaners cleans and presses these clothes for free.

As an outgrowth of her work for Dress for Success, Hagearty started a second program just within Dependable Cleaners. She dubs it the "Clean Suit Stimulus" program, and she had the idea for it after a conversation with a customer who'd been unemployed. The customer knew she needed to pick up clothes that had been at Dependable over a month, but she admitted she couldn't pay the bill. Hagearty forgave the bill and decided to make it company policy to clean and press three suits free of charge for people who have been hit by the recession and are looking for work.

"I figure our customers have done a lot for us," Hagearty said. "We should do something for them."

The third program Hagearty started taps directly into her personal passions. It's called Read to Ride, and it runs in each of the 16 communities where Dependable Cleaners has a shop. The program encourages kids ages six to 15 to read by giving them a chance to win a new bike and helmet for each book they read. "I was a big reader as a child," Hagearty said. "It helped me be resilient after my parents divorced."

Christa Hagearty of Cohasset and CEO of Dependable Cleaners has helped run Read to Ride for the past 13 years. Twelve bikes were given away to readers ages 6-15 during the course of 6 weeks. STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Resilience is a big issue for Hagearty. "There's research on the subject. For children to be resilient, they need one adult who believes in them. They need to be able to see another world, and to have imagination and creativity." She said her grandmother filled that role of the adult who believed in her, and that her reading helped her with the rest. She wants to pass that gift on to other kids besides her three, two girls and a boy, all in Cohasset Public Schools.

"I've heard from parents that it gives kids incentive from a competitive aspect," Hagearty said. "Parents hear their kids saying to each other, 'I'm going to read more than you.'"

Hagearty learned about the basic framework she turned into Read to Ride through a program in Vermont, then put her own twists on it. She's partnered with area schools, libraries, and organizations like the Boys and Girls Club.

This year 12 kids won bikes and helmets through the program. In Hingham, seven-year-old Cosette Yungton won a bike and helmet. Her winning book was The Mystery of Camp Creepy, by Lucinda Landon. "We received an email about the contest because we're on their email list," said Sabina Yungton, Cosette's mother. "I told Cosette the date the contest started, and we went to the library, and she started reading. I told her the more books she reads, the more chances she would have. She started reading Memorial Day weekend, and I think she was reading about 10 chapter books a week. The third week we got the call that she won, and she was thrilled. It was a really good motivator. She hasn't stopped reading. We're eagerly waiting on getting her bike. She's looking forward to one without training wheels."

Some of the other winners read as many as 50 books, and Hagearty reported that this year, Dependable Cleaners drew winners from over 1,600 books read. Children participating in the program over the last 13 years have read over 56,000 books. "The thank you notes we get are so cute," Hagearty said.

She's very proud of being able to reward all that reading, and happy that other organizations are doing similar things. "When we started Read to Ride 13 years ago, there were no other programs like it," Hagearty said. "Since then the Red Sox and the Bruins have done things like it. The more programs out there that inspire kids to read, the better."

For Michele, one of the greatest advances in cancer care has been the one on the South Shore.

When Michele needed treatment for breast cancer, she was thankful that she could receive world-renowned care at Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in clinical affiliation with South Shore Hospital. And she had confidence knowing that our specialists, focused on cancer, were providing the expert care she needed. But she also found something more: how important it was to be treated in a place that not only cared for her cancer, but also for her life.

"It's a place filled with hope," said Michele. And having all the integrated services she needed close to home helped her maintain a sense of normalcy through her treatments. "With two small kids, I don't know how I would have managed otherwise," she explained. "Having this level of cancer care on the South Shore — it means everything to me."

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr emailed the petitioners on Monday to let them know that the Board had a full agenda for Tuesday night and would have to table the petition discussion to the public comment period.

"I believe the board will want to discuss this petition," Carr wrote. "If that is the case I will schedule time with ample notice for discussion at a future date convenient for all parties."

At the meeting, Carr told the crowd, "I thank you for bringing this to our attention."

McMorris stepped forward and expressed her disappointment in the Board.

The petition, McMorris said, has brought together "a diverse group of residents who would never have dreamed they would find themselves agreeing on the same issue."

McMorris went on to express this group's "outrage" over the Board not reinstating the commissioners up for reappointment at their July 12 meeting.

While the petitioners are protesting the unseating of three commissioners, McMorris said she got involved in the petition because of one ConComm member in particular: Debbie Cook.

"I have personal knowledge of Debbie Cook's contribution to the community," she said. "We both worked on the open space committee... I also worked with her to spearhead the campaign in Cohasset to become one of the first towns in Massachusetts to adopt the Community Preservation Act."

For the things the Preservation Act allowed the town to accomplish, McMorris said, "We can thank Debbie Cook."

In a phone interview, McMorris told the Cohasset Mariner that Cook "has been very involved and very giving, and didn't deserve to be treated that way. She clearly didn't see it coming. None of them did."

McMorris told the Board that she feels the commissioners were wrongfully "booted out" and deserve an apology.

"We look to the Board of Selectmen to be out front," said McMorris. "There seems to be genuine confusion about the role of the Board of Selectmen and its powers."

She added that under the strong town manager form of government, the Board of Selectmen should have limited authority or powers that are specifically defined. When it came to the Cat Dam Notice of Intent (NOI), she felt that the Board should have "stepped back."

> "There seems to be genuine confusion about the role of the Board of Selectmen and its powers."
> — Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street

"They seem to have confused their authority with that of the Conservation Commission and interfered with the process," McMorris said.

The petition calls for "an independent commission appointed by the Troika to review all actions of the selectmen as they relate to Cat Dam and the jurisdiction of the conservation commission." (Troika is the name of the committee comprised of the Chairman of the Selectmen, the Chairman of the Advisory Board and the Town Moderator.)

This investigation would "seek to clarify the boundaries and authority" of the Board, said McMorris. "I look forward to further discussion."

Agnes McCann of Doane Street was the second and final public commenter of the evening. McCann stated that her role as a library trustee has taught her to "respect the process. The Board of Selectmen did not respect the process."

McCann claimed that the Board appointed special interest members "without warning to the Conservation Commission" while the former commissioners were "replaced in a huff."

"I think that's shameful," McCann concluded. "And shame on you for doing it."

Both McMorris and McCann received applause from the crowd during their commentary.

Karen Quigley stood up and asked the Board if the petition will be on the agenda at the next Selectmen meeting on Sept. 13.

Carr told the public at the beginning of the session that their comments would "be taken seriously." As the commentary concluded, he said that the Board would take these things into consideration. It was left unclear whether or not the petition will be brought up again at the next meeting, or anytime soon.

Food Pantry collection planned

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Enjoy the moments

Happy August 19th Cohasset, how are you doing? Each week that goes by so darn fast reminds me and in turn, reminds me to keep encouraging every one of us to slow down, take a look around when you can and create memories of the Summer, 2011! Big moments, small moments and moments that mean so much to you but others may say no big deal too are ALL the memories you want to have forever. Enjoy every day and hug and tell all who are a part of your life how much they mean to you, life just changes way too quickly to not let all of those special people know how loved and liked they are.

I would love to be able to share some celebration and event news in the next few weeks in addition to school updates, photos and news to share with the community. Send them all in to aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Food pantry

I am very happy to be sharing this event with all of you, as it is a needed and valued program that is used by so many. The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food Pantry on Sat., Aug. 27 at Stop and Shop. The staff of the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products, soaps and toiletries prior to the Labor Day Weekend. DTC volunteers will be at the Stop and Shop from 9 a.m. to 1 pm passing out lists of needed items and collecting food donations. The Food Pantry also welcomes donations of cash. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance!

Additional volunteers are needed to fill two-hour slots; please call Gail Collins at 781-383-9789 if you're able to help. It would feel good for all of us to be able to donate items and/or money if you can and one great way is to look for coupons that are "buy one, get one free", "buy one, get one half off," etc. and you can keep item and give one to the Pantry. It always feels good to "pay it forward" to those in need and also, sometimes just because.

Vo-tech

Congratulations to Cohasset resident Kenny Thayer who was elected in July as Vice-Chairman of the South Shore Regional School Committee. The South Shore Regional School Committee is the governing body for South Shore Vocational Technical High School. Kenny has served on the school committee since 2008. Prior to his service on the committee, he served for over 10 years as a program advisor to SSVT's Automotive program. Great job Kenny, they are very lucky to have you on board!

Reunion

Congratulations to the Cohasset High School Class of '41, which celebrated their 70th class reunion at the Cohasset Golf Club on Thursday, August 18th. I would love to share some photos and/or stories if you have them.

Physicals

Fall high school sports physicals will be held in the high school health office on Mon. Aug. 22nd starting at 7:30 a.m.. ALL students participating in a high school sport must have a physical on file in the nurse's office that is dated Aug.2010 or after in order to participate in a fall sport. High school physicals are free of charge and will be performed by Dr. Steve Golden or his staff. No need to sign up ahead, just come to the health office on the 22nd at 7:30, students are taken in the order in which they arrive.

Happy tails

Save the datefor the first Happy Tails WALK to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter. Show your support and walk at beautiful, historic Bare Cove Park in Hingham on Sunday, Sept. 11 from 10 am until noon. Enjoy up to 3 miles of paved, gentle paths with stunning water views. Help the Shelter boost fundraising by gathering sponsors — a GREAT summer activity for kids with a passion for helping animals. Prize for the person to bring in the largest total donation collection for the Shelter. Fee is $25/participant over age 10. For safety, all dogs MUST be leashed (no extra-long/flexi-leashes), be 100 percent dog-friendly, and be up-to-date on their rabies vaccination. Register by Aug. 26 to guarantee your event tee-shirt. More information and online registration at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org. For corporate sponsorship information, please call (781) 544-4533.

Well, that is the news for this week Cohasset. Make sure to get the news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Summer Playground spells out summer fun

Rec. Dept. picnic celebrates last day of camp

By Erin Dale

Summer fun might be coming to an end, but the kids enrolled in the Summer Playground program at Deer Hill School ended it on a high note during their last day cookout on Friday, August 12. The Recreation Department pulled out all the stops, supplying a bouncy house and inviting a very special guest: the Boston Bruins' mascot, Blades.

Kids of all ages, from 3 to 12 (and, yes, grown-ups too) swarmed the brown bear in the Bruins jersey, reaching up to slap high-five and pet his fuzzy head. The mascot gave plenty of high-fives back, posed for photos and signed autographs.

Recreation Director Ted Carroll said that this wasn't the first time Blades has made an appearance at Summer Playground.

"We like to keep the tradition going," he said.

About 255 kids attended this year's program, said Carroll, which runs five days a week for seven weeks each summer. The younger kids attend half-day, from 9 a.m. to noon., while the older kids go from 9 to 3 p.m.

The kids enjoy "traditional summer rec. activities," Carroll said, such as arts and crafts, sports and field trips.

"It's a safe environment for a fun-filled summer," said Meka-Mani Carmody, whose daughter Darbie attended. "These are dedicated and caring instructors. I asked my daughter what she liked best about rec. camp, and she said, 'Everything.'"

Every child the Cohasset Mariner spoke with echoed Darbie's sentiment, including 10 year-old Shane Murphy, 6-year-old Jamie Smith, and 8-year-old Jack Connell. These boys, who had just met Blades and were starting up a basketball game, also agreed that their favorite part of all was "this day."

Counselor Nick Wallace, a Curry college student from Hull, was joining the boys on the basketball court.

"The kids are awesome and tons of fun," he said, adding that it's one of the best summer jobs he's ever had. "I get to balance work and fun, and the kids help with that."

Nine-year-old Lauren Fein, who has been coming to Summer Playground since she 3, said that she had fun learning street hockey, rollerblading, and seeing shows at the Music Circus. Her friend Abby Oliver, also age 9, said that she liked swimming and doing talent shows. Both girls, along with Gillian Perrone, 8, are already excited about next year.

Patrice Smith said the same of her children, Shea, 8, Jamie, 6,and Meghan, 3. "It's a wonderful program for the kids and is run with the utmost professionalism. The kids can't wait to do it next year."

"The program gets better and better each year, especially with Ted running it," said Kim Mulcahy, who enrolled her two boys, Shane, 4, and Bernie, 8.

Town Manager Michael Coughlin and assistant Jennifer Oram stopped by to take in the festivities. 10-year-old Xander and 7-year-old Avery Oram were also Summer Playground participants.

"The Recreation Department does an amazing job; we're fortunate to have a great staff," said Oram. "Speaking personally as a parent, my children have had amazing summers because of them."

"Ted is the unsung hero of the Recreation Department. This is a truly unique program," said Maria Osbourne, who serves on the Recreation board and enrolled her kids Kyle, 8, and Mackenzie, 9. "I did this when I was growing up; it's nice to have my kids here doing the same program."

Remembering 'Emmie'

Family fundraises to raise awareness for SUDC

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Danielle and Scott Hitchcock of Marshfield are parents to three healthy, beautiful little girls. But the young couple will be quick to tell you that they had another daughter who is still very much a part of their family.

On March 1, 2010, the couple put their 2-1/2-year-old daughter Emerson Lily in bed for her routine afternoon nap. When they checked on her a short while later, they were stunned to find that the unthinkable had occurred; "Emmie," an otherwise healthy toddler, had passed away in her sleep.

The cause of death was ruled to be Sudden Unexplained Death in Childhood, a "cousin" to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome that "is not an illness," said Danielle. "It's a diagnosis of exclusion. It means they've looked at everything but still don't know what caused it. There's no reason for it to happen; there were no warnings of any type. Emerson was healthy. We have no idea why she didn't wake up that day."

SUDC is defined as the sudden, unexpected death of a child over the age of 12 months according to the SUDC Program, an organization that provides support and advocacy for families reeling from a child's mysterious death. The organization reports that SUDC occurs in 1.5 of every 100,000 children and has no known cause or prevention.

To honor Emerson's memory and aid SUDC's research, the Hitchcock family recently created the Emerson Lily Hitchcock Memorial Foundation. Their first big fundraisers are a Quincy harbor cruise on Friday, Aug. 19, and the "Clipping for a Cause" cut-a-thon at the Rudolph Adamo salon in Cohasset on Monday, Aug. 29.

The Rudolph Adamo salon in Cohasset will hold a "Clipping for a Cause" cut-a-thon on Monday, Aug. 29 in memory of Emerson Lily Hitchcock, pictured here, and to aid SUDC's research. COURTESY PHOTO

The fundraisers will contribute to both the SUDC Program and Marshfield Kids at Play, a non-profit group that will help the Hitchcock family build a picnic pavilion to be named for Emerson.

"It's a reminder that Emerson was here and is part of the community," said Danielle.

"People see us as they used to, as a family with three girls," she said. "I want to remind them that we have another daughter."

Danielle hopes for a significant turnout at both events.

"The community support has been great," she said. "With the fundraising, I feel like we're doing something for Emerson. Obviously the more people that come, the bigger a success it will be."

It's a small comfort for a family still reeling from the loss of their little girl.

"A year and a half later, it's still hard," Danielle said, adding that the family has been through countless rounds of genetic testing to search for some kind of medical explanation for Emmie's death. Danielle, who was pregnant with fourth daughter Avery at the time, said, "I now look at my healthy 11-month-old and wonder." So far, no pre-existing genetic condition has been found.

For the Hitchcock family, not knowing is the worst part. Even the daily tasks of parenting have them constantly on edge.

"Most people put their kids down for a nap, and it's time to relax or do some laundry," said Danielle. "For us, sleeping is terrifying."

After the nightmare they've lived through, the Hitchcock family enjoyed a recent triumph. Danielle's husband, Scott, completed the New York City Triathlon in honor of Emerson.

Completing the athletic feat was Scott's "way of dealing with things," Danielle said. Although "it was a tough course," Danielle describes her husband's crossing the finish line as "thrilling."

For more information, visit www.emerson-lily.org.

'CLIPPING FOR A CAUSE'

Cohasset salon cut-a-thon

The Aug. 29 cut-a-thon at the Rudolph Adamo salon will be a family affair. Danielle Hitchcock's sister, Jill Tonello, works at the Cohasset salon.

Manager Alexis Bulman is happy to contribute to the cause, opening her salon's doors on a day when it would normally be closed.

The salon will be open from 3-8 p.m. and will offer a raffle and refreshments on top of deeply discounted haircuts.

"Haircuts that usually cost $45 will go for $25," said Bulman. "It's a huge price break. Even if customers are just coming in for a haircut, they will be contributing to a good cause."

Bulman hopes to fill the salon's appointment book for the day.

"We want the day to be successful," she said. "It would be unbelievable and beneficial if we were booked solid."

Bulman has posted both flyers in public and messages on Facebook to encourage folks to make appointments, though she also said she would happily welcome walk-ins that day.

If you'd like to get a haircut for a worthy cause, call the Rudolph Adamo Salon at 781-383-1550, located at 7 Stagecoach Way in Cohasset.

Marjot Grant funds student harbor research

What do you think about when you fall asleep? Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research student Tucker Oddleifson considers the quality of his local harbor's water quality. This was the beginning of his Marjot granted research on the Enterococci concentration and speciation in Cohasset Harbor's sediment.

The mission of the Marjot Foundation is to support independent scientific research for public high school students. Thus far, Marjot has granted funding to 25 students from Maine, Massachusetts and Vermont. The grant application process, however, is not as simple as it may seem. The goal is to encourage student research by giving students the experience of writing proposals and designing professional reports to present to the scientific community.

Under the mentorship of Cohasset High School teacher and CSCR leader Dr. Ann Thomae, Tucker began his Marjot Proposal in February 2011. After much literature-based research on procedure methods and support for his project's significance and revisions of budget estimates and hypotheses, Tucker finally submitted his final proposal for the June 1 deadline and was accepted.

The premise of his research proposal was to study the bacteria levels in water compared to the sediment in the harbor. Tucker's hypothesis is as follows: "The Enterococci concentration and speciation in sediment will directly correlate with that of ambient water Enterococci."

With inspiration from a scientific study and essay conducted in California, Tucker's assertion could lead to evidence that sediment is in fact re-suspending indicator bacteria, such as Enterococci, into Cohasset Harbor's waters and in effect possibly causing deterioration of harbor conditions and harm to humans.

By conducting three sampling events throughout the summer at the Cohasset Yacht Club, the Cohasset Sailing Club, and the Cohasset Harbor Cove, the hope is that he can prove the existence of Enterococci in the sediment and that its concentration correlates closely to that of bacteria levels in the surrounding water. Thus far there is not enough data for result confirmation, however there is definitely Enterococci in the harbor sediment.

In this research scenario, the lab analysis is not the only demanding part of the equation. Due to the fact that bacteria dies once exposed to ultraviolet radiation all samples must be collected before sunrise. With the aid of CSCR student Brendan Kearney, Tucker is collecting his samples during the painfully early hours when the sun cannot sabotage his research and when the tide permits the mephitic sediment to be smelled. The hard work continues back at the CSCR lab, analyzing the samples using several different methodical processes.

Tucker chose to study the underlying sediment in Cohasset harbor due to the fact that it has yet to be examined, and studying its role in the harbor's Enterococci levels could explain the high bacteria counts that have been found in overlying waters.

Since February, Tucker has done much prepping, researching, practicing, finalizing, and analyzing to make his studies thorough and significant. He says of his experience, "I have really learned a lot from conducting this study and am very appreciative of the Marjot Foundation's generosity and support."

PJT Memorial Golf Tournament sets new records

Tournament Commissioner Brian Lewis hands Julie and Paul Trendowicz (PJ's parents) a signed photo of all of the golfers.

Raises $16K for charitable foundation

By Greg Smith
Special to the Mariner

Roughly one month ago on Friday, July 22, friends of Paul "PJ" Trendowicz held the fifth annual PJT Memorial Golf Tournament. Despite temperatures soaring over 100 degrees, the annual outing saw more than 100 golfers make their way down to Pembroke Country Club for a day of golf, fun and remembrance.

This past Saturday, Aug. 13, marked nine years to the day that Cohasset resident Paul "PJ" Trendowicz passed away in a tragic swimming accident at Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue. Each summer, friends of PJ Trendowicz and board members of the PJT Memorial Foundation Inc. organize the annual golf outing as a way to carry out Paul's legacy.

PJ will long be remembered for his innate ability to bring people together and the attendance at this year's event is purely a reflection of that. The 100-plus golfers and the additional 50 reception guests included PJ's childhood friends from New Jersey and Cohasset and his high school classmates from BC High. Much of the success of the tournament can be attributed to Commissioner Brian Lewis, who has noted that the tournament has been able to grow every year due to the camaraderie of the day and the spirit of Paul Trendowicz. "We are now seeing friends of friends asking to be part of this special day" said Lewis, adding that, "Paul's fun and outgoing nature really makes this day what it is."

With credit to a wildly successful silent auction run by PJT Memorial Foundation board members, Kristin Sheerin, Arianna Dedes and Mackenzie Holway, this year's event raised more than $16,000 for the PJT Memorial Foundation — a record amount. Incorporated this past year, the mission and purpose of this foundation is to honor the life and friendship of PJ Trendowicz and to continue his legacy by distributing funds in his name to local charities whose mission's align with PJ's commitment to community service and youth outreach.

Board members Ben Kinch (Secretary), Brian Lewis (Treasurer), Dan Trendowicz, Joe Sugar, Kristin Sheerin, Arianna Dedes, Mackenzie Holway, Jake Morgan, Matt Winter, Steve Kiely, Alex Johnston, Tom Digan, Tim Straughan, Greg Harrington and myself would like to thank all those who contributed to this record-setting day, especially our local businesses: The Stop & Shop Floral Department, The Fruit Center (Hingham), Bumble Bee Landing, Dar Collins of Hingham, Blooming Gardurns (Hull), Cohasset Village Greenery, Thistle & Honey (Hingham), Honor always (Hingham), Phin's Restaurant (Scituate), Twist, Rudolph Adamo Salon, JJ's Dairy Hut, All The Best Food Store, The Red Lion Inn, Atlantica and Alma Nove (Hingham). The overwhelming and generous contributions from PJ's friends, family and community are sincerely appreciated as we seek to carry out the life and memory of our dear friend PJ.

PJ will long be remembered for his innate ability to bring people together and the attendance at this year's event is purely a reflection of that.

PJ Trendowicz was a "Man for Others" who was always willing to help someone in need it is remarkable to see that he is still doing so today.

For more information on the annual PJT Golf Tournament or if you wish to make a tax-deductible contribution to the PJT Memorial Foundation, please reach out to us at thepjtfoundation@gmail.com, on Facebook under "The PJT Memorial Foundation Inc." or at The PJT Memorial Foundation Inc., P.O. Box 51447, Boston, MA 02205.

Greg Smith, who grew up in Cohasset, was a classmate of PJ's at BC High, where they graduated in 2002. He first met PJ when he moved from New Jersey in fourth grade. Greg says it is so important to him that PJ's memory lives on and that people in the Cohasset community are aware of the golf tournament tradition. Greg is also president of the PJT Memorial Foundation.

OUR VIEW

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school around the corner, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news from Town Hall.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpg attachments.

We still accept news by fax and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham, above the Upper Crust.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

- Email: mford@wickedlocal.com
- FAX: 781-741-2931
- In person: at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., above the Upper Crust
- Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043
- Sports news email: wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Try to have your news to the Mariner by noon Wednesday for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better. If letters come by email we can stretch that deadline a few hours.

We have forms available for wedding and engagement announcements with complete instructions at the Mariner office.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933; or staff reporter Erin Dale, at 781-741-2935.

We couldn't do our job without help from the community. So let us hear from you!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Newly paved roads need to be lined ASAP

The Mariner obtained a copy of this letter to the Town Manager and Board of Selectman at Town Hall.

When I saw evidence that fresh lining had been put down on some roads I thought, "Good!" But no – it wasn't that good.

I suggest that as part of your responsibility each of you take a short drive from Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road to Atlantic Avenue past the Cohasset Harbor Inn to Elm Street. Do this say twice – on separate days between 8:30-9:30 a.m.

Hopefully you will be as fortunate as I have been because I haven't stuck anything – not a car, baby carriage, jogger, dog walker, pedestrian, parked commercial vehicle, etc.

It would help to preserve our good fortune and protect lives and property if that roadway was lined. You will enhance that possibility by seeing that this job is done – and soon!

You are, I believe, depending too much on the care and experience of local drivers. This is a narrow, winding and hilly road. Your responsibility is to make this road as safe as it can be. Please do it now. –Robert C. Ernst Sr., 60 Elm St.

COMMENTARY

Taking the easy way out

SARA HOLLINGSHEAD

Editor's note: Sara Hollingshead worked with the Hingham Journal and Cohasset Mariner as an intern this summer. She gave the editor Mary Ford a hand-written thank you note on her last day last week.

Sending an email may be easier, but a phone call or visit is more personal and allows for true emotion to be shared and understood.

With the announcement of Google+ earlier this summer, social networking sites have taken off since Myspace was first established in 2003. Since then, numerous social networking sites, including Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn, just to name a few, have been established and hundreds of millions of users have created profiles, became friends, tweeted and checked-in. And with Smartphones, it makes social networking and communicating that much easier as up to the minute updates are available at your fingertips at any moment. But what does this mean for society?

Sure, it means we're able to find out where our friends are at any moment, ask a question and get a response in an instant, and see what our 'friends,' who we haven't seen in 10 years are up to, but what happens when it comes time to actually make a phone call?

As a society, we are taking the easy way out with communicating as we are beginning to depend on technological communication rather than oral and written. Sending an email may be easier, but a phone call or visit is more personal and allows for true emotion to be shared and understood. Communication is a life skill, and although social networking sites are reshaping the way we communicate, the old way of communicating-picking up the phone or writing a letter, is still relevant and useful.

As a rising college senior, I've had the chance to meet with numerous career advisors and potential bosses; the most common piece of advice I have heard when applying for a job, is the role that a handwritten note can play. An email thanking an employee for an interview is nice, but receiving a handwritten note allows one to stand out as it shows a professional yet personal touch.

While I do my fair share of texting and emailing, I have come to value phone calls and letters; when I'm away at school, even though I email my mom almost everyday, just hearing my mom's voice can have a positive impact my day. And getting a handwritten note from my Nana or friend really shows they care and seeing a letter in my mailbox brightens my day.

Although an understanding of social networking is becoming useful, as businesses are now looking to hire 'Social Media Reps' to reach audiences in a new way, we need to take a step back and re-evaluate our own communication skills and remember the old way of communicating and in doing so, we may just revamp our communication skills.

BRIEFLY

Brush chipping

Residential Brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area on Saturday, Aug. 27, from 7:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

No trees over 10 inches in diameter. No stumps, firewood, briars or weeds. No contractors.

Clothing collection

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation announced the placement of a clothing donation drop-off box in Cohasset, in the Aubuchon Hardware parking lot at 823 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., off Route 3A.

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation collects donations of lightly used clothing of all types for men, women and children, shoes, sneakers, accessories, handbags and jeans. They turn donations into funds for the mentoring programs, by selling them in bulk to local thrift stores. Fundraising projects like the clothing collection program are crucial in helping Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies match more children with adult mentors. For more information, visit the website at www.bbbsfoundation.org or call 800-483-5503.

Food drive for Food Pantry

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food Pantry on Sat., Aug. 27 at Stop & Shop. The staff of the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products, soaps and toiletries prior to the Labor Day Weekend. Committee volunteers will be at the Stop &Shop from 9 a.m. to 1 pm. passing out lists of needed items and collecting food donations. The Food Pantry also welcomes donations of cash. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance! Additional volunteers are needed to fill two-hour slots; please call Gail Collins at 781-383-9789 if you're able to help.

Postponed: DEP site visit to Cat Dam

On the heels of the recent appeal of the Conservation Commission's approval of the Notice of Intent for Cat Dam, the Department of Environmental Protection scheduled an onsite meeting to evaluate the situation.

At Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, Town Manager Mike Coughlin said that he has to call the DEP to reschedule the planned visit, initially scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 1 at 2 p.m. Both Coughlin and Selectman Ted Carr have conflicts on that date and will not be able to attend.

A new date has yet to be been scheduled.

Why saltwater in the meadow?

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Phragmites is a reed type plant that thrives in a fresh water environment, but doesn't like saltwater very much.

Jacobs Meadow and Stuff — We've spoken a lot over the past year about the new channel at the Legion that drains Jacobs Meadow. As you probably know, at Elm Street the new channel disappears into a network of underground pipes that carries the water from Jacobs Meadow to the Cohasset Harbor. At the harbor, the Town has constructed a new outfall structure that collects the water from the underground pipes and lets it flow into the harbor through a six-foot-high by ten-foot-wide fully controlled vertical sluice gate.

That's all fine and we have spoken about this new device many times. But, there is a flip side to the advantages of the new sluice gate. Not only will the flow of storm water to the harbor be significantly improved, but the flow of water into the meadow can also be fully controlled. If the objective is to get storm water out of the meadow, why would the Town want to get water back into the meadow? Believe it or not, there are times when it is desirable to let the saltwater from the harbor enter back into the meadow. But of course, we don't want saltwater to flow in to the meadow when the meadow is full of storm water.

So why do we ever want saltwater in the meadow? The answer is very straightforward. Jacobs Meadow is a salt marsh. This means that the plant life and marine life that should be there, if it were in a completely natural state, would be the life that you would normally find in a marsh that has a mixture of salt and fresh waters. If the only water that is in the marsh is fresh water, then the life that thrives in a mixture of salt and fresh water will disappear. Thus, it will no longer be a salt marsh. So having salt water enter the marsh is necessary to maintain the ecology and balance of the salt marsh.

Little Harbor Project — Most residents from the Little Harbor area seem to be quite pleased with the nice newly paved roads. One resident told us that when he came home late one night the day the paving was completed and he thought he was in the wrong place. The road was just too smooth. However, nice the change from "torn up" to paved was, there are still a few small details that need to be tended to before the paving is truly finished. One of these details is dressing up the edges of the roads.

When roads are paved, often the height of the road is changed to better direct rainwater away from the driving lanes. This change in road height usually requires us to add soil to the edge of the road and reseed the area to re-establish the grass. This week we inked a contract with Reale Associates, Inc. to proceed with the edge of roadwork. By the time you read this, you might see their trucks adding loam and seeding selected areas beside the road. In order that the grass becomes properly established, the contractor is required to maintain the newly seeded area until the grass becomes established. Pretty soon, even the road edges will be up to snuff.

HEALTH NOTES

Why pain is such a pain

STEVE BOBO

Pain is the most common reason for physician consultation in the United States. Pain is a major symptom in many medical conditions, and can significantly interfere with a person's quality of life and general functioning.

Exercise to alleviate pain. You are what you happen to be. As we try to age gracefully, the process is sometimes hindered considerably by events that change us to divert completely our intended healthy condition. For example, a sprain or even a broken bone can completely alter our plans for our comfort, recreation or even our careers.

Some form of pain is as much a part of the human condition as the common cold. Most adults will experience an acute episode of pain in a lifetime. The second most common cause of missed workdays due to illness and the most common cause of disability. Fortunately, most pain sufferers recover completely within days or weeks. However, for the small number of individuals who do not recover within a few weeks, the severity of pain can limit one's ability to walk or even stand, whereas some ailments such as a large herniated disc can be completely painless.

Sources of pain such as stubbing a toe, burning a finger, putting iodine on a cut, and bumping the "funny bone" motivate us to withdraw from potentially damaging situations, protect a damaged body part while it heals, and avoid those situations in the future. Most pain resolves itself promptly once the painful stimulus is removed and the body has healed, but sometimes pain persists despite removal of the stimulus and apparent healing of the body; and sometimes pain arises in the absence of any detectable stimulus, damage or disease. Pain is the most common reason for physician consultation in the United States. Pain is a major symptom in many medical conditions, and can significantly interfere with a person's quality of life and general functioning. Psychological factors such as social support, hypnotic suggestion, excitement in sport or war and distraction can significantly modulate pain's intensity or unpleasantness.

Exercises are typically necessary to rehabilitate and help alleviate pain. Importantly, a regular exercise routine often provides the means to help avoid recurrences of pain, and helps reduce severity and duration of potential future episodes. Generally, an exercise program should include stretching, strengthening, dynamic stabilization exercises, and low impact aerobic exercising such as walking, bicycling or swimming.

Stretching: Almost everyone can benefit from stretching the soft tissues, the muscles, ligaments and tendons around the source of pain or discomfort. Many contiguous muscles, ligaments and tendons are designed to move, and limitations in motion can accentuate pain. Patients with chronic pain may find it takes weeks or months of stretching to mobilize the soft tissues around an aching muscle, but one will find that meaningful and sustained relief that follows the increase in motion.

Back pain: Hamstring muscles seem to play a key role in low back pain. Hamstring tightness limits motion in the pelvis and can place it in a position that increases stress across the low back. Stretching hamstring muscles typically helps decrease the intensity of a patient's back pain and the frequency of recurrences. A hamstring stretching routine should include applying pressure to lengthen the hamstring muscle for 30-45 seconds at a time, one to two times each day. The pressure on the muscle should be applied evenly and bouncing should be avoided, since a bouncing motion will trigger a spasm response in the muscle being stretched. Simply bend forward at the waist, with legs relatively straight, and try to touch the toes and hold this position.

With time the muscle will gradually lengthen, reducing stress to the sore area. Stretching should not be linked to other exercises, since those exercises may not be done on a daily basis. In order to make stretching a part of one's daily regimen, it is best to stretch every morning when getting up and before going to bed. Think of it as good hygiene.

FOR THE RECORD

Not too early to think 'Pink'

GREGORY MATHIS

A big part of last year's successful coverage was the inspiring and compelling stories readers shared in their own words.

We're getting ready to Paint the Town Pink, again.

Many will recall receiving a rather unusual copy of their hometown weekly newspaper the last week of September 2010 and the first week in October 2009. The color of the newsprint those weeks was pink, as we kicked off our Paint the Town Pink campaign.

This will be our third year of raising awareness and funds during Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October through our newspapers and websites across GateHouse Media.

October may not be on everyone's mind just yet, but I wanted to get people thinking about the cause and the campaign early this year.

A big part of last year's successful coverage was the inspiring and compelling stories readers shared in their own words. Breast cancer survivors and those touched by the disease through family and friends provided us with insight and personal stories that truly took our coverage beyond the statistics and the technology.

We're looking for your personal stories once again. In the next couple of weeks, you will see a reader callout in your community newspaper, as well as on your Wicked Local website, asking readers to share their stories.

As part of the month-long coverage we have planned, we would like to profile local people living with, battling and beating breast cancer. We're asking readers to share their stories of strength, faith, perseverance and determination.

We know for many breast cancer survivors and their families these are private matters. We also know that many of your stories will inspire others facing similar struggles and give those people strength, faith and determination in their time of need.

Like the past two years, a portion of the advertising revenue generated through a special advertising program, as well as part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold, will be donated to a worthy cause supporting the battle against breast cancer. This year, we're partnering with the Susan G. Komen for the Cure Massachusetts group. We've enjoyed two very successful years partnering with the American Cancer Society, but this year we'll be working with the local Susan G. Komen affiliate.

We believe it's a win-win situation as we draw awareness to the disease and help Susan G. Komen for the Cure raise funds in its fight to cure breast cancer.

Many of us from GateHouse Media will be participating in the 19th annual Komen Massachusetts Race for the Cure on Sunday, Oct. 30, and we'll be highlighting some of the programs and work being done by the Komen organization as part of our Paint the Town Pink coverage during Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October.

Although this disease still carries with it pain and suffering — and heartbreak for some families — great strides are being made in the detection and treatment of breast cancer. And while there still is no cure, more and more people are beating breast cancer and living to tell the tale.

Those are the types of stories we'd like to highlight during the month of October in our newspapers and on our websites — your stories.

There's a lot to do between now and then, so keep an eye out for our reader callout and I hope you consider sharing your story.

Please send me email with any questions or comments at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

WILLCUTT CORNER

Construction consulting firm hired

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

In an important first step toward the completion of Willcutt Commons, the approximately 18,000 square foot senior center proposed for Sohier Street, the Social Service League has engaged the services of KVAssociates Inc. to facilitate the construction of the facility. As Project Manager, KVA will act as the central point of contact in a many-pronged process, ensuring that all timelines, budgets and quality standards are met. Appointed representatives from the company will provide input and communication with regard to all aspects of the project.

KVA was chosen after a thorough vetting process. Once a Request for Qualifications was issued publicly, 16 project management experts submitted portfolios for review. The Social Service League then pared that number down to the three organizations with industry experience that most closely matched the Willcutt Commons Project and needs of the Cohasset community. The finalists were invited to make full presentations designed to demonstrate their capabilities. KVA was selected as a result of the firm's demonstrated background with blended private/public projects, experience with senior centers, as well as their well-balanced, detailed and transparent approach toward sharing information.

As a full service construction consulting firm, KVA's previous projects include the Wellesley Senior Center, Duxbury Middle/High School, The Hemingway Theatre for the Boston Conservatory, Salem State College, the Cape Ann Historical Museum and Chatham Bars Inn. Current projects include the revitalization of Wayland High School and Whittier Health Care, an 80,250 square foot building in Roxbury. KVA representatives will play an integral role in making certain that the construction of Willcutt Commons adheres to all production goals.

The Social Service League is excited to have reached this early benchmark and feels confident that the appointment of KVA is the first step in what will be the seamless and successful construction of Willcutt Commons. Further updates will be provided here in Willcutt Corner as other critical project targets are reached throughout the building process.

Liza Carens Salerno is a freelance writer and a volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

Get your tomatoes ready!

The Cohasset Farmer's Market will be sponsoring a Tomato Contest on Thursday Aug. 25 at 4 p.m. on the Common. Start looking over your tomatoes to enter in these categories: biggest, smallest and funniest. The contest is open to all with prizes awarded for each category.

Need some ideas for preparing all the luscious summer produce available? A cooking demonstration by certified health coach and a registered yoga teacher Linda Storm is also on the agenda for Aug. 25.

WOODSIDE CEMETERY:

Disagreement continues over placement of gravestones

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The ongoing issue at Woodside is this: one family's headstone is currently blocking another's.

The Selectmen have seen the gravestones, up close and personal. Jennifer Oram, administrative assistant to the town manager, has been working side by side with them and the family members affected to reach an amicable solution. Oram, the Selectmen, and said family members have all met together and walked around Woodside Cemetery to assess the issues. But at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting, it was clear that these efforts weren't quite enough.

The ongoing issue at Woodside is this: one family's headstone is currently blocking another's. The headstone of Kenneth Jason was placed in line with the Rose family's stones back in 2008, but then moved forward by the Department of Public Works at the Roses' request. However, a field survey later conducted by the town revealed that the Rose stones are over their plot line.

Since the town first asked the Jason family to allow having their stone moved, both families involved have sought the counsel of the Board of Selectmen. During the past few weeks, the Selectmen have met with representatives from each family onsite, along with Oram and Mary Snow of the DPW, and reviewed the matter up close at Woodside.

The solution that Oram thought had been agreed upon involved moving the two Rose stones that are four and eight inches over their lot line, respectively, back by a few inches and rotating them to "make sure they match and bring everything into alignment."

The Rose family members, several of whom were in attendance at the Selectmen meeting, did not like the sound of that.

"I didn't agree with rotating the stones," one woman said.

Oram explained that this was just one option, and that she would be drafting a letter to all the family members and the Selectmen outlining what they had all previously agreed was the best solution. The letter would then need to be approved by the family members before the board could make a decision. Oram hopes to have this letter reviewed in time for the Sept. 13 Selectmen meeting.

Kenneth Jason's stone would also need to be moved back, Oram said. None of the Jason family members were present to comment.

Oram, for her part, is doing her best to follow the rules and regulations outlined by the DPW while still treading lightly on a delicate issue.

"We plan to do everything in stages and make sure everyone is happy with the new locations," said Oram. "It's not an easy topic, and there's a lot of work to do, but we're taking baby steps."

The Rose family members present voiced their concern that, if rotated, the writing on the front of their stones would no longer be visible. They were also concerned about where, exactly, they could plant; planting on the wrong side of the plot line is just one of the contentious issues the Roses and Jasons are working out.

"The rule is, you can plant wherever you want within the four squares of your plot," said Selectman Fred Koed.

Oram suggested that the family members stick to planting in front of, not all around, their headstones.

In a phone interview, Oram said that moving the stones will be done in phases, and that she hopes the families will "work it out amongst themselves."

"I think the step by step approach is the right approach," said Selectman Leland Jenkins.

"Everyone needs to be in agreement with the way the stones are turned," said Koed.

"It's uncomfortable to have this conflict," he said to the family members by way of apology. "We're hoping everyone will be comfortable with the resolution and move on."

SENIOR CENTER

Committee is nailed down

Four citizens-at-large ready to serve

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Social Services League has pledged $1 million toward the building project and is fundraising to cover additional costs. They recently proposed to construct the building privately and lease it to the town.

The Board of Selectmen took another important step toward the building of a new senior center.

At Tuesday night's meeting, the board appointed four public at large members to join what is tentatively being called the senior center building committee: Lynda Mooney, Joan Brown, Woody Chittick, and Diana Karcher.

The four members at large will join two members of the Board of Selectmen, Paul Carlson and Diane Kennedy; two members of the Advisory Committee, Peter Pescatore and Tom Reardon; two members of the Council of Elder Affairs; one member from the Friends of Elder Affairs; and two from the Social Services League of Cohasset. The town manager, town accountant, Director of Elder Affairs will provide the committee with their support.

The Social Services League has pledged $1 million toward the building project and is fundraising to cover additional costs. They recently proposed to construct the building privately and lease it to the town.

But when a private enterprise seeks to erect a municipal building, things get tricky. Further complicating the issue, the land the proposed senior center will be built on is owned by the Swim Center, while the town owns the land adjacent to the Swim Center; to fulfill the project, the two entities would need to swap.

Dealing with this kind of red tape is exactly why the new committee was formed.

"This committee will vet and research these town issues," said Kennedy in a separate interview, adding that the members at large were chosen based on who the Selectmen felt would have the best interests in mind for the town and the seniors.

The board originally sought to fill three positions on the committee; upon receiving applications from so many worthy candidates, Carlson moved that the number be increased to four. The board immediately voted in favor.

During the meeting, Glenn Pratt, a member of the senior center ad-hoc committee, stood up and voiced his concern over the committee's name. Calling it a "building" committee, he pointed out, is a bit misleading, since the committee members aren't actually "building the building."

Kennedy and Carlson both agreed, and thought perhaps the name could be changed to the "senior center planning group." According to Carlson, the name is not set in stone, as the group has yet to hold its first meeting.

"It's really more of a planning committee, like the Budget Planning Group and the Water Planning Group," Carlson said in a phone interview. "We've had a lot of success with those, and I hope this group will be very successful as well."

Senior center committee's charge

The committee has been charged with addressing several critical issues, including: protecting the town's interests in the land transactions; determining the lease terms and conditions; defining the level of municipal services to be provided to the building; measuring the impact on the town budget and developing a strategy for funding the additional costs; creating Requests for Proposals in conjunction with the Town Manager and the Finance Director; and financing of the furnishings for the senior center.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 40 state senators in 2011 through August 8. The list reveals that senators have so far collected a total of $39,521.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to senators above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions.

Some opponents argue most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others say that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, and funding for important programs has been cut.

The 2011 statistics indicate that 14 senators, a little more than one-third of the 40 members, have received reimbursements ranging from $558 to $6,300 while 26 senators have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who has received the most per diem money in 2011 is Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $6,300. The other senators rounding out the top six with the highest amounts in order of the amount of money received include Sens. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst), $5,280; Michael Knapik (R-Westfield), $4,686; Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport), $4,005; Daniel Wolf (D-Harwich), $3,900; and James Welch (D-Springfield), $3,894.

LOCAL SENATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2011

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of 2011 per diem money the state has paid the senator through August 8. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the senator certified that he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

A total of 26 of the state's senators did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean these senators were never at the Statehouse in 2011. It simply means they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

VIDEO CONFERENCE COURT PROCEEDINGS (H 3143) - The House gave initial approval to a bill allowing video conferencing technology to be used for child and family court proceedings in which a child or parent has a restraining order against the other parent. The measure would allow the protected parent or child to testify via video conferencing, in a different building than the other parent.

Supporters said this would prevent victims from being intimidated when forced to sit in the courtroom for hours with the alleged offender. They noted it would protect vulnerable women and children and encourage more of them to bring charges against their alleged attackers.

NIX STATE-OWNED BANK PROPOSAL - A special advisory commission created last August by the Legislature voted 12-0 against the creation of a state-owned bank in Massachusetts. Currently, North Dakota is the only state in the nation with a state-owned bank.

Supporters say the North Dakota bank has worked well. They argue a Massachusetts state bank would be a partner, not a rival, of local banks.

Opponents say this creates another unnecessary government bureaucracy that will unfairly compete with local private banks. They argue this will hurt these banks by being the only bank in which the state deposits its tax and other revenue.

BAN CAMPAIGN SIGNS FROM PUBLIC PROPERTY (H 204) - The Election Laws Committee is considering a bill prohibiting political signs from being placed on tax-exempt local, state and federal property and property owned by a non-profit organization.

SEX OFFENDERS (H 3149) - The Judiciary Committee has scheduled a September 27 hearing on legislation that would prohibit Level 2 or Level 3 sex offenders from residing within 500 feet of a school zone.

STUDENTS' EXPRESSION OF RELIGION (H 2715) - The Education Committee will hear testimony on October 10 on a proposal that would require cities and towns to implement a local policy that allows for a "limited public forum and voluntary student expression of religious viewpoints at school events and graduation ceremonies, in class assignments and in non-curricular school groups and activities."

FRAUDULENT SEXUAL CONSENT (H 3154) - The Judiciary Committee will hold a hearing on September 27 on a measure imposing up to a life sentence on anyone who has sexual intercourse with a person if he or she fraudulently obtained that person's consent.

SAFETY OF CHEERLEADING (H 2720) - On October 27, the Education Committee will hold a hearing on legislation that would create a special commission to conduct a study to evaluate current safety practices of cheerleading. The commission would study the certification of cheerleading coaches; the presence of emergency medical technicians, athletic trainers, and/or physicians at games; and the reporting of all injuries and precautions taken to prevent injuries.

REQUIRE PHOTO ID (H 244) - The Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure is considering legislation requiring consumers to show a photo ID in order to use a credit or debit card.

COUGHLIN

Coughlin first got involved in civic affairs.

"I was coaching my girls' softball teams and involved in kids' fundraisers," he said. "I was pulled into civic affairs as a parent, and began to try to give something back to the community."

Coughlin and Bernadette, who up until recently helped administer educational programs at the Worcester County House of Corrections, have three daughters: Mary Jo, a junior at Holy Cross College; Sarah, a senior at Wheelock College; and Jill, who is attending law school and interning at the Worcester County DA's office, where her father used to work. Coughlin said that his oldest daughter will probably "follow in her father's footsteps and become a prosecutor."

Coughlin has certainly laid the foundation for his daughters, but his are some big footsteps to follow.

Some of Coughlin's past accomplishments as a town administrator include helping the former industrial towns of Southbridge and Northbridge embrace new industries and revitalize their downtowns; where Southbridge used to have a major optical factory, Coughlin helped facilitate getting a Department of Defense training center in its place. He then assisted in "rehabbing and beautifying" the downtown area of Northbridge, part of the Black Stone National Heritage Center.

"Then came Westport, which is not dissimilar to Cohasset," said Coughlin. "It's a beautiful seacoast town on Buzzards Bay and has a vibrant but small commercial fishing fleet. And, like Cohasset, the harbor is dominated by one restaurant, the Back Eddy," which Coughlin compared to the Atlantica.

One of Coughlin's high points as town manager in Westport was dredging the harbor, an issue that will come up in Cohasset and is already on his agenda.

Coughlin said that he was drawn to Cohasset.

"It's a coastal community close to Boston," he said. The location is key for Coughlin, not only because of his family's reverence for the 'Irish Riviera' and because of his prior experience managing a coastal town, but also because it's a place where he can enjoy his favorite hobbies. Coughlin enjoys boating and sports, and is especially excited to take in the Boston sports scene.

"The Providence Bruins and PawSox are great, but they're just not the same as the Boston Bruins and Red Sox," he joked. "I'm looking forward to getting to see some games."

Coughlin's love of sports informs his day-to-day tasks as town manager. Whether in official meetings or off the cuff, Coughlin peppers his speech with sports analogies. He often refers to the town of Cohasset as a team and himself as the coach. The town employees and department heads are the players, and their goals and objectives comprise what Coughlin likes to call "the playbook."

So who's the quarterback in this scenario? Director of finance and town accountant John Stanbrook. Coughlin says that part of his job, as "coach," is to "make sure the quarterback doesn't get sacked," meaning he wants to make sure that Stanbrook's official duties are clearly defined and that stronger financial procedures are established to keep things running smoothly.

"I'm looking forward to developing a good game plan," Coughlin said. "Right now, the most important issue is extending the team concept."

Coughlin added that he is glad to be starting his new role at the same time as the new school superintendent, Barbara Cataldo, whom Coughlin called "an energetic leader."

"The key to my success is this," Coughlin continued. "I have my ideas and my notions, but I have to work cooperatively with the boards and committees — the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and the school board."

While Coughlin contends that there are some heated issues in town right now, and that folks have "passionate feelings on these issues," he looks forward to bringing the community together.

"We all live in the same community and will have our differences," said Coughlin, "but need to remember that there's more to unite us than divide us. The community is made stronger by its diversity and differences of opinion — that's what government is all about. We should never fear putting our issues of the table."

In his first week as town manager, Coughlin put that belief into practice, assembling the various department heads and decision makers to "bring them around a common table." Coughlin said that they literally pushed several tables together to make one big one for everyone to sit around in the basement of Town Hall, where they "began to dialogue."

Coughlin calls his managing methods "old-school politics," but he believes it's the best way to do his job.

"I believe in an open-door policy," he said, adding that anyone who wants to see him can pop over to his office. "They may have to wait a little while, but I'm going to see them. No problem is too large or too small. Something that is very rewarding to me — equally rewarding as putting together a $34 million budget — is helping someone with a small problem because that's the most important to them."

It's this philosophy that drove Coughlin to pack up and move to Cohasset.

"You can't do the job properly without living in the community you work in," he said, adding that he believes it's important to get out of Town Hall and get to know people by being out and about in the community. "People should be able to come up to you in the market, or have the confidence to approach you in a restaurant."

It's this down-home sensibility that has Coughlin striving to be a team player. One of the first things he hopes to do as town manager is highlight what some of the "all-star" town employees are accomplishing —"the positive things that go on in town government." Coughlin promises to deliver some "great stories."

Borrowing Coughlin's sports rhetoric, the coach seems poised to lead Team Cohasset into a winning season.

Coughlin hits the ground running

At his first Board of Selectmen meeting, Town Manager Mike Coughlin rolled up his sleeves and got right down to business.

"We knew you'd hit the ground running," said Selectman Diane Kennedy. "I can feel the breeze!"

Coughlin's town manager's report took up the first 45 minutes of the meeting and detailed exactly what he's been up to since coming to town.

So far, Coughlin:

- Met with new school Superintendent Barbara Cataldo to discuss how the schools and town can share resources and work together;
- Plans to consolidate the town treasurer and collector into one position and moved to have the board post this new position; Will hire someone new after Labor Day;
- Plans to contact town auditor Tony Roselli and invite him back to do a 6-month update on financial issues that have been resolved ("We've really turned a corner," Coughlin said.);
- Will jointly manage the water and sewer commissions, expanding "Greenbush Guy" Mark Brennan's engineering duties to review operational issues with respect to those departments (this will be a temporary position that Coughlin said the town already has funds for);
- Seeks to fill the Veterans' Services Agent position that will open up soon with current agent Joe McElroy stepping aside, and regionalize that position;
- Asked each department head to draw up their goals and objectives ("the playbook/game plan," Coughlin called it) and submit it to the selectmen before the Sept. 13 meeting;
- Updated the board on the South Shore regional emergency call center opening on Sept. 13; is trying to find a way to keep the police station open at night, but does not want young police explorer cadets placed on overnight shifts;
- Is recommending that Chief of Police Mark DeLuca proceed with bringing in a K-9 unit; "Chief DeLuca presented a program that can provide K-9 at no cost to the town," Coughlin said. "A dog would be a great ambassador for the police department and what they do."
- Is hammering out agreements for town employee health insurance; his planned meeting with the labor attorney was canceled.

Coughlin also took time to recognize several town employees ("team members") for going "above and beyond the call of duty."

These included Ted Carroll and members of the Recreation Department for their "outstanding summer program," which provided 260 children with day camp activities from tennis to deep-sea fishing excursions.

"My previous town had nothing like this for kids," said Coughlin.

Coughlin presented the Rec. department with a certificate of commendation. He then did the same for Glenn Pratt of the emergency management committee, and Mary Snow and others from the DPW for the work they did to secure a FEMA mitigation reimbursement for two of last winter's snowstorms.

"It's been a great few weeks here," Coughlin said at the end of his report. "The foundation was laid by Steve Lombard and Jen Oram, and the vision created by you folks. I'm proud to be a member of the team."

NAME: Colin Pratt
SCHOOL: Braintree
YEAR: Senior
STATS: "Colin was the workhorse of the staff," said Braintree head coach Bill O'Connell. "He was asked to pitch on short rest and he did it without complaint." Pratt will take his game to Roger Williams College in the fall. "He had a great season and was wonderful leader on and off the field," said O'Connell.

NAME: Sean Greene
SCHOOL: Hingham
YEAR: Junior
STATS: Hit .500 for the season. Had two homers and six RBI in an 11-7 win over North Quincy that clinched the Patriot League Keenan Division title. Was 3-1 as a pitcher

NAME: Zach Littman
SCHOOL: Abington
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Littman was Mr. Clutch and a leader on the field for the Green Wave, especially in the tournament. The shortstop/pitcher had emerged as the hero for Abington by scoring from first base on Connor Fraser's ninth-inning double to beat Westwood, 5-4, and he continued the trend with a game-tying two-run homer in the bottom of the sixth to help lift the second-seeded Green Wave over Spellman.

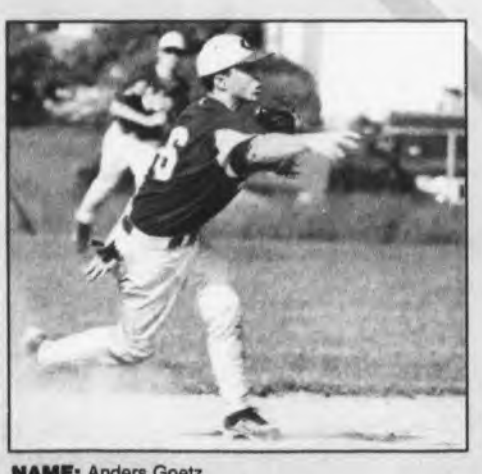
NAME: Cory Stevens
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Junior
STATS: One of the most dominant pitchers in the region this spring, Stevens went 6-0 in seven starts. The Atlantic Coast League all-star left-hander pitched 42 innings, allowed eight earned runs, and finished with a 1.33 earned run average.

NAME: Brendan Kennedy
SCHOOL: Norwell
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Kennedy could do it all for the Clippers, who advanced all the way to the Division 2 South Sectional semifinals. He led the team in both pitching and hitting (.447 batting average, to go along with 30 RBI). He went 5-3 with a 2.75 ERA on the hill. The center fielder also made the South Shore League all-star for the third time in his four-year varsity career.

NAME: Joe Zanca
SCHOOL: Braintree
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Joe Zanca was one of two captains and leaders on the field for the overachieving Wamps, who won their second straight Bay State Carey Division championship. He came up with several key hits during the season. "He had a great season and was wonderful leader on and off the field," said his coach, Bill O'Connell. Zanca is headed to Babson College.

NAME: Cejay Suarez
SCHOOL: Abington
YEAR: Junior
STATS: The hard-hitting Suarez was a monster at the plate with a .485 batting average and 20 RBI, leading the Green Wave to the Div. 3 South Sectional semifinals. On the mound, he finished with a 5-2 record and a sterling 1.97 ERA.

NAME: Jamie Faber
SCHOOL: Cohasset
YEAR: Junior
STATS: Threw a complete game against Georgetown in the Div. 4 State Final, allowing one unearned run on three hits while striking out six in the 6-1 victory. Faber also hit .400 and knocked in 27 runs.



NAME: Cooper Davis
SCHOOL: Scituate
YEAR: Senior
STATS: The senior captain hit .375 with 25 RBI while playing a very solid first base. Was successful on all 10 of his steal attempts. Had two hits, four runs and four RBI in a win over Randolph.

NAME: Charlie LaPaglia
SCHOOL: Marshfield
YEAR: Senior
STATS: LaPaglia didn't just hit the ball, he tore the cover off it, batting .450 with three homers, three triples, two doubles, and 17 RBI. He also scored 18 runs for the Rams, who qualified for the Division 1 South Sectional tournament. A center fielder for the Rams, LaPaglia was named an Atlantic Coast League all-star in 2011.

NAME: Jeff Cavanaro
SCHOOL: Cohasset
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Senior star was named Boston Globe Div. 4 Player of the Year. Hit .435 and led the Div. 4 State Champion Skippers with 40 hits. He also stole 21 bases and was 7-2 with a 1.34 ERA on the mound. During Legion ball, played mostly third base, but picked up the win in the South Sectional final.

NAME: Anders Goetz
SCHOOL: Cohasset
YEAR: Senior
STATS: Senior shortstop hit .411with five doubles and five triples while playing excellent defense with a .906 fielding percentage. Had two hits and two RBI in the Div. 4 Championship game against Georgetown.

NAME: David Podurgiel
SCHOOL: Scituate
YEAR: Senior
STATS: One of the finest fielders in the area, Podurgiel was also one of the most feared hitters. He helped lead Scituate into the playoffs by hitting .545 with four home runs and 21 RBI. Played every inning of the season. Was named Scituate's Player of the Year.

INSTRUCTIONAL HOCKEY

Coastal Stars

Coastal Stars Instructional Hockey registration is now open at www.coastalstars.com. Coastal Stars is the town based youth hockey program for Marshfield and Cohasset. Instructional Hockey introduces boys and girls 5 to 8 years old to ice hockey. Emphasis is on teaching the fundamentals of the game, including how to skate with a stick and equipment. The Instructional Hockey program will start in early Fall. Games are once a week on the weekend thru March. Weekly practice/skills sessions will take place at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke on Mondays at 5pm. Full equipment is required.

If you have any questions, please contact the Coastal Stars Instructional Director, Kevin Walker at 617-710-7300.

FIELD HOCKEY

Fundraiser

Field hockey team holds fundraising car wash

With the first day of school, practice and of course, the season getting closer and closer, field hockey players are getting geared up for the new season.

Over the weekend, members of the Cohasset varsity and junior varsity field hockey team helped raise money for the team and Booster Club with a car wash, August 14 at the driveway of the Second Congregational Church. The driveway was lined with cars patiently waiting for a car wash.

Laughter, music, spraying hoses, and aggressive sponge washing were all part of the car wash by girls from both teams. Captains Caitlin DeAngelis, Kayla Orner, Amber Silvia, and Sage Stebbins say a huge "Thank You" to all, and were thrilled with the girls who came out to wash, rinse, and hand wipe each car. (There was also parent or two helping out with the scrubbing).

This was the second fund raiser for the girls in the off-season. They also hosted a field hockey clinic in July.

Last year, Cohasset had one of the best field hockey seasons in memory, winning the South Shore League with a 15-0-3 regular season record.

Official practices for field hockey begin Thursday, Aug. 25 at 9 a.m. at Alumni Field.

Cohasset stars have one of best seasons in memory

Cohasset's 12 yr old all star baseball squad completed its season summer season last week in the semi-finals of the Suburban League playoffs. The All Stars, most of whom closed out their Little League careers, had a terrific summer, and established themselves as one of Cohasset's strongest 12 yr old Little League teams, following the success of 2006 District Champions, and the District Finalists of 2009.

After sweeping their pool in the Williamsport Tourney and making it to the District Semi-Finals, the squad rolled on in Suburban League play and local tournaments in Mansfield and Sandwich. In late July, the All Stars took their game down to Delaware's Rehoboth Beach, and swept through the last day of competition, besting AAU squads from Syracuse, NY, Hartford, CT and Lancaster, PA to take home the Championship of their bracket.

In early August, the playoffs started for the Suburban League. 11A all stars Jackson Roberts and Will Greer joined the squad for the playoffs, as the 12A squad had lost a few players to vacations and other scheduling conflicts. The playoffs opened with Cohasset facing a powerful squad from Canton. Despite home runs from Liam O'Connell and Ben Rice, Cohasset dropped the opener.

GOLF NOTES

Bradley's win gives Deutsche a boost

PAUL HARBER

If you were in the vicinity of Hyannis early Sunday evening, you might have heard a cowbell clanging and wondering if there was a farm in the region.

No, it was LPGA Hall of Famer Pat Bradley ringing in the victory of her nephew, Keegan Bradley, and his improbable PGA Championship victory at the Atlanta Athletic Club in Georgia.

The former Hopkinton High star, whose father Mark is a club pro, might be of thoroughbred heritage, but he was a dark horse in the field of great golfers.

Keegan is only the third golfer in the last century to win in his first appearance in a major championship. Ben Curtis accomplished the feat at the 2003 British Open and before that Francis Ouimet did it at the 1913 U.S. Open.

And you can bet the folks who run the $8 million Deutsche Bank Championship at TPC Boston in Norton are happier than anyone.

This will inject an added bit of drama into their championship, which begins Aug. 30.

Bradley is a hard-core Boston fan and his dream is to play a round of golf with his hero, New England Patriot quarterback Tom Brady.

"I'd love to play with Tom Brady," Bradley told reporters after his victory Sunday. "Yeah, he's one of my idols. That would be a dream come true."

Speaking of the tournament, The First Tee of Massachusetts will take part in the event with a contest.

Making a return in 2011, the Deutsche Bank Championship's Birdies for Charity Program gives participants a chance to support local New England Charities — including The First Tee of Massachusetts, which provides junior programming to youth across the Bay State — and an opportunity to win two great prizes.

Each pledge of $0.01 per birdie or more will allow the donor a chance to enter the "Guess the Birdies" Contest.

The contestant who guesses the correct number of birdies made by PGA TOUR professionals during the Deutsche Bank Championship will win the grand prize of two season tickets for the 2012 Red Sox at Fenway Park. The first place prize is two first-class tickets on Delta Airlines anywhere in the continental U.S.

Participation is easy and all support goes a long way toward helping to continue and expand junior golf services here in Massachusetts since all participating charities receive 100 percent of all paid pledges solicited on their behalf.

You can make a pledge online by logging onto the official championship website at www.dbchampionship.com and select "Birdies for Charity" on the home page.

Junior champion

Meggan Khang continues her fine summer of golf before beginning her freshman year at Rockland High. (Aside to Bulldog golf coach Paul Jenner, "have you invited her out for the team yet?"), Khang outlasted good friend Isabel Southard of Sharon to win the State Girls Junior Golf Championship at South Shore Country Club in Hingham last week.

Khang carded a second-day 5-over-par 77 after an opening round 73 to beat Southard, who was the defending champion, by two strokes.

Newton's Vinh-Hoa Ngo finished third, while four players finished tied for fourth, including Quincy's Jacquelyn Elecy and Scituate's Mary Mulcahy.

Khang did most of her damage on Monday, firing a 1-over 73 to take a three-shot lead over Southard. Southard finished one stroke better than Khang on Tuesday, but it wasn't enough to cut the deficit.

"I'm pretty happy," Khang told reporters after her victory. "I just wish I could have had a better round."

Khang, like just about everybody else in the world, had trouble figuring out South Shore's treacherous greens. She putted off the green on the par-3 second to make bogey, and three-putted three other holes.

"My putting killed me today. I had some chances out there; I just didn't take advantage of them. It was my speed, it was my line; it was everything."

Here and there

In the boys' State Boys' Junior Championship at the Renaissance Golf Club in Haverhill, Nick McLaughlin of Far Corner GC fashioned a 54-hole aggregate of 2-over par 218 for his second straight title, beating Ben Balter and Connor Murphy of Hyannis GC by three strokes.

Donna Norrman won the women's championship at Braintree Municipal Golf Club, beating Jenny Sullivan in the finals. It took 19 holes to accomplish the feat. Other flight results included Libby Ritchie over Nancy McGuire for the first flight championship, Terry Murphy topping Peggy Delpico in the second flight and Joan Brooks outlasting Barbara Deal in the third flight final.

Tom Tobey of Bay Pointe was first with a 68 and Rusty Gunnarson of Rochester GC was a stroke back at the Coakley Memorial Pro-Am at Woodland Golf Club last week. Tobey lead his team of John Masci, Brian Carney and Harry Raphael to a third place finish in the team gross segment of the tourney while Gunnarson's foursome from Rochester, that included Carl Raymond, Dennis Charland and Jack Myers were third in the net competition.

Mark Mitchell won the men's championship title at White Cliffs last week, carding a 36-hole score of 141. Rounding out the top five were Don Demichele, John Purcell, Tony Frascarella, Bill Sangster, David Gerrish, and Tom Gorman.

Joseph Piperato won the first flight champion, Bob Coco won second flight, Ken Hietsch was third flight titlist, and Don Macphail won the fourth flight.

Kathleen Destefano and Ellyn Walker had two-round totals of 163, but Destefano won the women's club championship in a playoff. First flight championship went to Sharon Magliano . . .

In the New England Assistant's Association Ben Boyd Pro-Am at Dedham Country and Polo Club, Bret Gracey's even par 70 beat Dedham pro Justin Lawson by a stroke.

GOLFER OF THE WEEK

Tara Joy Connelly, Cohasset Golf Club

This week's Golfer of the Week is Tara Joy Connelly of Cohasset, who won the Grace B. Keyes Cup at Oakley Country Club in Watertown last week.

What's the Grace B. Keyes Cup you might ask?

Keyes was one of the founding members of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts and one of the top players at the turn of the century. The WGAM named their Stroke Play Championship in honor of Keyes.

Essentially, it is the state championship. Sure, the WGAM has its championship, which is a Match Play event and if anyone tries to tell you that match play is the best way to determine a champion instead of stroke play, they don't know what they are talking about.

The best golfer is the one who can get around the course in the least amount of strokes. Pure and simple. There is no gamesmanship like there is in match play. It is golfer vs. the golf course.

Tara had a two-round aggregate of 151, 9-over par with rounds of 78 and 73. Tied for second, three shots back, were first-round leader and Milton resident Claire Sheldon of The Country Club and Kristen Macdonald of the Thomson Club.

This is the third Keyes Cup championship for the likeable Joy-Connelly, who is the wife of Cohasset Golf Club head professional J.P. Connelly.

Joy-Connelly has been playing on the local women's amateur circuit for more than 20 years and has won numerous championships.

Last year she was a finalist in the State match play championship, losing 1-up to Pam Kuong, who had the advantage of having the tournament played on her home course, Charles River.

Tara Joy-Connelly, winner of the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts' Grace B. Keyes Cup.
COURTESY PHOTO

However Joy-Connelly was the WGAM Player of the Year for the sixth consecutive year, out-pointing Kuong, 1,435 to 915. Points are awarded on finishers in the top statewide competition.

Her honesty is irreproachable. Three years ago while playing in the U.S. Women's Mid-Amateur at the Desert Forest Golf Club in Carefree, Ariz., the Marshfield native called home to tell her husband that she shot a 74. But he said that on the Internet, where he was following her progress, it said she had a 73. Her caddie wrote down the wrong score on a hole and she failed to notice it. She was in the second to last group of the day and she had easily qualified for the match play phase of the national championship. At the time she admitted it was a stupid mistake and she did the right thing, disqualifying herself from the championship.

Needing to sweep the next two games of pool play to advance, Cohasset responded in a big way. Against Medfield, Roberts contributed in a huge way, with a terrific running catch in right field, and several great at bats. Greer too played beyond his age, as he continued the sharp fielding that he contributed during the Williamsport tourney. Alexander Schubert, after missing several weeks of action with a broken thumb, returned to the diamond in style, as he made several nice catches in left field to key Cohasset's win. Tim Chase was dominating on the hill, mixing a knee buckling curve ball with his heater, and keeping Medfield at bay in Cohasset's win. A rematch against Canton was next, and the Cohasset nine exploded at the plate, as every player in the lineup hit the ball with authority. Ben Rice continued an incredible summer run at the plate, as he blasted two home runs. Michael Cohen, Owen Gideon Murphy and Liam O'Connell also homered for the Boys in Blue, and Joe Cavanaro played the role of ace on the hill, as he shut down the Canton attack.

After delays occasioned by several rainouts, Cohasset squared off with the powerful Walpole American squad in a quarter-final tilt - the same Walpole program that sent an all-star squad to Williamsport just a few years ago. Heading into the last inning, Cohasset trailed Walpole by a 4-3 count. The two 11 yrs olds then came up huge, as Will Greer led off with a line drive double into right field. Jackson Roberts followed with another great at-bat, as he fouled off several tough pitches from the Walpole ace before drawing a walk. With one out, Ben Rice, as he did all summer, seized the moment. On a 1-2 count, with the crowd screaming, Rice blasted a monster home run into the cornfields in right, and Cohasset jumped to a 6-4 lead. The Walpole ace, now rattled, promptly served up another home run to Michael Cohen. Tim Chase walked, and after a second out was recorded, Joe Cavanaro and Liam O'Connell followed with line drive base hits to plate two more. In all, Cohasset plated six runs in a memorable sixth inning against one of the tougher squads in the metro Boston area. The bottom of the sixth saw Owen Gideon-Murphy close it out for Cohasset, and the Boys in Blue moved to the semi-finals with a terrific win.

The semi-final game saw the addition of Taggart Eymer to the squad, as yet another key regular player was forced to miss the semi-final, and Taggart offered to help the squad out. The Cohasset Nine came up short against Milton, as the team dropped a 6-4 heartbreaker. Milton jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first, and though Cohasset clawed back to within one run in the fourth, they could not overtake the strong Milton squad. Highlights in this one included a two run diner by Tim Chase, and another gutty pitching effort by Joe Cavanaro, as Joe kept Cohasset in the game over the middle innings.

The Boys finished the summer season with a 25-10-2 record. For many, the summer capped terrific Little League careers. Joe Campadelli, Danny Varney, Cole Joslin, Sam Montgomery, Owen Burchill and Taggart Eymer all contributed to the team's success in big ways. In Delaware, Joslin closed out the team's quarter-final win against Syracuse on the hill, and in Sandwich, Cole blasted his first Little League Home Run against Canton. Campadelli made a spectacular diving catch in right against Team Connecticut in Delaware to preserve a one run lead in the late innings, and Danny Varney proved himself to be the master of the pickle in Delaware, as his daring base running keyed several Cohasset rallies. Burchill had a great summer season, highlighted by a 6-for-6 night in a doubleheader sweep of Weymouth at Weymouth. Montgomery, as an 11 yr old, was a key player on the Williamsport team, and had a big home run against Team Connecticut in Delaware. Eymer, always the team player, volunteered to play between lacrosse camps, and made several nice catches in the outfield against Quincy in his first action of the summer.

For Ben Rice, Owen Gideon-Murphy, Alexander Schubert, Liam O'Connell, Joe Cavanaro, Tim Chase and Michael Cohen, the summer season capped outstanding Little League careers, as all played on the all star teams since their 8 yr old summers. This group won the Pembroke tourney as 8 and 9 yr olds, were finalists in the Sandwich Tourney as 10s, finalists in the Mansfield tourney as 11s, and authored a terrific 12 yr old summer. All contributed in big ways. Gideon-Murphy was strong on the mound and at short, and had several tape measure home runs. Cohen, the team's ace in previous summers, suffered a shoulder injury and could not pitch or play infield all summer, yet played first and the outfield with aplomb, and had several home runs in the Williamsport Tourney, including a Kirk Gibson like shot in his first game back from injury against Scituate in the Williamsport Tourney. Cavanaro established himself as one of the team's most reliable pitchers this summer, had the huge extra inning game winning hit against Norwell in the Williamsport Tourney, and a two homer game against Lancaster, PA in Delaware to clinch the title there. O'Connell caught and played second, and displayed surprising power, as he blasted 9 home runs in summer ball, including a huge dinger against Avon in the Williamsport Tourney, and a center field bomb against New Jersey in Delaware. Chase stepped into Cohen's shoes as the team's ace pitcher, and did a tremendous job with several big wins in the Williamsport Tourney. Tim also had a tremendous hitting summer, as he led the team in on base percentage, with several big hits, and double digit home runs. Ben Rice had an amazing summer at the plate, as he proved himself to be one of the very best hitters on the South Shore and beyond. Ben led the team with an amazing 24 home runs, many of which - as against Walpole - were clutch shots. Alexander Schubert authored perhaps the summer's most memorable moment. After sitting out most of the summer with a broken thumb, but being the consummate teammate - attending every game and practice to cheer his mates on - it was Zander who closed out a huge win against Team Connecticut in Delaware in a Hollywood script moment, as he struck out the side in the bottom of the sixth with knee buckling curves!

Congrats to all the boys, and good luck on the big diamond next year.

Leafs dominate Canadiens

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

It may be a new season for the Men's South Coastal Hockey League, but some things remained the same.

The Maple Leafs in the Classics Div. continued their domination of the Canadiens, They built a 5-2 lead and hung on for an opening game, 5-4 victory.

The Leafs have not to lost to the Canadiens in their last 23 meetings.

Mike Maher of Marshfield scored two goals including a power play goal with 10:29 left in the game that put the Maple Leafs up 5-2.

Pembroke's Jim Smith added a goal and an assist, while Sean Malloy and Jack Carrig of Marshfield had a goal each. Mike Bartlett, Jeff Gauthier, Steve Mudge and Dave Denton both of Marshfield added an assist each.

The Canadiens had four different goal scorers. Pembroke's Mike Fahie and Mike Martin, Marshfield's Glen Harnisch and Mike Fay had a goal each for the Canadiens.

Steve Berlo of Pembroke had two assists, Martin, Tom Lema of Marshfield, Sean Keegan also of Pembroke and Mike Evans added an assist apeice for the Canadiens.

Tim Cruz of Marshfield scored two second period goals five minutes apart as the Sharks opened up Legends Div. play with a 5-0 win over the Whalers.

It was the fourth straight win for the Sharks over the Whalers.

Barry Kaiser and Rick Kelly of Hanover combined to stop 18 shots for the shutout for the Sharks.

Jay Faherty had a goal and an assist, Marshfield's Richard Petrosino and Mike Valenti both had a goal for the Sharks, who put the game away with three third period goals.

The Classics Div. will have two games on Sunday at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

The defending champion Black Hawks will face the Bruins, while the Rangers will take on the Red Wings. The Wings game with the Rangers will start at 7:30 P.M. and the Black Hawks-Bruins game will follow at 8:50.

JOB MARKET 101

Top career trends every student should consider

Despite less than stellar job growth over the past few years, college graduates remain in demand. In fact, employers plan to hire 19.5 percent more 2011 college graduates than they did in 2010, which is up nearly 6 percent since 2009-2010, according to a recent Job Outlook study by the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE). But today's job market is not your parents' job market. Huge demographic and employment trends are changing the way America works, and would-be employees will need to remain flexible.

Here are some tips to help you stay on top of the career market:

• First, expect to change jobs numerous times in your career. In today's career world, job stability does not always equal job security. The U.S. Department of Labor Statistics reports that the average person born in the latter half of the baby boom has held an average of 11 jobs, and that three-fifths of those job changes occurred between the ages of 18 and 27.

"The U.S. economy is fundamentally changing, and employees can no longer expect to work their way up the company ladder," says Patti LoPresti, campus president at Everest College-Portland.

• Second, know where the jobs are. "Our nation is experiencing huge demographic and economic changes, which are creating major shifts in the types of jobs available today," says Veronica Tarango, director of education at Everest College-West Los Angeles. "Students should prepare themselves for a changing job market."

In particular, even though the U.S. economy is expected to grow by 10 percent between 2008-2018, these jobs will not be evenly distributed across all industries, according to Bureau of Labor statistics. In fact, projections show a substantial decline in manufacturing positions, while service-providing industries are expected to add 14.5 million jobs to the economy in the coming years.

With many baby-boomers set to retire in the coming decade, and a growing youth population, many service-related professions from teaching to elder care are going to see significant growth.

"One of the fastest growing sectors in the coming decade will be the health care sector," notes LoPresti. Projections indicate that about 26 percent of all jobs in the coming decade will be in the health care industry, which is expected to add approximately 4 million jobs to the U.S. economy. "This is one of the reasons that we specifically target many of our degree programs to the field of health care training," adds LoPresti.

• Third, consider going back to school for additional career training. Today's job market requires that employees keep their skills current, and as a result, more and more adults are going back to school. "Students come to us to keep their skills up-to-date or get the credentials they need to advance in their careers," says Tarango. "They find that it is increasingly necessary in today's changing job market."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics' occupational projections show that jobs requiring some form of post-secondary education will have greater growth through 2018 than those without. The greatest job growth is expected to be in careers that require an associate degree, which is expecting to see job growth of 19 percent. Job projections are also higher for careers that require post-secondary vocational credentials, at an estimated 13 percent, than those requiring only on-the-job training, which are expected to see only 8 percent growth.

"Employers understand that a one- or two-year program can give new employees exactly the mix of academic learning and hands-on experience they need to excel in today's changing job market," says LoPresti.

GIMME SHELTER

Rocky is bright-eyed, bushy-tailed

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Rocky. Rocky is a two-year-old male Tiger. He looks sort of like a miniature Maine Coon cat. He was dropped off at the shelter. He must have received a lot of love in his last home, as he's one of the sweetest cats that we've seen. He gets along with other cats. He'll sit in your lap and let you brush him. He'll pose for pictures. He's absolutely adorable and is "bright-eyed and bushy-tailed." If you like cats, you're sure to love Rocky.

If you've been looking for that special feline to share your home with, please come visit the shelter. HSAR has white, black, tan, Tiger, Calico, Tuxedo, large, small, young, old; something for everyone!

You can check Rocky out on the website along with many of HSAR's other cats at: www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the Adoption Coordinator.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net.

Museums are open for the season

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums showcase the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open from 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

BRIEFLY

The final film of the Summer Outdoor Film Series at Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, is "Mother Nature's Child" at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 24.

This film explores nature's powerful role in children's health and development through the experience of toddlers, children in middle childhood and adolescents. The film marks a moment in time when a living generation can still recall childhoods of free play outdoors; this will not be true for most children growing up today. The effects of "nature deficit disorder" are now being noted across the country in epidemics of child obesity, attention disorders and depression.

Before the film, there will be a locavore pot luck dinner at 6 pm. Diners are to bring a dish with local ingredients that serves eight, the ingredients written on an index card, your own place setting and utensils and a comfy chair. BYO beverages. Admission to all films is free but donations are gratefully accepted to support the Friends of Holly Hill Farm.

For directions and other information visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565.

Livingston Taylor performs at Raffael's as part of summer concert series

Livingston Taylor will perform at Raffael's at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St., Hingham, on Friday, Aug. 26. For tickets and information, call 781-749-1720 or 781-749-1747, or visit www.raffaels.com.
COURTESY PHOTO

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

In a performing career that stretches back 40 years, Livingston Taylor has long been known as not only a gifted singer-songwriter, but also a crowd pleaser. Not surprisingly, Taylor – who plays Raffael's at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham on Aug. 26, as part of the "Summer Sounds" concert series – enjoys that reputation. He also has no trouble explaining why he thinks he got it.

"First off, as a performer, I'm enormously relaxed, which sometimes seems to surprise people. People are also surprised at how melodic and lyrical I am. I'm also a lot funnier than people expect," explained Taylor by cell phone last week while driving back from an appearance in Vermont to his Watertown home. "My approach constitutes what is ultimately a very pleasant trifecta for my audiences."

The 60-year-old Taylor is the second-youngest of five children of Dr. Isaac Taylor and his wife, Gertrude Woodard Taylor. Originally from Boston, the family moved to Chapel Hill, N.C., where Isaac Taylor would later become Dean of the Medical School at the University of North Carolina. Their mother's background as a New England Conservatory-trained lyric soprano seemed to have sway over the Taylor children, however, and Alex, James, Kate, Livingston, and Hugh all pursued music careers at one time or another. Alex is now deceased, while Hugh owns and operates the Outermost Inn on Martha's Vineyard. James, Kate, and Livingston all maintain active recording and touring careers. James Taylor, a five-time Grammy Award winner and member of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, has enjoyed the greatest success among the siblings.

"There is no environment where being part of a tribe isn't better than going it alone. My brother James's fame is wonderful. I've been doing this for over 40 years, however, so I know who I am and I know where I am. Part of who I am is being brother to James Taylor."

The brothers' duet on "City Lights" enjoyed considerable radio play in the 1980s, while Livingston's solo recording career includes the best-selling single "I Will Be in Love with You" and more than 15 albums. Taylor has also enjoyed a lucrative career writing commercial jingles for products including Little Debbie Snack Cakes. These days, when Taylor is not touring, he can usually be found at Boston's Berklee College of Music, where he has been on the full-time faculty since 1989.

"I'm enormously attracted to being in the presence of people who are on a journey. I'm delighted to be in the presence of talented young people," says Taylor, who teaches a course in stage performance techniques. With a career that began in 1970 and has seen him play everything from coffee houses to concert halls, Taylor might well also offer instruction on what it takes to last in show business.

"The key to career longevity is simple. You must stay in front of your audience. You can't step away and then expect to come back in. Careers are sustained by playing in front of your audience forever. That's how James Taylor does it, and that's how people like Bonnie Raitt and Jackson Browne do it, too And it is how I have done it. It is the ability to go out year after year. I am absolutely convinced that my continued life is a direct result of my being able to see my audience on a very regular basis. I would be powerless without them. Their presence gives me an eternal sense of renewal."

Livingston Taylor will perform at Raffael's at the South Shore Country Club, 274 South St., Hingham, on Friday, Aug. 26. For tickets and information, call 781-749-1720 or 781-749-1747, or visit www.raffaels.com.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR WEEK OF AUG. 29, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The typically tidy Ram or Ewe might want to butt out until things are settled on the home front. But get involved and let your Ovine sense of order help restore domestic tranquility.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's flair for fine-tuning complicated fiscal dealings comes in handy when an unexpected financial problem arises. Stay with it until it's resolved to your satisfaction.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family aspects remain strong. There might be some unresolved difficulties, but continued attempts to smooth things over eventually prove to be successful. A major purchase looms.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A promise that was made but never kept suddenly re-emerges in your life. You now have to decide if you're still interested in what it offers or if you've moved past it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Romance comes to unattached Leos and Leonas who have been waiting for Cupid to target them for far too long. Domestic purr-fection is also enhanced for paired Felines.

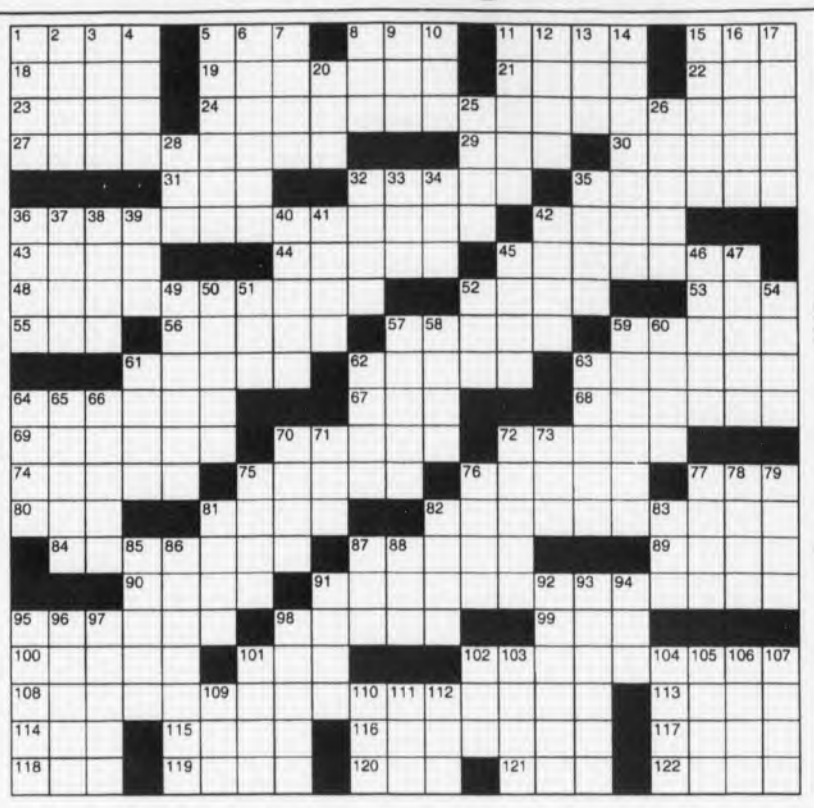
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You need to take a much-needed break from that demanding project before too much energy-draining tension sets in. And don't be ashamed to ask for help.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Change makes demands that you might find unwelcome at this time. But instead of concentrating on the short run, look toward potential benefits down the road.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You have a gift for reviving projects that seem beyond repair. Use that same ability to restore a relationship that seems to have turned from loving to lifeless.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Expect to be asked to use your combined wisdom and humor to resolve a problem. After all, folks not only value your advice, they also like how you give it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Most people consider you solid and steady. But you also can be quite capricious (which is a Latin word for "describing the behavior of Goats") when it suits your needs.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) People treat you as you wish to be treated. So if you want a change in your relationship, make it happen. Also expect someone to reveal some long-held secrets.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stay with the decision you made, despite a sudden torrent of advice to the contrary from well-meaning people. Remember: You know your needs better than anyone.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You like things tidy, with no loose ends. You also enjoy research and would make an excellent investigative reporter or scientist.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave: If you live on the South Shore and you're looking for a church home we encourage you to join us on Sunday mornings. We are an open, welcoming congregation.

There are two summer services. Our 8 am Sailing Club service is informal and it meets rain or shine. Come and worship outside in the beautiful, tranquil setting overlooking our harbor. Our 10am service meets in the Chapel located at the back of our building. This is a traditional service and the chapel is air conditioned on hot summer days.

For more information visit us on our website at scc@2ndcc.org or call the church office at 781-383-0345

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us in this exploration on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday (August 21) our summer schedule continues. We will have services at 7am and 9am instead of the usual 8am and 10am. The 7am service is at Sandy Beach in Cohasset. This wonderful service takes place with the gorgeous ocean backdrop and is truly a highlight of the summer. Our 9am service takes place in the church as usual.

Also, this Sunday (at 4pm), the Outreach team is sending people out to the Quincy Long Island Shelter to serve food. This is a ministry we do once a month and it is a very rewarding one!

During the summer, our normal Godly Play and youth programs do not meet, but they will pick back up again when school begins in the fall. Instead, our more relaxed summer children's program, which meets at 9am on Sundays, is working on projects to help those in need in the surrounding community.

AA now meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Please call the church office at (781) 383-1083 or visit ststephenscohasset.org for more information.

Coughlin champions K-9

Town Manager approves Police Chief's plans

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This week, the Cohasset Police Department hopes to welcome a new member to the force — a four-legged one who barks.

Following an incident on Aug. 17th that called for the use of a K-9, Town Manager Michael Coughlin authorized Police Chief Mark DeLuca to obtain a police dog for the Cohasset force.

At the Aug. 16th Board of Selectmen meeting, Coughlin expressed his approval of Chief DeLuca's plan.

"Following an initial review, I am recommending that Chief DeLuca proceed with the K-9 unit," Coughlin said at the meeting. "He has presented a program that could provide a K-9 at no cost to the town."

"I believe it's well within my responsibility as Town Manager to make the call."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

The Board raised the question of whether or not Cohasset could share a K-9 with other nearby communities, rather than getting one of its own.

"The Town Manager indicated to the Selectmen that he would consult with Hull about regionalizing their dog and report back to the Selectmen before any action is taken," Selectmen Leland Jenkins wrote in an email.

Coughlin told the Mariner that this step has since been taken.

"We tried that with Scituate and Hull, but it didn't work out," Coughlin said. Scituate's K-9 recently passed away, while Hull's dog is being retired. Coughlin added that he "might be interested in trying to work something out" with these other towns, once Cohasset has its own dog.

Cataldo starts new chapter in Cohasset

Superintendent looking forward to school year

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When you step into Barbara Cataldo's office, one thing you won't find is a traditional desk.

Instead, you'll see a large rectangular table surrounded by plush, light-green suede armchairs, making the room feel more like a dining room/living room area than an office.

The choice in office décor is deliberate, said Cataldo.

"It allows folks to sit around the table and talk," the Superintendent said. "It encourages them to stay awhile. It also helps me to relax since I spend long hours here — it has to be comfortable."

This is the attitude that Cohasset's brand new Superintendent of Schools, who began her tenure on July 1, brings to her job every day.

Replacing the big, dark wooden desk that used to occupy her space is just one way Cataldo strives to have a "more open office."

Cataldo comes to Cohasset after working as Assistant Superintendent in Milford, a position she held for four years. Prior to that, she served as director of special education in Arlington for two years (2005-2007) and special needs coordinator in Cambridge for three (2002-2005). These experiences helped shape Cataldo's leadership style.

"It's not often two major offices change at the same time. I think it's a fortunate time. We get to turn the page together."
Barbara Cataldo, Superintendent of Schools

"I learned that collaboration's important — listening to all perspectives," Cataldo said. "Also essential — taking time to reflect. And putting kids first is definitive."

Cataldo, who holds degrees from Wheaton College and Harvard and is currently pursuing a doctorate in educational leadership at Northeastern, brings a unique perspective to her role as a leader and educator.

"I didn't learn to read until I was 18 years old," Cataldo shared. "I had dyslexia that went undiagnosed... I first read Charlotte's Web as an adult. Ironically, my first job was as a reading specialist."

HELPING OTHERS

Food drive for Cohasset Food Pantry

What
The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food Pantry on Sat., Aug. 27 at Stop & Shop. Committee volunteers will be at the Stop &Shop from 9 a.m. to 1 pm. passing out lists of needed items and collecting food donations.

Why
The staff of the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products, soaps and toiletries prior to the Labor Day Weekend. The Food Pantry also welcomes donations of cash. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance!

Volunteers
Additional volunteers are needed to fill two-hour slots; please call Gail Collins at 781-383-9789 if you're able to help.

Others ways to help
If you miss Saturday's food drive outside Stop & Shop, food and grocery donations can also be dropped off at the rear entrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays, and at Stop & Shop or at local churches on Sundays. Donations may also be left at the St. Anthony Parish Center, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Do you have a garden? Fresh vegetables may be left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m.

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

Contact
To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call. To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Brush chipping

Residential Brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area on Saturday, Aug. 27, from 7:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

No trees over 10 inches in diameter. No stumps, firewood, briars or weeds. No contractors.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Clothing collection

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation has placed a clothing donation drop-off box in the Aubuchon Hardware parking lot at 823 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation collects donations of lightly used clothing of all types for men, women and children, shoes, sneakers, accessories, handbags and jeans.

What to do if a hurricane hits

During this year's Atlantic Hurricane Season (June 1st - November 30th), the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) urges homeowners to protect their property from strong winds, damaging rains, and flooding that hurricanes or tropical storms can bring to New England.

There are several steps, which we can all take to help make our homes and property more storm resistant. Early planning and preparation can be the key to your safety.

Here are some examples of how to protect your property:

- Make a record of your personal property. Keep an itemized list of your furniture, clothing and valuables to assist adjusters in case of a claim. Back it up with photographs or video.
- Protect your insurance policies and other important documents in a secure place like a safe deposit box or a watertight box. Many people back up important documents online.
- Keep trees and shrubbery around your home trimmed. Remove diseased or damaged tree limbs that could be blown down, causing damage, during a storm.
- Clear clogged rain gutters. Hurricanes/tropical storms often bring torrential rain. Providing clear drainage will help prevent misdirected flooding.
- Make sure storage sheds, children's playhouses or other outbuildings are securely anchored, either to a permanent foundation or with straps and ground anchors.
- Make temporary plywood covers to protect windows and sliding doors. Drill holes for screws or lag bolts in each cover and around each window. To save time, use a numbering or lettering system that shows which cover goes with which window. Store the mounting screws or lag bolts with the covers in a place where they are readily accessible. Note: Taping of windows does not prevent them from breaking.
- Make a list of outdoor items to bring inside in case of a storm, such as lawn furniture, trash barrels, hanging plants, toys and awnings. A list will help you more quickly identify anything that can be broken or picked up by strong winds and used as a missile.
- Learn where gas pilots and water mains are located and how to safely shut off all utilities.
- Lock doors and windows to ensure that they are closed tight to help protect against strong winds and rain.
- Keep pets indoors. Make sure you have additional food and water supplies for them.
- Continue to monitor your Emergency Alert Station (EAS) and other Media for official warnings, messages and instructions.
- Stay inside until officials say otherwise.

Museums are open for the season

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses.

The museums are open from 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Bills defaced with obscenities

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police told a 63-year-old Hull man that if he returns to JJ's he could be arrested for trespassing. Last Wednesday (Aug. 17), JJ's called after the customer paid with bills that he had written obscenities on, apparently waiting for the look of shock on the young clerk's face, police said.

Similar bills had been used in the past but the clerks did not immediately notice what was written on them until cashing out. This time police had a plate number and the officer caught up with the man in the MBTA parking lot and spoke with him.

MV crashes

- At 5:58 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 15), police responded to a single-vehicle crash at Beechwood and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 20-year-old Cohasset man operating a 1992 Ford Mustang accelerated as he attempted the turn from Beechwood Street onto 3A to head north (toward Hingham) when he lost control and the truck slid across 3A into a ditch on the southbound side of the highway. When the Cohasset man tried to drive out of the ditch, the car slid farther and hit a tree.

Neither the operator or his passenger were injured; the car was towed. The Cohasset man was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

- At 11:56 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 15), police responded to a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) by Tedeschi Plaza. A 2010 Toyota, operated by a 70-year-old Hull man had stopped behind a car that was attempting to make a left-hand turn into the plaza, when the Toyota was struck from behind by a 1999 Nissan, operated by a 17-year-old Scituate girl. The cars were headed south.

The operator of the Nissan was given a verbal warning for following too closely. No one was injured and neither vehicle was towed, police said.

- At 7:35 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 15), police said the operator of a 2000 Toyota pickup truck, a 55-year-old Cohasset woman, who was heading north on King Street (by Sunrise) attempted to stop behind a vehicle that had stopped to make a left-hand turn but slid on the wet pavement. The operator turned off the road to avoid hitting the other vehicle and went into the guardrail. Her truck was towed. There were no injuries and no citations were issued, police said.
- At 10:50 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 19) as the Music Circus was letting out, a 1997 conversion van operated by a 42-year-old E. Bridgewater woman, lurched forward when she started it up in the parking lot and went into a metal storage container at the venue; part of the container then hit one of the buildings. The van's passenger, who is the registered owner of the vehicle, although secured, was thrown out of his wheelchair. The airbags deployed, police said. The passenger was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries and the van had to be towed. The parking lot was shut down for about 10-15 minutes during the incident, police said.
- At 5:33 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 21), a 2010 Ford rental car, operated by a 55-year-old Los Angeles man, was traveling toward Hingham on N. Main Street past the Town Common when the operator turned around in the driveway just past Highland Avenue. When the LA man backed out of the driveway, he hit a 2003 Chevrolet, operated by a 17-year-old Hingham resident, that was headed toward the village on N. Main Street. Both vehicles were towed. The operator of the rental car was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Harassment order

A Scituate father, who did not like the company his daughter was keeping and went to the friend's house to complain, violated a harassment prevention order sought by the friend's family, police said. All involved are Scituate residents. Cohasset got involved on Monday (Aug. 15), when the father verbally accosted the friend who was with his daughter at Shaw's. Cohasset police responded and investigated; the man was later arrested at his home by Scituate police and brought to the Cohasset station for violating a harassment prevention order.

Cigars stolen

Police are investigating the theft of cigars valued at about $680 from Curtis Liquors that was reported last Monday (Aug. 15). Police examined surveillance video that shows a man in his 40s,wearing cargo shorts with large pockets, entering the humidor. His hand gestures caught on video indicate he may have been taking the cigars. The larceny was discovered when the store was conducting inventory and found cheaper cigars in boxes where the expensive ones had been, police said.

Shoplifting

Police are investigating the shoplifting of $695.93 in groceries from Stop & Shop last week. The store reported the larceny on Tuesday after security personnel reviewed surveillance tapes. Police said a couple, using someone else's Stop & Shop card, borrowed the hand-held scanner and went around putting groceries in shopping bags. However, when it came time to pay for the items, the couple left the store without doing so, police said.

Money taken

A young couple renting an apartment in the village reported that someone took about $100 out of their vacation "cash" jar. There are no suspects at this time, police said.

Planter missing

The owner of a village shop reported the theft of an iron planter last Wednesday (Aug. 17). The planter was taken sometime between the time the store closed the night before and opened the next morning.

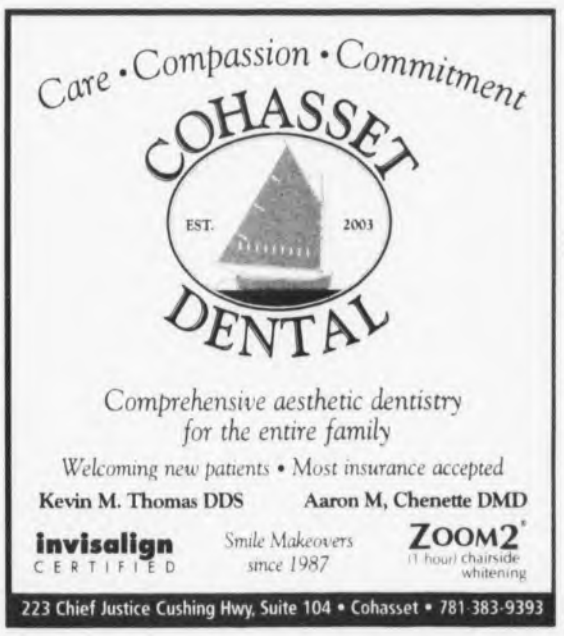
Erratic operation

Police spoke to the operator of a 2000 Mercedes, a 35-year-old man, who works in the village, after a motorist had complained about his driving. Police said the person who notified them said that he was racing down Ripley Road, speeding, tailgating and passing on the left, before driving through the Town Parking lot.

Eggs thrown

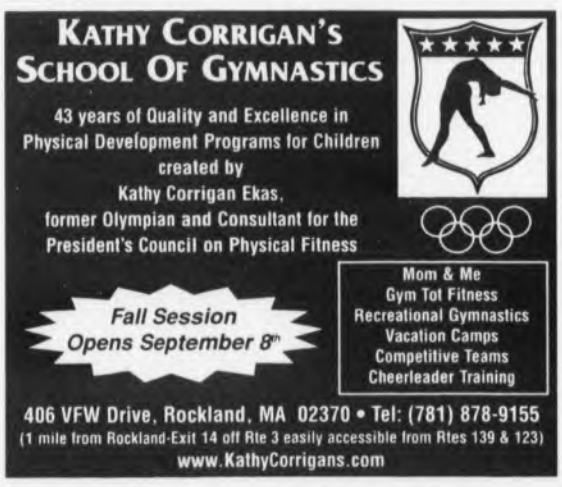
A couple of 18-year-old Cohasset men on their way to college in a few weeks told police they were "just being stupid" when they threw eggs at a car last Wednesday (Aug. 17). There was no damage. Police spoke with the teens, who said they would not do it again, and the victim was satisfied that a tongue-lashing was enough.

ID theft



A family whose Visa card was compromised reported the ID theft to police and was given a special ID theft packet to take home and fill out. The family had received a call from Visa staying someone was attempting to use their card. The incident is under investigation.

Missing gas



A caller reported that he believes gas had been siphoned out of his car while he was parked on Howard Gleason Road for about 9 hours last Sunday (Aug. 21). He wanted the incident logged. Police said there have been no reports of similar incidents.

Route 3A sidewalk project 'shovel-ready'

Next phase of Village Revitalization on horizon

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Constructing a pedestrian sidewalk to the Greenbush commuter rail is one of two major initiatives that Gruber and Brennan are proposing. The second is a continuation of the village revitalization project that was done in 2006-2007.

The "Greenbush guys" are working on where the sidewalk should end — and trying to make that come to fruition.

Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, engineers and special assistants to the Town Manager (commonly known as the "Greenbush guys") presented their latest construction plans to the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Aug. 16, asking the Board to approve their state grant proposals to MassWorks.

The Board reviewed the plans, detailing the sidewalk project near the Greenbush station and phase three of the Cohasset Village revitalization, and voted to allow Gruber and Brennan to submit the grant applications.

Appearing before the Selectmen fulfilled two purposes and satisfied two requirements, said Gruber.

"We needed to hold a public hearing and get a certified copy of the vote," Gruber said, which is "part of the application process. It also serves to inform people in general."

Constructing a pedestrian sidewalk to the Greenbush commuter rail is one of two major initiatives that Gruber and Brennan are proposing. The second is a continuation of the village revitalization project that was done in 2006-2007.

While the sidewalk project was started years ago, various circumstances have delayed the process. Cohasset first received a $278,800 transit-oriented development (TOD) grant from the state in 2006, which paid for the construction of a sidewalk from the intersection of North Main Street and lower King Street and from lower King down to the train station on Route 3A.

"The part along lower King Street has been constructed under the grant," said Gruber. But although covered by the same grant, the section along Route 3A to the train station has not been constructed, he explained.

Gruber said problems began when they couldn't construct the 3A section of the sidewalk for the following reasons:

- The MBTA was reconstructing the lower King/3A intersection;
- Coordinating with the development of Scituate Hill (immediately across from the lower King/3A intersection), which has been delayed;
- Integration of their designs with the TOD development next to the station;
- When the MBTA finished their reconstruction of 3A, they put their guardrail in the same location as the sidewalk and it took them a year to relocate it;
- When Cohasset was ready to start construction last year, MassDOT (Department of Transportation) came up with a whole series of questions which Gruber and Brennan had never seen. "Construction was put on hold until we could resolve those," said Gruber.

"MassDOT took the remaining balance of TOD grant back and told us in order to finish the sidewalk project, we need to reapply and we intend to," Gruber said.

"If there's ever a shovel-ready project, this is it," Gruber said about the sidewalk.

Village

Gruber and Brennan also need to complete a MassWorks application for grant funds for the new phase of village revitalization. Both applications are due by Sept. 9

Gruber said they should find out in the next six weeks whether the town would receive either grant. He hopes to start the projects during the next construction season (spring), adding, "We're not sure we can get it all done next year."

The new phase of village revitalization includes: increasing the parking in the town parking lot; adding a pedestrian pathway along Parking Way; as well as visual enhancements to the parking area and better lighting.

The project would also include improving the pedestrian and vehicular safety at the Ripley Road, Pleasant Street and Depot Court intersection (near the Art Center); new sidewalks along the Ripley Road businesses and additional parking and traffic calming measures there. Additionally, storm drainage at the Post Office would be completely reconstructed.

Gruber pointed out that Ripley Road is a main corridor into the village and they want to enhance that stretch of road from the library to the intersection of Depot Court with new sidewalks, curbing and roadway.

Gruber also said a priority is providing a way to link the Ripley Road business area with the balance of the village to encourage more pedestrian traffic.

Town Parking Lot

The town-owned land behind the Teen Center would make an ideal place to add parking, except for the fact that the area "is all ledge," said Gruber. "If we develop it into parking, there's a trade-off of cost vs. benefit." Gruber explains that carving away the rock would add around 47 spaces in the lot.

Part of the reconstruction of the Town Parking Lot also involves changing the perpendicular parking to angled parking.

"That will add directionality to the parking lot," said Gruber. It will also result in the loss of a parking space at each end. Gruber said that the parking spots along the train tracks would remain perpendicular.

Gruber and Brennan also want to improve the lighting in the parking lot, as well as add a new crosswalk to accommodate Art Center students leaving their classes in the evening. They also plan to add features like trees and plantings. "We want to make it a more pleasant place to be," said Gruber.

All told, the cost of the phase village revitalization totals around $1-1/2 to $2 million, according to Gruber's calculations, though the number "can't be pinned down" right now. Once the state funding comes through, Gruber said that he and Brennan are ready to go.

Local sisters buy consignment shop

To open as Kit & Kaboodle this month

By Lauren Scribi
correspondent

Two local sisters are finally making their dream a reality. Heather Lindquist of Marshfield and Keri Piepenbrink of Carver, have taken over the Cohasset Consignment Shop in Tedeschi Plaza on Route 3A and will be opening as Kit & Kaboodle at the end of the month.

The non-profit Cohasset Consignment Shop had been a community favorite and recently shut its doors after 56 years of business. Lindquist has worked at the shop, which was owned by the Social Service League, on Wednesdays and Saturdays for the past eight years and was approached by the former owners to purchase the business. She jumped at the idea and asked her sister to take part in the new venture with her. Piepenbrink, who worked as a full-time medical receptionist, decided to quit her job and take on the challenge with her sister.

Lindquist said, "I'm glad to have my sister back. When she worked at the other place I never really saw her and we are really close. I'm glad that we were able to take this opportunity and now we can spend a lot of time together."

Inspired by their late mother's retail passion, the two sisters, who grew up in Cohasset, are excited to be following in her footsteps. They have always been surrounded by the retail industry, as their mother owned a few different retail businesses around the South Shore. The sisters always helped with her old stores and realized that some day they would like to run their own shop.

"Our mother was our big motivation. She was a huge inspiration to the both of us," said Piepenbrink.

Their mother, Bonnie Farrell, owned a shop in Cohasset Village called Kit & Kaboodle, which serves as the inspiration behind their name.

Despite the advice and support from people in the industry, the road to opening the store has been a difficult one. They had hoped to open their doors the day after the Cohasset Consignment Shop closed but realized there was much more involved. Between getting a state tax ID, finding all the money to make their dream come true and finalizing the lease, it has been quite an experience.

"We had to get insurance, the alarm system and put a new sign out front. All of these small little things add up. On top of that, having kids and vacations and dealing with all of it has been a hectic experience," said Piepenbrink.

Due to an issue with the lease, the consignment shop will not be open for business until the end of the month. In the meantime, the sisters are working hard to fill the 4000 square feet of space they have and they are trying to iron out all the details of running a business.

Although they plan on making changes to make the shop their own, they intend to run the business in the same manner as the previous owners. All items that are consigned will only be for sale for 60 days and after that, the products will be donated to a charitable organization. In addition to a few volunteers that will be helping out on a weekly basis, they are hoping to make it a family venture by getting their children and husbands involved.

They have received an outpouring of support from the local community and hope that previous customers of the Cohasset Consignment Shop will continue shopping at the store.

Kit & Kaboodle will be accepting a variety of quality consignments. They are always looking for women's, men's and children's clothing, bric-a-brac, jewelry, antiques, furniture, shoes and drapery.

Piepenbrink said, "We want to be somewhat selective but we are certainly trying not to turn people away. We want to make it affordable for everybody and have good, quality items for people to choose from."

For more than half a century, the Social Service League operated the Cohasset Consignment Shop to raise money for its work in the community. The League said the decision to close the shop would allow the League to refocus their efforts on different avenues. Though based in Cohasset, the League provides services to the surrounding towns of Scituate, Hingham, Norwell and Hull.

Kit & Kaboodle is located in the Tedeschi Plaza in Cohasset alongside Curtis Liquors, CVS, Shoe Market for Kids, Victoria's, Par-Tee, and Cohasset Jewelers. You can contact Kit & Kaboodle by email at: kitnkaboodle02025@yahoo.com The shop's phone number is: is 781-383-0687.

Fore River Bridge construction controversy:

Neighborhood Association seeks to bring Cohasset onboard

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset commuters, take note. The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) is working on reconstructing the Fore River Bridge in Quincy and widening the river's channel. According to the MassDOT website, based on 2009 traffic counts: 30,000 vehicles cross the bridge each weekday. When the bridge is raised to allow ships to pass, traffic screeches to a halt. Once the permanent, larger bridge is constructed, the wider channel will impact South Shore commuters even more.

The Fore River Bridge, which was built in 1936 and is considered to be a historic local landmark, serves as a major gateway between Boston and the South Shore. When it was slated for replacement in 2002, a $60 million temporary moveable span bridge was built in its place. The temporary structure opened in 2004, and the permanent one is expected to be complete by 2016 or 2020.

While it seems like a long time away, residents from Weymouth down to Duxbury are taking an active interest in the bridge's construction design. Thirteen towns are members of the South Shore Coalition, a subdivision of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, representing the geographic area of the Fore River: Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

MassDOT's website details two potential designs: a 270-foot-tall vertical-lift bridge or a smaller bascule (drawbridge) structure (see sidebar). The U.S. Coast Guard is favoring a vertical-lift bridge, which will allow for a wider channel so that larger ships can pass through. The river's current 175-foot channel width would be increased to up to 250 feet.

Two Weymouth residents, town councilor Victor Pap III and Gary Peters of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association, appeared before the Cohasset Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Aug. 16, to solicit the town's support for a smaller structure.

Pap and Peters presented the Board with some background on the bridge's construction, explaining how the proposed vertical-lift will increase traffic problems and negatively impact local communities.

Pap called the structure "monstrous," saying that the traffic delays will deter folks from traveling to the South Shore. In a phone interview, he said he fears that the bridge may cause young families to hesitate moving to communities like Weymouth. Pap brought the issue home to Cohasset when he mentioned how so many folks travel on Route 3A to visit Cohasset for its many attractions, such as the Music Circus. With a massive new bridge and the gridlock it will cause, Pap explained, the region will suffer.

"A bridge that tall will take quite a while to get up and down safely," Peters told the Selectmen.

"The maritime has the right of way," Pap added. "The Coast Guard is insisting on a channel width that's astronomically huge for a secondary port. It just doesn't make sense for the region."

Peters told the Board that the widening of the Fore River would make it bigger than the Panama Canal. Peters, who has brought the case as far as Washington, D.C., said that the late Senator Ted Kennedy even weighed in on the Fore River Bridge issue.

"Senator Kennedy said, 'Let me get this straight — you folks need a Ford and are trying to build a Cadillac?'" Peters said.

Selectman Diane Kennedy asked, "What's the other side? Why do this?" She wondered why the state would favor the "ugly, expensive" model over the "attractive, cheaper" one.

Peters said that the Coast Guard's "intentions are honorable. They're looking to the future and want a minimum of 225 feet to allow the widest possible clearance. But they need to take a hard look at the depth and the cost."

Peters, Pap, the members of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association and the South Shore Coalition are all "trying to make a strong statement" by getting South Shore town leaders to sign on to their cause. Peters and Pap asked the Board to sign a document stating that they support the bascule bridge design.

"Now is the time to make a stand regionally," Peters said.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr said that the Board would review the matter and have the community take a look at it.

"There are two choices," Peters summed it up in a phone interview. "Big, slow and ugly or small, fast and beautiful. It's just that simple."

A tale of two bridges:

Two possible designs for the new Fore River Bridge

Bascule (drawbridge):

- 175 feet wide
- 200-foot channel width
- Cost: $130-225 million
- Higher clearance (unlimited vertically)
- Less maintenance
- Faster cycle times (12-14 minutes)
- Fewer openings due to arc
- Faster construction timetable: 2016
- Less dredging — fewer environmental impacts
- Smoother permitting process with less public opposition
- Long-term positive economic impact on region

Vertical-Lift:

- 270 feet tall
- 250-foot channel width
- Cost: $240-310 million
- Lower clearance
- Daily maintenance
- Slower cycle times (15-45 minutes)
- More frequent openings
- Longer construction timetable: 2020
- More dredging to accommodate depth
- Must clear multiple hurdles for permitting
- Long-term negative impact on region

State House

Secretary of the Commonwealth William F. Galvin recently hosted the Summer Volunteer Appreciation Luncheon and Doric Docent Book Award presentation at the Massachusetts State House. This event is an opportunity to recognize high school students for their service as volunteer State House Tour guides this summer. Each year more than 95,000 people visit the State House.

Michael Fegreus of Cohasset received a certificate of appreciation from Galvin.

UMass dean's list

The following Cohasset students qualified for the dean's list for the 2011 spring semester at UMass-Amherst: Lauren Elizabeth Mack, Aaron V. Berard, Margaret Christine Goodwin, Carley Elizabeth Zappolo, Lawrence J. O'Connor Jr., Carly McCall Salerno, Juliette M. Karp, Johanna Elizabeth Brophy and James Emerson Earle.

In order to qualify, an undergraduate student must receive a 3.5 grade-point average or better on a 4-point scale.

UMass graduates

Approximately 4,300 students in 85 majors received undergraduate degrees from UMass-Amherst at commencement ceremonies May 13, 2011, at the Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The following Cohasset residents were among the graduates: Austen K. Lanzillotti, Nicholas Zappolo and Daniel Davis McCarthy.

Roger Williams

Paul N. St.Pierre, a resident of Cohasset, was named to 2011 spring dean's list at Roger Williams University. Full-time students who complete 12 or more credits per semester and earn a grade point average of 3.4 or higher are placed on the dean's list that semester, provided that they have not received any of the following grades: F, I, NP or NS.

BC High

The following Cohasset students achieved honor roll status for the fourth quarter at Boston College High School.

High Honors:

Class of 2012: Taylor Golz, Jay Salerno, and Matthew Troy.

Class of 2013: Michael Fegreus, Andrew Fontaine, Trevor Schramn and Zachary Strecker.

Class of 2012: Mark Brown, Zachary Coggins and Luke Johnston.

For high honors a student must have at least a 3.80 QPA and all grades C+ or higher.

Honors

Class of 2012: William Brown and Kyle Healy.

Class of 2013: Robert Hillman, Michael O'Brien and William Patsos.

For honors a student must receive a Q.P.A. of at least 3.2 and all grades C- or higher.

Endicott

The 71st commencement exercises of Endicott College took place Saturday, May 21, 2011. Among the graduates was Sarah Anne Malone, the daughter of Dale and Emily Malone of Cohasset. Sarah majored in liberal studies teacher licensure and received a bachelor of arts degree.

Sarah was also named to the 2011 spring dean's list. In order to qualify for the dean's list, a student must obtain a minimum grade point average of 3.5, receive no grade below a C and be enrolled in a minimum of 12 credits for the semester.

Lafayette

Adam Earle Smith of Cohasset graduated from Lafayette College in Easton, Penn. Adam earned a bachelor of arts degree in economics and business at the college's commencement on May 21, 2011.

Emerson

Emerson College student Kelly Voke of Cohasset was named to the dean's list for the 2011 spring semester. To earn dean's list status, a student must maintain a cumulative point average of 3.7 or higher.

UNH

The following Cohasset students graduated from the University of New Hampshire during Commencement Ceremony held on Saturday, May 21, 2011, in Durham, N.H.

Students who received the honor of Summa Cum Laude graduated with a GPA of 3.7-4.0; students who received the honor of Magna Cum Laude graduated with a GPA of 3.50-3.69; and students who received the honor of Cum Laude graduated with a GPA of 3.2-3.49.

Alyssa Hinman earned a bachelor of arts degree in political science.

Kristen Schwerin earned a bachelors degree of music magna cum laude.

Well, that is the news for this week Cohasset. Make sure to get the news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm. News and photos can also be dropped off at the Mariner drop box in Tedeschi's in Cohasset Village. — Jen

GIMME SHELTER

Milan looks like a Russian Blue

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find shelter for Milan. Milan is a young female kitten. She resembles a Russian Blue and who knows what her lineage actually is. We know that she's a sweet female, cuddly kitten, who plays and purrs and likes to be held. She's happy at the shelter but would like to have her very own home and family. She promises to use the scratching post and the litter box. She's up to date on her shots.

If you've been looking for that special feline to share your home with, please come visit the shelter. HSAR has white, black, tan, Tiger, Calico, Tuxedo, large, small, young, old; something for everyone!

You can check Milan out on the website along with many of HSAR's other cats at: www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the Adoption Coordinator.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net.

The Shelter is offering a low cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Church, director in perfect harmony

Jin Kim leads music program at Second Congregational

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Journal

Once again, Jin Kim is making weekly music in a church. In February the man who's been the music director and conductor of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra for the last 14 years became the new director of music for the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. He waxed excitedly about how the position came up. "I was looking around for a church I wanted to belong to," Kim said. "I went to services, liked them. Next thing I knew, I was going back." It helped that he knew some of the people who went to Second Congregational from his time as conductor for the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra. "I live in Boston, in Newton, but I have strong ties with the South Shore. Then came the bonus of finding out they needed a music director."

He decided to apply. According to the Reverend Gary Ritts, the church's pastor, "We had five candidates. Since some congregants knew him from his concerts, he came with one foot in the door and a great reputation. He quickly moved to the top of our list."

Kim has come to his new position with plenty of experience, as a conductor, vocalist, and pianist. Apart from his years with the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, he was invited last summer to be a Conducting Fellow at the Aspen Music Festival. He has conducted Washington, DC's National Symphony, and been a regular guest conductor of the Bucheon Philharmonic, a leading professional Korean orchestra, and many other orchestras both local and across the country.

He also brings experience as music director for other churches, although he stopped doing any music direction for any church almost five years ago. "I was music director for a UCC parish in Cambridge, a Korean Unitarian church. They asked me if I would do it for three to four months. That turned into a year." Kim also ended up doing a lot more for the congregation than being its music director. "It may be a calling, but it's also work. Then I was your typical musician's story. A lot of work that comes your way is part time." Between juggling those jobs and the work he did for the church, he described himself as feeling burned out. "I resigned being music director and decided to explore just being a member for a while."

That exploration led him, eventually, to the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, and with a renewed perspective and enthusiasm from having taken a break.

"Jin's energy is contagious," Ritts said. "He's very dedicated, and the expression of music is very important to him."

"Music gives a sense of that otherness," Kim said. "It lifts the senses. It's the closest thing we have to speaking in tongues. It's rejuvenating, or a reality check for people. It's how to connect. As long as the music is done well, and supports worship, it's good music.

"I think a lot of people forget that a lot of great music came from the church, because they supported those musicians. There isn't any congregation that doesn't like good music, but when it comes down to budget, music often gets cut." Fortunately, Kim said, "Second Congregation really supports the arts and music."

"Jin seems to be very interested in presentation and dynamics," Ritts said, explaining that the man Kim replaced was into big choral sound. "Everyone's enjoying the challenges Jin's bringing our way, bringing dynamics and feelings to the music."

Kim doesn't think he's changing anything, although he hadn't started attending services before his predecessor left, so he couldn't speak to what the differences are. He's very sensitive to the potential prickly aspects of a transition. "Whenever there's a transition, there could be problems. That's not the case in this case. My predecessor, Joel Buford, needed a change. He built up a nice camaraderie with the musicians. I want to do that, too."

"Jin's energy is contagious. He's very dedicated, and the expression of music is very important to him."
The Rev. Gary Ritts, Second Congregational Church

So his approach has been to see what's working and go from there. "Joel did tremendous things with this program. We have a successful pastor, and I've been taking the time getting a feel for the church."

When Ritts heard that Kim doesn't think he's changing anything, he said, "Good for him. There've been no change in rehearsals, but his style is definitely different."

Ritts said that the church's members are very involved. "Congregational means the congregation. We're member-driven, so it's always busy. With his energy and enthusiasm, Jim has stepped into that perfectly."

"I'm thrilled to be a part of the Second Congregational Church," Kim said.

COHASSET K-9

Following last week's incident, Coughlin said that he believes it's "prudent to move forward" with the K-9 initiative.

"When you have a major incident [like this], you need to take a decisive step forward," said Coughlin. "The police log shows weekly requests for a K-9 unit."

The day after the incident in question, DeLuca wrote a letter to Coughlin reiterating his request for a K-9.

The police department "requested K-9 assistance from Weymouth, the MBTA, and Hingham Police," DeLuca wrote. "Approximately an hour later K-9 units arrived on scene and minutes later found the suspect hiding in the woods."

While seven Cohasset officers were "tied up on parameter posts" awaiting assistance, the trains were stopped on the Greenbush Line, King Street was shut down, schools were on lock-down, and three K-9 cars were rushing to Cohasset in emergency mode, DeLuca wrote.

"Luckily, despite the delay in response time the situation came to closure without incident," Coughlin wrote in an email. He then gave DeLuca his official authorization to proceed with the K-9 program. "As both a Town Manager and as a former Assistant District Attorney, I have seen firsthand the value of a K-9 unit (see sidebar)."

Coughlin reiterated to the Mariner that it was fortunate nothing worse occurred during that tense time. For these type of incidents, he said, "An hour is an eternity. If we'd had our own K-9, we wouldn't have had that problem. We could locate someone in five minutes if we had that presence."

"Critical instances show the need [for a K-9], Coughlin continued. "I wouldn't be doing my job as Town Manager if I didn't provide the town with this capability.

"If [Fire] Chief Silva needed life-saving equipment for the department that was in his budget, I wouldn't hesitate to approve it, if it was a critical need for the department," Coughlin continued. The K-9, he said, "is a critical need for the department.

"I believe it's well within my responsibility as Town Manager to make the call," Coughlin added.

"Critical instances show the need [for a K-9]. I wouldn't be doing my job as Town Manager if I didn't provide the town with this capability."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin

Addressing concerns that a K-9 simply isn't in the town's budget, Coughlin said, "The cost to the town will be neutral."

The Cohasset Police Association has already provided $6,500 to get the program up and running. Chief DeLuca reported that $4,000 was contributed from folks in town, despite the fact that the police haven't started "overt fundraising" yet (see sidebar).

"The grassroots fundraising effort is bringing different people from all walks of life together," said Coughlin. "This is the foundation of community policing. It's building awareness of public safety; it's a wonderful boost for the town."

"I'm excited," said DeLuca. "I think it's going to be a tremendous program and am looking forward to getting it going."

DeLuca told the Mariner that Police Officer Patrick Reardon will serve as K-9 officer. By press time, he will have already traveled to Connecticut to pick up a police dog from Connecticut Canine Services (see sidebar).

Said Reardon, "I think the town will love the dog."

Who's the lucky dog?

The dog joining the ranks of the Cohasset Police has a few hurdles to jump through before he can join the force, said Chief Mark DeLuca.

First, Police Officer Patrick Reardon, along with a dog trainer from Plymouth County, must pick out a dog from Connecticut Canine Services, an organization that imports and trains working dogs for police, military, search and rescue, and personal protection.

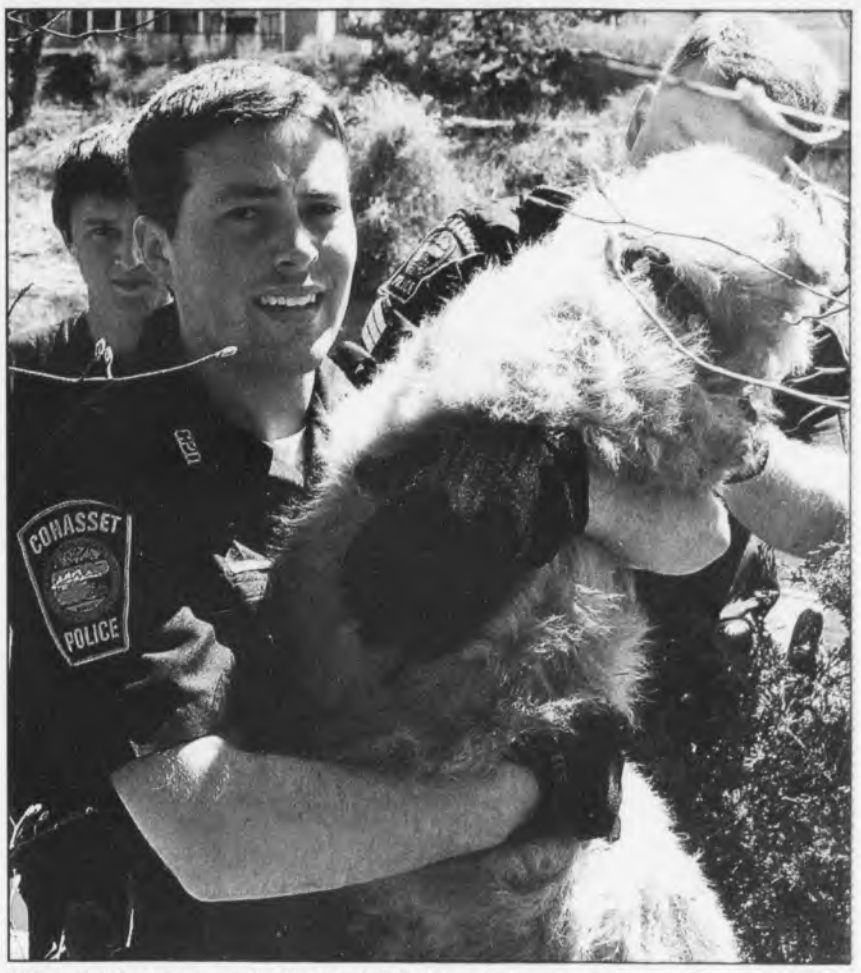
"Pending a physical to make sure the dog is conditioned for police work," the canine will be brought to Cohasset this weekend, DeLuca said.

The dog, which will be either a German shepherd or Belgian malinois, has to be at least a year old to begin police training.

"He'll live with me and my family until after Labor Day," said Reardon. "The training will start then."

Once the pup arrives in Cohasset, "We'll make plans for the community to meet the dog," said DeLuca. "I think people will receive it well."

Coughlin recalls when K-9 came in handy



Town Manager Michael Coughlin makes no secret of his support for a K-9 unit. While Coughlin cites both his experience as a town manager and assistant district attorney for helping him see the value of a K-9, his recalls one instance in particular that showed him just how crucial having a K-9 unit can be.

"I was working [as Town Manager] in Southbridge on 9/11," Coughlin said. "Our department lieutenant asked his counterpart in New York if he needed helped; he asked him to bring K-9."

The Southbridge Police Department brought two dogs to Ground Zero, and was honored as the first department from Massachusetts to respond, said Coughlin.

To Coughlin, this incident "speaks volumes of what is needed in 21st century policing."

"It's an important capability that can't be measured in dollars and cents," said Coughlin.

Officer Pat Reardon, now the Cohasset K-9 officer, helps rescue Lucy, a 16-year-old dog, from a remote area off Atlantic Avenue last April. Lucy had been missing for three weeks.

Contributing to the K-9 Fund

A grassroots effort to raise funds for the K-9 has sprouted up among Cohasset residents. Volunteer Trish Morse spearheaded the initiative.

"When I first heard that there was a proposal for Cohasset to have its own K-9 unit, I volunteered to help if they ever needed it," Morse wrote in an email. "A few emails later, and I find myself at the helm of the initial fundraising effort to help get the project off the ground. I am happy to do it, and excited to get going, but I will need help!

"As in many towns around the country, the K-9 unit will be supported primarily through community contributions," Morse continued. "We are in the process of starting a non-profit foundation to oversee the financial support of the project in the long-term sense."

While the Cohasset Police Association has covered the cost of the dog, Morse lists a number of other needs that interested folks can contribute to:

- Painting the donated cruiser with K-9 labeling
- Remote release mechanism for the cruiser
- Collars, vests, and leashes

If you would like to donate, Morse asks that you send a check, in any amount, and make it out to:

OUR VIEW

Police K-9, yes!

Here at the Cohasset Mariner we have made no secret about our support for a K-9 unit at the Cohasset Police Department.

We have been covering police news for many years in both Cohasset and Hingham. (Mariner editor, Mary Ford, is also editor of the Hingham Journal). The Hingham K-9 has proven to be a win-win in Hingham whether helping to find a lost individual with Alzheimer's in Wompatuck State Park or providing community outreach as the center of attention at special family events, such as the annual Family Fun Day that the HPD sponsors.

In Cohasset, the CPD is ready to welcome their newest addition with open arms. They have found a way to pay for the dog without using taxpayer money.

When police are searching for someone — as was the recent case when a young man fled down the train tracks — having the K-9 unit readily available is going to save time and resources. In this incident, the Hingham K-9 arrived after about 45 minutes. Once at the scene, the dog located the man almost immediately.

If Cohasset had had a K-9 — the officer and dog could have gone to the scene right away saving the town money by not tying up officers for an extended period of time.

We hope those, who are skeptical about the need for a K-9 and whether it will be a cost-saver, will keep an open mind.

As Town Manager Mike Coughlin said critical instances show the need for a K-9. "I wouldn't be doing my job as Town Manager if I didn't provide the town with this capability," he said.

Earthquake reaction

Our readers react to Tuesday's earthquake

Members of the Cohasset Mariner and Hingham Journal Readers Advisory Networks, responded to an email request for news of the earthquake that was centered 85 miles southwest of Washington, D.C., in Mineral, Va., and was felt from Georgia to New England and even in Toronto, Canada.

The intensity was 5.8 on the Richter scale and centered several miles below ground. The quake occurred at 1:45 p.m., on Aug. 23. The quake was the strongest in more than 100 years for the Middle Atlantic states region. People emptied from buildings in New York City and Washington and some of the first reports of damage included falling bricks in the Washington Cathedral. Other minor damage was likely in rural regions.

• I didn't feel anything, but Washington, D.C. needed a good shake up. The earthquake may have served a purpose.

• I am in DC...it really shook up the seven-story building I was in. Every building in DC just emptied out. Initially everyone thought it was another terrorist attack but were relieved once we realized it was an earthquake.

• Was at the beach in Hull by Hadassah Way and our chairs began swaying...I thought it was a strong breeze but realized there was no breeze...looked around and it became silent with all the beach goers. I stood up and it continued and then sat back down...everyone picked up their phone to no avail because cell service was out. It lasted about 45 seconds, which felt like many minutes. Very scary!!!

• Yes I felt it! I was working in my home office and my desk chair started to roll ever so slightly on carpet! I thought I had lost it until I looked over to my file cabinet and the keys were swinging. I didn't hear anything just a gentle roll and I ran out to my son in the driveway and he felt nothing. I ran back into the house and turned the TV on and there was a "special report" flashed on the screen where they reported a 5.8 magnitude that started in Virginia and that the White House had been evacuated. It was an eerie feeling.

• My husband and I arrived at a restaurant in Scituate Harbor just as the TV announced the earthquake. We joked that even if it could have been felt on the South Shore with the conditions of some of the roads that would override any feeling of a formal earthquake! It kind of feels that way on a regular day.

So bottom line, we did not feel it because of extenuating circumstances.

• I was working in my office on the 4th floor of the Emerson building at South Shore Hospital, and at around 1:55 p.m., the floor began to shake, side to side. We decided (I and another person working in the office) to leave the building immediately. We left the building and stayed outside for about 20 minutes.

We thought that the shaking was caused by the construction — as this building is currently under construction for a major expansion — but afterwards, we learned that there had been an earthquake in Virginia.

As a witness to this event, it was my first experience with an earthquake. Quite scary!

• Nothing in Lexington, Mass. where I work, but my husband Roy got a call from my son in NYC who said his office building in lower Manhattan was evacuated as a precaution.

• 1:57 pm it shook in Boston. We felt it at 5 Joy St. on Beacon Hill

• We experienced it here in Pikesville, Maryland. The brick apt building shook for 10 sec but nothing fell.

• We were in Lynchburg, Va. at Lynchburg College saying goodbye to our oldest son Kevin when we felt the earthquake. We thought there must be a train or something then we realized the windows and shrubs were also shaking. Students were pouring out of their houses all asking the same question, did you just feel that? It was a bit surreal. We didn't realize it was on the entire East Coast until I saw it posted on Facebook.

• We definitely felt it. Creaking walls and shaking floors!

• I did but was in Cambridge at work. I lived in San Francisco and said to my coworkers: "that feels like it was in the high 5s" in terms of strength and it was!

• Between two teenage kids in our house, I did not feel a thing:)

• Yes we felt it here in South Hingham. My brother who is visiting from LA felt it on the second floor and knew it was an earthquake. And when he looked from the window to the sidewalk below, he saw that the house was swaying. I was downstairs in the powder room and heard the ceiling creaking.

• I was sitting on my sofa and I felt the house shake 20 to 25 seconds. Chandeliers were shaking! About minute later the breaking news came over TV about quake near Richmond.

• At work in Quincy some people felt it but others (like me) never noticed it! Light fixtures swinging seemed to be the only tangible thing we noticed.

• UMass Boston felt the tremors and closed the campus, announcing the closure at 3:06 p.m. I now feel psychosomatic tremors....

• I think the only thing people felt around here is indigestion.

• As part if Main Street was closed and they had rerouted traffic down Water Street, if I noticed any shaking I just assumed it was an MBTA bus or a big truck and paid no attention.

• I was sitting at my computer in work (I am now employed at Talbot's Visual Merchandising) when I felt this gentle swaying vibration. It lasted a few seconds but long enough to catch my attention. It was a very strange sensation. I knew it was an earthquake (do not ask me how I knew, just a feeling) and I said we are having an earthquake to which my co worker replied "it is just a truck at the loading dock." I can always trust my instincts.

• I was sitting in my office on the top floor of a 14-story office building in Boston when I felt the building noticeably sway. At first I wondered whether I was experiencing a dizzy spell but others in the office quickly emerged from their rooms and asked if anyone had felt the shaking. When no further disturbance occurred, we all concluded that it might have related to some maintenance work in the building and went back to work, although with some caution. We were relieved to discover a short time later that an earthquake had touched the region and that there was no structural problem unique to our building.

In all, we were "shaken, not stirred."

• We definitely felt it! I have a mirror in my bathroom that hangs from a ribbon and it was moving around, bouncing off the wall as I was drying my hair. I thought I felt the house moving too but I confirmed it when my 9-year-old son yelled up to me from downstairs, "Mom, what's that shaking?" We turned on the news and saw the reports about the earthquake in Virginia.

• I was in a painting workshop in Philadelphia on the 5th floor of an old brick building when we felt the floor swaying back and forth. It was clear that it was an earthquake and we quickly evacuated the building. There was no damage but it was an odd moment.

Finishing details that need attention

TOM GRUBER
& MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project — We'll bet most of you thought we were finished talking about the Little Harbor project. That's almost true, but there are still a few small finishing details that need attention. This week we have a contractor who has started on the edge of roadwork as defined by the Little Harbor Project. We've mentioned this in the past, but to refresh your memory, when construction and follow on paving is done very often the edge of the roadway is disturbed. Plus, the road may be at a different elevation so that some filling is required to bring the adjacent areas up to the same level as the road.

The contractor started on Wednesday of this past week. They started at the memorial island at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Gammons Road, as shown in the photo above. Although it is hard to see from the photograph, when the photo was taken, only the rough grade of the memorial had been established. The final topsoil and seed has yet to be applied. The contract requires the contractor to water the new seed so that it will become properly established. Since the contractor will be working at the edge of the road, there will be a police detail to help the traffic and maintain the safety of the workers.

One other job on the list is the reestablishment of the blue reflective markers that were embedded in the roadway at each fire hydrant.

Other finishing jobs that need to be done after paving include adding the striping to the road. The last bit of striping was done this week on Jerusalem Road. So, that's complete. One other job on the list is the reestablishment of the blue reflective markers that were embedded in the roadway at each fire hydrant. That should be completed before the snow flies.

Jacobs Meadow — Last week we talked about the invasive plants called phragmites that can completely taker over a salt marsh that has lost its salinity. With the new tide gates and channel at the Legion, we will be able to reintroduce salt water to some areas of Jacobs Meadow, thus helping to restore this salt marsh. So, how do we know whether the marsh is improving? We're glad you asked that question. The answer lies, in part, a gem of a resource that we have in Cohasset.

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is playing an important role in documenting the health and condition of our waters and adjacent marshes. CSCR is a very interesting organization headquartered on Parker Avenue that organizes the power of Cohasset's student volunteers, with the proper scientific guidance, to perform useful and important tasks documenting our coastal environment. Not only are data gathered about our environment and its changes, but it serves as a powerful learning tool for our students.

The CSCR website talks about their Jacobs Meadow Project as follows:

"Jacobs Meadow is one of six wetland monitoring projects that the state department of Ecological Restoration is looking towards in gathering data on the health of the wetlands along our coast. The common objective in all projects is to document the overall health of the ecosystem along with tracking changes within the ecosystem due to increased tidal flow. Jacobs Meadow monitors salinity at several study sites, collects water quality data, and identifies both nekton and vegetation species. Maintenance of site markers and salinity wells is an on-going task throughout the summer. Recently work has been completed on the tide gate located where Jacob's Brook enters the harbor and at the mouth of Jacob's Brook the channel area was widened and a U-shaped structure was embedded into the channel to help smooth the flow of water into the tide gate. All data collected from this summer and in future summers will be regarded as Post-Restoration data and should show the improvement to the Jacob's Meadow marsh."

From this statement we can easily see that the data CSCR collects is very important in documenting changes as they occur in the meadow. One of the things that should become evident as a result of their data taking is the growth or contraction of the areas of phragmites.

One bit of additional information. In Jacobs Meadow, most of the property boundaries around the meadow run to the centerline of the James Brook, which runs through the meadow. This means that to gather information regarding the extent of the phragmites and other types of necessary data, the CSCR students may be traversing over private property. It would be very helpful if they could be allowed to do this to take their data. But, a quick email to jbuckley@ccscr.org will ask them not to cross your property.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

Geothe sparked the romantic movement

MARY KENNEDY

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe (Aug. 28, 1749-March 16, 1832)

English has Shakespeare, German has Goethe. Two of Europe's greatest literary figures are still, centuries later, household names, their plays regularly performed, their poetry revered, their genius never questioned. More than 250 years after his birth in 1749, Goethe's influence among Germans is second only to Martin Luther.

Barely surviving a difficult birth, he entered the world almost lifeless, "quite black," his mother said later. His good fortune was to be born into a loving family of wealth, education, and high social position, his father a lawyer, his mother the daughter of the mayor.

At age 12, while his fellow students toiled at composing paragraphs and learning the basics of French and English, Goethe was writing a romance about seven brothers scattered throughout Europe. Each character wrote to the others in a different language: German, English, French, Italian, Latin, Greek, and Yiddish (a Jewish-German dialect) – all of which Goethe could read.

At the University of Leipzig where his father determined he should study law, the rebellious teenager showed more interest in botany and mineralogy. Neglecting other studies, he also pursued wild parties and wilder women. After three years, he was sent home "with a hemorrhage of the lungs and a tumor on the neck." Some biographers have speculated that he had syphilis – far more widespread in that pre-penicillin period.

Finally earning his father's pride, Goethe, in his twenties, did practice law in Frankfurt where in 1775 he also published his first novel, "The Sorrows of Young Werther." Governed by impulse rather than reason, the sensitive hero, full of melancholy, languishes after his beloved Charlotte, then shoots himself after one brief kiss. Banned by religious authorities for its sympathetic depiction of suicide and condemned by literary critics, the novel was, of course, an instant success, the first international bestseller, scooped up in bookstores all over Europe. English novelist William Thackeray, satirizing the over-the-top romanticism of "Wertherism," published this verse: "So he sighed and pined and ogled,/ And his passion boiled and bubbled,/ Till he blew his silly brains out,/ And no more by it was troubled."

Stunned by the criticism and appalled that a number of men were actually committing suicide over hopeless love affairs, Goethe wrote several parodies, one ending with a man urinating on Werther's grave, another with Werther and Charotte trotting happily off to bed. Only later did literary critics refer to the story as the spark that ignited the Romantic movement and replaced the classic restraint of 18th century writing with passionate feelings. Napoleon claimed he read it seven times yet remarked to Goethe when they met that he regarded Wether's double motive of love and longing for unattainable joy "a grievous fault." (But then, the emperor always did have a tidy mind.)

A prodigious writer, Goethe produced plays, novels, poems, treatises on art and architecture. The most complete German edition of his works, letters, and diaries, fills 143 volumes.

Invited by Duke Karl August to his court in Weimar, a German cultural center in 1775, Goethe spent the next 60 years in various government positions, including council member, director of roads and services, financial director, and advisor to the duke. As director of the court's theaters, he wrote and staged dramas. He thoroughly enjoyed Weimar, writing later that "the gates and streets lead to every faraway place on earth."

To English speakers, Goethe is best known for his epic drama, "Faust," the tale of a man who sells his soul to the devil in exchange for knowledge and power. In this tale, Goethe argues that love and tragedy can conquer the tyranny of science and rationalism; also, that if rationalism destroys the need for religion and ethical behavior, what results is a moral vacuum. He began writing this masterpiece in his early twenties, finishing it only months before his death. As Shakespeare quotes abound in English, so have many of the lines from "Faust" passed into the proverbial wisdom of today's Germany.

All his life, Goethe loved women – older, younger, highborn and not, educated and not. Among the "good number of imperishable affections" were charming daughters – of an innkeeper, of a parson, of a wealthy merchant. He also maintained a lifelong devotion, passionate but apparently platonic, to a lady of the court, a married mother of seven children. Their letters of undying affection span more than 50 years. One of his loves, Christiane Vulpius, bore him five children over a 15-year period, finally becoming his wife in 1809. Sadly, only one son, August, survived. A widower at 74, yearning for19-year-old Ulrike, he followed her from Marienbad to Karlsbad. Hopes dashed, the affair over, he returned to Weimar to write one of his most beautiful poems, "The Marienbad" elegy.

A prodigious writer, Goethe produced plays, novels, poems, treatises on art and architecture. The most complete German edition of his works, letters, and diaries, fills 143 volumes. The feuds, follies, passions and sorrows of his amorous relationships provided inspiration for many of his plays, novels, volumes of poems and erotic poems set to music.

But there's more to the creative genius of Goethe than literary writings. He was also a physiologist, geologist, and conducted extensive research on plant biology and the theory of colors. About his discoveries he wrote "As for what I have done as a poet, I take no pride whatever...But that in my country I am the only person who knows the truth in the difficult science of colors – of that, I say, I am not a little proud." Brilliant he was, humble not. (More on Goethe as a scientist in September.)

FOR THE RECORD

Getting a kick out of youth sports

GREGORY MATHIS

I was recently out with my wife at one of our favorite restaurants (which was celebrating its one-year anniversary of being open with an invitation-only party) when a man approached our table, addressed me and asked if I remembered him.

There was an awkward pause and a few uncomfortable seconds of silence, as I recognized the face, but couldn't place the name or from where I knew him.

When my memory finally kicked in, I remembered that he was a parent and fellow assistant coach from about 20 years ago when I was involved with Little League.

When my memory finally kicked in, I remembered that he was a parent and fellow assistant coach from about 20 years ago when I was involved with Little League.

After I introduced him to my wife, we began to reminisce about those days and began to go through the "where are they now" exercise with former players, parents and coaches. It brought a smile to my face to hear some of those names again and to know many of the kids — now grown men — are doing fine and have families of their own now.

I coached youth baseball for seven years, from the mid-1980s through the early 1990s. It was a lot of fun, as we saw our core group of 8- and 9-year-old boys go from the minor leagues, to Little League, to Babe Ruth League. And along the way we formed relationships with many great parents. I still see some of the parents around town — such as the one we met at the restaurant — and many of the former players. The players still call me "Coach Greg," which also brings a smile to my face.

I hung up my coaching hat for many years, but recently dusted it off and got involved with youth soccer when my stepson showed interest in playing. I had never coached soccer before, but played some in high school and had my youth baseball coaching experience to draw from. I coached youth soccer for four years — eight seasons, as we played in the spring and fall each year. I had a chance to coach some terrific kids, and once again we met a lot of great parents in the process.

I wanted to make the youth soccer experience a positive one for each player, whether they were the superstar or someone who was on the team and wanted to be with their friends. I think we did that, considering most of the players kept returning season after season regardless of their talent level.

One of the greatest spectacles of youth sports is taking place now in Williamsport, Pa. Those playing in this year's Little League World Series are playing on one of the biggest stages a young player will ever know. In fact, the team from nearby Clinton County, roughly 30 miles from Williamsport, played in front of a crowd of 41,848 — a new record for the Little League World Series. The Red Sox don't even play in front of crowds that big.

But most young athletes will not be playing in the national spotlight in front of record crowds, so it's up to us as coaches, parents, players and even officials to make youth sports a worthwhile experience.

CATALDO

Overcoming this challenge spurred Cataldo on to teach kids with disabilities. In Milford, Cataldo set up a program for autistic children that grew from 15 to 50 kids over the course of a few years. The program specialized in giving kids custom technology to facilitate their learning.

"We put iPads in the hands of 3- and 4-year-olds," said Cataldo. Her preschool even appeared in Steve Job's iPad 2 release video. "We knew we were doing something right when Apple called."

This gave Cataldo the subject for the dissertation she's currently writing on iPads and autism. Cataldo has also written articles for the Milford Daily News discussing whether the iPad is "a toy or a tool."

"I believe it's an intensive instructional tool for kids," said Cataldo.

The iPad has also found its way into Cataldo's technology plan for Cohasset schools.

"We've already ordered carts of wireless iPads" and are in "the investigative stage" to see how the technology can be implemented in the high school, Cataldo said.

The Superintendent is also looking into installing wireless internet in the schools and replacing the Connect-Ed phone call service with a List Serve email format.

"Parents complain of getting way too many calls," Cataldo explained. "The goal is to reduce the amount of phone calls and restrict them to snow days and other emergency items." This initiative "will take a few months to get aligned in the district."

This is just a taste of the technology plan Cataldo is exploring for the district. Currently, she and her leadership council are "working with the teaching staff to find out their needs."

The leadership council is comprised of all the school administrators and key central office members, from IT to athletics and more, Cataldo explained.

"I value what they have to say," said Cataldo. To welcome the council into the new school year and say thank you for the summer, Cataldo is taking them out to dinner and will pick up the tab.

While Cataldo continually praises her staff, the "very creative teachers" and "talented students," it's a challenge to get her to say much about herself.

"I'm local," Cataldo put it simply. "Born in Boston, raised in the suburbs, and attended local schools."

The Superintendent shared that she has two boys – Andrew, 13, and James, 15 – and commutes to Cohasset from Needham.

"I've been working their whole lives, so it was not a shock for them when I took the job in Cohasset," said Cataldo. "We make adjustments."

Cataldo also shared a few things she loves about Cohasset.

"The people — everybody is so incredibly nice," she said. Cataldo also loves Del's Lemonade and Cohasset Pizza, though the high school kids have told her to check out Mangia's, the new pizza place in the Village. Cataldo intends to do that soon.

Cataldo was also excited to start her new position in Cohasset at the same time as new Town Manager Michael Coughlin.

"It's not often two major offices change at the same time," said Cataldo. "I think it's a fortunate time. We get to turn the page together."

Cataldo added that she likes Coughlin's leadership style. "He's inclusive, and gives great forethought to what he's doing," she said, adding that she looks forward to building "a solid relationship for the school and town together."

As the first day of school approaches, Cataldo is ready to begin a whole new chapter. The Superintendent looks forward to creating a strategic plan for the school year, meeting with the school leaders in every building each month, showcasing student artwork in her office, visiting the sixth grade class at Camp Bournedale in Plymouth this September, and is already talking about getting her turkey ready the day before Thanksgiving so she can take in the football game in Hull.

"It's going to be a very exciting school year," Cataldo said. "I'm looking forward to it."

School Committee wishes departing Principal well

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset School Committee held their first meeting since Middle High School Principal Joel Antolini stepped down from his post. The committee members had nothing but good things to say about Antolini and his tenure in Cohasset.

Antolini, whose resignation was effective on Aug. 5, accepted an Assistant Superintendent position in North Attleboro. He took the helm at Cohasset Middle High in 2005 following work as the junior/senior high principal in Holbrook. But Antolini had worked in the Cohasset school system prior to that — he taught technology education and coached track from 1991-1995.

During Wednesday night's School Committee meeting, Chairman Helene Lieb made the public announcement that Antolini has resigned.

"I want to thank him for his six years of service to Cohasset High," she said. "He contributed to making the high school one of the best in the state."

Lieb cited statistics that show Cohasset High in 17th place out of 300 schools in the state, adding that "the schools ahead of us outspend us per pupil."

School Committee member Paul Schubert said that most of these schools were specialty or technical schools —"Ours is public."

"Joel had a part in that success," said Lieb.

Added Schubert, "I wish him well. He's done a great job."

Assistant Principal Dr. Michael Gill is currently serving as interim.

"I believe Dr. Gill will continue to meet the expectations set forth by Mr. Antolini," Superintendent Barbara Cataldo wrote in a letter addressed to Skipper parents and families.

Cataldo expressed that she did not feel a search for a new principal would serve the school well at this time. "In the coming months I will continue to update you on the principal search. Currently, I expect an extensive search to begin next January."

Cataldo also had kind words for the departing Principal.

"Mr. Antolini will be missed by both faculty and students," she wrote. "He has made an indelible print on our community."

WEEK ITEM:

School Committee gears up for Opening Day

The time is almost here — Cohasset School's opening day is Tuesday, Sept. 6. New Superintendent Barbara Cataldo is planning to speak to the administration, teachers and staff members at an early morning breakfast to kick off the school year.

Cataldo will share her vision for the rest of the year, which involves "moving forward in a welcoming, open way."

During Wednesday's School Committee meeting, Cataldo said that she hopes to express her excitement over the "hard work that various educators are doing to educate the children."

Chairman Helene Lieb asked if any of the members wanted to add their input to Cataldo's talk. The members all agreed that they liked what Cataldo had to say.

In a letter addressed to Skipper parents and families, Cataldo wrote, "I look forward to meeting your children" on opening day.

Cataldo told the Mariner, "It's going to be a very exciting school year."

Volume 37
Report No. 33
August 19, 2011

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 158 state representatives in 2011 through August 8. The list reveals that representatives have so far collected a total of $178,800. Beacon Hill Roll Call recently reported that state senators in 2011 have so far collected $39,521 in per diems. The combined current 2011 total collected by representatives and senators is $218,321.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to representatives above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a representative resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Legislators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions.

Some opponents argue most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others say the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, and funding for important programs has been cut.

The 2011 statistics indicate that 87 representatives, a little more than one-half of the 160 members, have received reimbursements ranging from $144 to $7,300 while 73 representatives have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that legislators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The representative who has so far received the most money in 2011 is Rep. Timothy Madden (D-Nantucket) with $7,300. Representatives rounding out the top ten include Reps. Paul Mark (D-Pittsfield), $4,770; Michael Finn (D-West Springfield), $4,620; Sarah Peake (D-Provincetown), $4,366; John Scibak (D-South Hadley), $4,260; Ellen Story (D-Amherst), $4,200; Stephen Kulik (D-Worthington), $3,922; Nicholas Boldyga (R-Southwick), $3,828; Benjamin Swan (D-Springfield), $3,780; and Angelo Puppolo (D-Springfield), $3,780.

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' PER DIEMS FOR 2011

The dollar figure next to the representative's name represents the total amount of 2011 per diem money the state has paid the representative through August 8. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the representative certified he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

A total of 73 of the state's representatives did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean these representatives were never at the Statehouse in 2011. It simply means they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

RETAIN ORGANS AFTER AUTOPSY (H 2385) - The House gave initial approval to a proposal that would prohibit any body part or organ from being retained following an autopsy without consent from the deceased's next of kin. The measure was filed on behalf of Cathie and Donald Marcelli, whose 18-month-old son David died suddenly in 1996. David's organs were retained without his parents' knowledge or permission following a hospital autopsy. Supporters of the bill argue the family suffered untold anguish when they had to bury the body parts four months after David's death.

LIMIT FEE FOR CASHING CHECKS (H 3567) - The House gave initial approval to legislation that would set a cap on the fees check-cashing stores and outlets are allowed to charge. The maximum charge would be 10 percent of the value of a personal check plus a $1 service charge; 3 percent of a government check plus a $1 service charge; 3 percent of a payroll check of $100 or less; 2.6 percent of a payroll check of more than $100; and 3 percent of all other checks including traveler's check, cashier's check and certified check plus a $1 service charge.

This type of business is growing and even some of the big chain stores like Walmart are getting involved.

Supporters said of the 34 states that regulate check cashing, Massachusetts is one of 8 that do not regulate the fees that may be charged. They argued these check-cashing "stores" are often located in low-income neighborhoods and take advantage of vulnerable residents.

RULES FOR KAYAKING (H 664) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would regulate the increasingly popular sport of kayaking. The measure would require kayak instructors to take basic water rescue, first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training. It also requires instructors to receive certification from the American Canoe Association and be certified by the American Red Cross in small craft safety. Other provisions require students to be taught safety procedures including "wet exit training" - the practice of escaping from a capsized kayak.

Supporters said present law is too loose and does not sufficiently regulate kayaks. They argued the bill will save lives and prevent injuries.

HEALTH NOTES

Good choices and our well-being

STEVE BOBO

But what does one do to ensure that his politics aren't affecting his general well-being? Perhaps a few guidelines might be appropriate after all.

In 1887 Alexander Fraser Tytler, a Scottish history professor at the University of Edinborough, (often misquoted in political campaigns; most recently in 2000), had ostensibly said about the fall of the Athenian Republic: "A democracy is always temporary in nature; it simply cannot exist as a permanent form of government and will continue to exist only until the voters discover that they can vote themselves generous gifts from the public treasury. From then on, the majority always votes for candidates who promise most benefits from the public treasury with the result that every democracy will finally collapse over loose fiscal policy; always followed by a dictatorship."

Admittedly, the politics of this season's electoral campaign has little to do with health. The statement, recently appearing in Facebook and elsewhere, is now being used to describe the turmoil involving the upcoming presidential election. Regardless of political conviction Health Notes considers the current political turmoil an element of our affairs that will, if emphasized, give us a cause for unrest: considered an unhealthy condition. Titler is only reliably confirmed to have said that, "the rising grandeur and opulence of a nation must be balanced by the decline of its heroic virtues."

Many of our modern virtues involve the activities in which we engage to stay healthy: First off we have to consume nourishing food; secondly, of course exercise; avoid bad habits; choose appropriate friends and associates and healthy activities.

But what does one do to ensure that his politics aren't affecting his general well being. Perhaps a few guidelines might be appropriate after all.

Can an ethical choice be unhealthy? For example, we decide to consume too much. We become fat and unhealthy. – too little and we become weak and unhealthy. If we don't balance our schedule to include exercise, we will soon become unhealthy. The result is inactivity and hence, obesity.

Overweight children, a growing problem over the past 20 years, are much higher among minorities than among other groups, suggesting a grave social inequity brought about by the lack of availability of safe, healthy recreational opportunities for those in areas of less affluence. And obesity; or, rather complications from inactivity kills.

Physical activity recommendations for children suggest that they need a variety of activities each day-some intense, some less-so, some informal, some structured. Walking or cycling to and from school is an ideal way to get some of that activity at no extra cost to the child or family.

But more important, changes in the design of our environment have driven us to a paradigm of lessened activity generally. The mall, big store, parking lot, etc. the popular word for which is urban sprawl has altered the transportation paradigm. This evolution of our civil structure to ever less walking activity, and ever more dependence on elevators, cars, etc. over the last 15 years is threatening the health of as much as 50 percent of the population of the United States. A threat which is sure to be attacked in much the same way smoking was battled, and over a similar 50 year time period.

And walking, the original exercise of choice for hunter-gatherers, when they weren't running from predators, is the cornerstone of exercise for modern humans. Just 30 minutes of activity a day is enough to reduce your risk for cardiovascular disease, the number one killer of both men and women in America, diabetes, osteoporosis, obesity, clinical depression, and some forms of cancer.

Walking works. Walking one mile in 20 minutes will use roughly the same number of calories as: swimming breaststroke for 9 minutes; running a mile in 10 minutes.

To put it simply, with a daily two-mile walk you'll feel better, look better, and be better!

Break it up! Your 30 minutes of activity can be accumulated-say, a 15-minute walk to school in the morning, and 15 minutes home in the afternoon-and still provide the same health benefits, according to the Surgeon General's Report on Physical Activity and Health.

EARTHQUAKE

• My husband was sitting at our kitchen island reading the paper when, according to him, the granite counter began to tremble. I was walking around while speaking on the phone to a friend in England and didn't notice anything.

• My husband texted me from Boston right after it happened- he was has in office in the Faneuil Hall area and he said that literally the door way was swaying — they could genuinely feel the shake and were REALLY scared — the entire building evacuated.

• Was out in the car, between Hingham Fruit Center and home in Cohasset. Never felt a thing!

• My wife and I walked in the store about 2 p.m. and this Carol King song went through my head. "I feel the earth move under my feet."

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Sharing memory of meeting Zsa Zsa Gabor

By Genevieve Good
Special to the Mariner

During the season, a director of the Music Circus had the pleasure of entertaining the star of a particular week. Among the luminaries was Baroness Von Trapp, who stayed a weekend at one home. You may recall it was her life expressed in the "Sound of Music."

Zsa Zsa Gabor came our way during another week's performance. In this picture I appear happy but concerned. I was gripping my husband's arm a little too forcefully. My husband looked totally relaxed, but Zsa Zsa was smiling at the world with great confidence. Well she might. She was an outstanding beauty.

In celebration of the 60th anniversary of the South Shore Music Circus an exhibit at the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building captures 60 years of musical shows. Included in the exhibit are photographs, playbills, artifacts and recollections from patrons and friends of the Music Circus.

Did you work at the South Shore Music Circus and/or have encounters with the stars? We invite you to share your thoughts with us. Please call us at 781-383-1434 and also join us on the evening of Saturday, Sept. 10th for a celebration wrapping up the 60th season.

POPPIN' OFF

A new season awaits

Fall sports ready to kick off

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Summer has come and almost gone, although if it decides to stay permanently I wouldn't have a problem with that.

I personally love summer. Give me a good 80-degree sweatfest over a 50-degree freeze and I'm happy.

I know around here 50 degrees is still considered warm, and I should be feeling it by now. After all, I've been back in Mass. more than three years, away from previous homes in Florida and California.

Still, for some reason, when I think of fall I get shivers, maybe because I know winter is all too close.

That said, there is excitement as our local teams gear up for the new school year.

In Cohasset, this is always a time to look forward to, especially the last few years where teams have been consistently good.

We'll start with football.

The Skippers finished last season with a 7-3 record, including heartbreak one-point losses to Rockland

GOLF NOTES

It's N.E. vs. the US in the Mineck Cup

PAUL HARBER

Some of the top junior golfers from around the United States will be in Hingham Sept. 3-4 to compete in the John D. Mineck DBC Junior Cup at Boston Golf Club.

The tournament is held in conjunction with the Deutsche Bank Championship.

The competition will put Team New England against Team USA rosters, 40 of the top players, ages 11-18 competing in 20 four-player, best-ball matches.

Among the 20 golfers playing for Team New England are Megan Khang of Rockland and Isabel Southard of Sharon, both members of the Harmon Club in Rockland. John Beadle of North Attleboro, Patrick O'Leary of Milton, and Jacquelyn Eleey of Quincy are among the 20 players representing New England.

Golfers representing Team USA include Cameron Andrade and Eric Hallberg, sons of PGA Tour pros Billy Andrade and Gary Hallberg, as well as Clancy Waugh, son of Deutsche Bank Americas CEO Seth Waugh – and New Englander Alison Eleey of Quincy, who will compete against her younger sister, Jacquelyn, who will tee it up for Team New England.

The Mineck Cup is named for its late co-founder, a long-time supporter of junior golf and the co-founder of Boston Golf Club who passed away in 2007.

Last year, Team New England edged Team USA, 40.5-39.5, for its second consecutive victory. Team USA won in 2008, when the event's present format was introduced.

Tee times for the John D. Mineck DBC Junior Cup will begin at 8 a.m. each day.

Playboy Golf

The Playboy Golf Tour comes to Boston on Oct. 2 at Wedgewood Pines CC in Stow. It's open to golfers of all abilities. Interested golfers can get more information and register their foursomes at www.playboygolf.com.

"The Playboy Scramble is truly a unique event that gives golfers in Boston the opportunity to experience some of the excitement and fun that comes along with the Playboy brand," said John Pulitano, chief operating officer for the Playboy Golf Tour. "It is a first class tournament that includes Playmates, parties and putts!"

It's $450 per player or $1,800 per foursome.

Here and there

Eric Daniel of Presidents GC in Quincy traveled across the state to Hampden Country Club in an attempt to qualify for the State Mid-Amateur Championship and it paid off. Daniel fashioned a 2-over 74, one stroke behind medalist Scott Murdock of Crestview CC and qualified for the championship, which will be held Sept. 13-15 on Cape Cod at Pocasset GC. Other qualifiers are scheduled at Bayberry Hills, Easton, Concord, Indian Hills and Waubeeka Springs this week for the state championship . . . It was a grand gesture by the Mass. Golf Association, at last January's Salute to Champions, when it announced it would name the Junior Division championship cup of the Massachusetts Father & Son tournament after Fordie Pitts of Scituate. Fordie was a terrific person to play golf with and he loved playing golf with all of his family members. It is a fitting tribute. Finishing second behind the O'Learys (see Golfers of the Week) was the team of John and Nick Drago of Plymouth CC, who carded a 1-over par 72. One year ago, this talented team lost in a playoff to finish T2 at the 2010 Massachusetts Father & Son Championship . . . Playing for Team Massachusetts, which won the New England Junior Amateur Championship last week at Brattleboro (Vt.) Country Club were Chad Stumpo of Blue Hills CC and John Beadle of Foxborough CC. They were two of seven members on the Bay State squad. It's Massachusetts' first victory since 1997 . . . William Spence, the longtime superintendent at The Country Club in Brookline, has been honored by the Alumni Turf Group at the University of Massachusetts for his work. In his current position, has hosted many national and international events including the 1988 U.S. Open, 1995 U.S. Women's Amateur, and the 1999 Ryder Cup. The club will also host the U.S. Amateur in 2013, as part of celebrating the 100th anniversary of Francis Ouimet's victory in the U.S. Open. ATG President Steve Curry stated: "I am very pleased to honor Bill for his remarkable career. Of the many respected leaders in our profession countless have been impacted by Bill's impressive career. Foremost though, Joe Troll is very keen to see Bill honored and was excited to hear of our choice."

GOLFERS OF THE WEEK

Brian & Patrick O'Leary, Ponkapoag

For many years, the team of Brian and Patrick O'Leary of Milton never had a chance to compete in the Massachusetts Father & Son Championship, but they made their debut one to remember.

Under perfect conditions in Hudson, the pair of Ponkapoag GC golfers carded a score of 1-under par 70 to capture the Fordie Pitts Jr. Junior Division title by two strokes last week at Charter Oak Country Club.

What made the O'Leary's round especially impressive was the fact that they were able to post an even par 36 on the very challenging back nine. That stretch of golf included a birdie-birdie-par-birdie finish.

"Our strategy was that if he hit the fairway with his drive then I would hit the second shot," said Brian, who finished 10th at the 2011 Massachusetts Amateur Public Links Championship. "Every time that he got in trouble, I would hit a solid drive and every time I did that he would hit it onto the green."

On a course that is extremely narrow with trouble surrounding nearly every fairway and green, pinpoint accuracy off the tee was at a premium. The O'Learys were able to do that consistently and make some key putts.

Patrick, 14, who will play for Catholic Memorial High School next fall, got things started on the 401-yard, par 4 15th hole when he sent his 7 iron approach to an inch. On the next hole, Brian returned the favor by draining a 35-foot birdie putt. Then – on the 532-yard, par 5 18th hole – Patrick found the middle of the cup with a 12-foot downhill birdie putt.

"It was a good end to the round," said Patrick. "It's not as easy as it looks to come in even on that back nine. It's difficult and you don't get much roll out of your drives."

Leading up to that finish, the O'Leary's were able to save par on the 403-yard, par 4 12th and 436-yard, par 4 14th holes. Although not as glamorous as the finish, that kept them moving in the right direction and set the tone for the rest of the round.

"It certainly helped," said Patrick. "If we didn't make par there we were heading towards 75 and not 70."

Considering that they did not have a chance to take part in a practice round, there were some tense moments during the first two holes, especially after they suffered a three-putt bogey on the 359-yard, par 4 2nd hole.

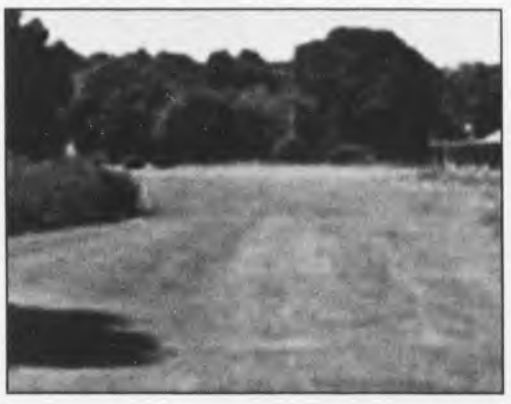
However, minutes after Patrick missed a three-foot par putt, he sunk a five-foot birdie putt on the 150-yard, par 3 3rd hole to draw back to even par.

"That putt had a lot of break in it," said Brian. "He settled down after that. Sometimes it's the little things. If you do something good early on, it helps your confidence."

After carding another birdie on the 9th hole, the team ran into some trouble by making double bogey on the 10th hole and bogey on the 11th hole. On that 434-yard, par 4 10th hole – which was playing as the hardest hole on the day – Brian aimed at the wrong tree with his blind approach and watched as his shot hit a cart path and bounced 20 yards over the green.

"We had a terrible lie and were just trying to make bogey on a very difficult hole," said Brian. "[After those two holes], we talked about it on the next tee. We had a good front nine and I said that we were not out of it. If we could make some birdies coming in, we were not out of this."

As the saying goes, father always knows best... and Brian O'Leary was true to his word.



He and his son played near perfect golf from that point on and they were rewarded with their first career MGA Junior Division title.

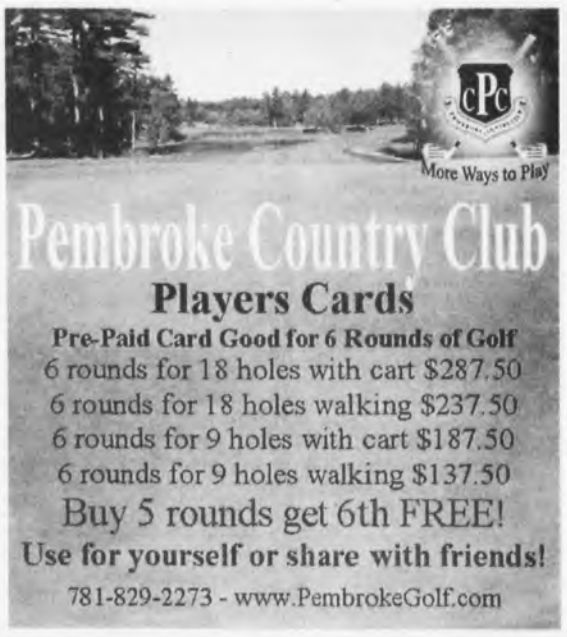
THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE



The 18th Hole at Little Harbor Country Club

LITTLE HARBOR COUNTRY CLUB

The 18th hole at Little Harbor is a picturesque finishing hole with trees lining both sides of the fairway. An intimidating lateral hazard marsh area is located along the left side. Wind is always a factor on the 18th and can be gauged by the beautiful American flag that flies beyond the green. Unfortunately, the wind is rarely at your back so a PAR here is a great score.

FLY FISHING WITH THE ORDINARY ANGLER

Macroeconomics of a Fly Supply

JOE DANUBIO

One of the most difficult challenges that any fly fisher person will encounter that will persist throughout their lifetime is manufacturing and maintaining a steady and consistent flow of flies. In a way, it is remarkably similar to the concept of the financial economy. Everybody knows that money might not be everything, but possessing a steady cash flow is always a good practice. So it is true with your fly supply.

Politics and economics are intertwined more than any rational individual would prefer. I am requesting that the reader inhale deeply, take a sedative, and put on a bipartisan cap, because the following comparison may be at times difficult for some people depending on which side of that miserable aisle you dwell on. Hopefully, everybody is displeasured enough by the entirety of Washington at this point to sit back and have a good laugh as you read on, because the system is nothing more than an enormous farce anyway.

For the purpose of this analysis, let's pretend that my journey into the arena of fly fishing and fly tying began in the last few years of the Clinton administration. It was really shortly thereafter, but what kind of economic and political analysis would this really be if did not commence with a distortion of the truth.

After investing a summer producing my first batch of flies, I sincerely believed that I had a surplus. Eventually as my stock increased in quantity and quality of value, it was evident that my initial investment was not worth what I elected to believe at the time. In fact, over time, it was obvious that my initial fly tying efforts demanded improvement. Eventually, these products were replaced with others of higher quality. It appeared as though my perception of a surplus may have been overstated because many of the initial flies were not as valuable as I believed and subsequently tossed out, not to say that they did not provide me with security in the startup years in the business sector of the industry, the time on the water.

As the economy of my fly tying expanded, the growth was rapid and various new sectors of patterns were emerging in my fly boxes. As a result, the stock of my first fly box split. The quality of the product was improving and many more splits occurred, greatly increasing the value of my fly stock.

Sure, some of the new experiments did not work, but for the most part, the supply had grown exponentially in a short period of time. This provided a dramatically increased confidence and security in my fly supply stock.

Then I decided to wage a war at some rivers that I was not even certain if there were any fish in. There were rumors that fish existed in these waters, and they appeared as though they should have had fish in them, but who really knew for sure. The terrain was unimaginable. The banks were littered with trees and brush and the water was filled with rocks and submerged timber.

At some point, a significant portion of my fly supply economic status had vanished in the rocks, tress, and submerged timbers, and I still do not even know if there were any fish in those waters. It might have made sense to invest my fly supply elsewhere, but I continued to wage many wars in search of a potential or alleged presence of fish in many uncertain waters.

During one of my winter fly production sessions as I attempted to balance the fly supply budget deficits from the previous year, I proposed legislation to prevent future deficits and promote future growth. The program was called, "Lose one, Replace with two." How could I ever get behind with such a genius program.

Then some other challenges arose. Because I labored fervently and diligently and invested my sweat and tears into developing my fly supply, at a certain point, I was considered to be quite affluent in my fly supply. When other people began to notice, the ones that were not developing their own fly supply requested that I redistribute my wealth of flies over to them.

On one occasion, after redistributing two flies to another angler, within a minute the first was lost in a tree never to be seen again. When the other angler went to retrieve the second of the redistributed flies, it could not even be found. No one knows for certain if it fell on the ground or in the water, but this I do know, redistribution did not seem to be an effective program. All it accomplished was drain my fly supply. Once it was in the hands of others, it got pissed away immediately and they were sticking their hands out for more fly supply.

There were also some other occasions where I was influenced by a feeling of empathy for a few beginner fly fishers and decided a subsidy was in order. Subsequently, although it was the right thing to do, it still served to drain my fly supply and force me to work harder at tying more flies just to stay ahead.

In fact, even with a good program like "Lose one, Replace with two," there was still not enough to go around and it seemed like I was never getting ahead.

I do not know how to maintain balancing a fly supply budget or deficit when I seem to want to expend more flies than I can actually produce to keep ahead of the game. One thing that I do know is that the original inhabitants of America brought over diseases that dramatically impacted and reduced the native American population. Now these were the peoples who had cornered the supply of feathers that I would need to make more flies, thus reducing my capacity centuries later to produce a more steady fly supply.

These same people who inhabited America initially, well, they were the same people that revolted against Britain, the same people who conducted the Boston Tea Party. That's right people, I am blaming the diminishing value of my fly supply through macroeconomics on the Tea Party. It may or may not make any sense whatsoever, but that is what I am reporting. Believe it and spread it and it will become the truth whether it really is or not.

HOCKEY

South Coastal Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The Black Hawks won their first South Shore Hockey League Classics Div. title since the Fall of 2001 last Spring and they started the Fall 2011 with an impressive opening game win.

John Dunn took a feed from Drew Fitzgerald and scored on a wrist shot with 2:36 left to break a 1-1 tie and give the Black Hawks a 2-1 win over the Bruins.

Black Hawks goalie Vin Trioani stopped a Bruins shot with 54 seconds left to preserve the win.

The Bruins had tied the game with a Jim Martin of Hanover goalie on the power play with 3:28 left in regulation. John Tympanick set up the Martin goal.

Bruce Humfreys scored a power play goal on a breakaway in the second period to give the Hawks the first goal of the game.

The other Classics Div. game saw Ted Duggan bury a wrist shot from Marshfield's Mike Mullen to break a 2-2 tie and give the Red Wings a 3-2 win over the Rangers.

Tom Pipenbrink and Henry Mathews of Duxbury scored goals for the Red Wings in the first period. Pat Burke, Tim Routhier and Jim Bailey each had an assist for the Wings.

Rockland's Jim O'Toole and Hugh Gorman of Hingham on the power play scored the goals for the Rangers in the first period.

Paul Lafond and O'Toole each had an assist for the Rangers.

The Legends Div. will be in action on Sunday at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke. The defending champion Crusaders will face the Stingers at 7:30 P.M. while the Toros will meet the Fighting Saints at 8:50 P.M.

FISHING

First Jack McLaughlin Fishing Tournament a big success

The first annual Jack McLaughlin Memorial Fishing Tournament was held Saturday, July 30 at the Hingham Shipyard.

The tournament was organized by the family of Jack McLaughlin of Norwell, a long time deep sea fisherman loved by many who passed away in 2010.

More than 120 people participated in the event which raised money for the Dorchester Boys and Girls Club.

The event drew participants from as far away as South Carolina and Minnesota and had ages from 7 to 75 trying to catch the longest striped bass. The winning striper, measuring 38 inches, was caught in Boston Harbor by Kevin McLeod of Hanover on the fishing vessel Prima Luce captained by Paul Berrigan of Hingham.

Also on the winning boat were Tim O'Brien and Adam Devine, both of Hingham.

Following the tournament was a cookout, with a live auction and raffle.

You can get more information on the tournament at www.jackstournament.com

Kevin McLeod holds the winning striped bass (38 inches) that he reeled in during the first Jack McLaughlin Memorial Fishing Tournament. Standing next to McLeod is his mother in law, Marion McLaughlin of Norwell. The tournament is named for her husband Jack McLaughlin.

SEASON

and Mashpee.

The other loss was to Abington.

Thomas Flibotte was huge last season, especially in the Thanksgiving Day game when he ran for 192 yards in a 36-12 win over Hull, avenging a Turkey Day loss from the previous season.

This year, Flibotte and quarterback Jeff Cavanaro are gone to graduation, but we can all expect someone to step up and get the job done.

On the soccer pitch, last year was special.

The boys team finished the regular season 13-3-2 and then notched a pair of 1-0 shootout wins in the MIAA Div. 3 Tournament on the way to the South Sectional Final, where they were edged by Dover-Sherborn.

Cohasset ended the season 16-4-2.

The girls were also in the tournament.

They battled big-time to make it, rallying to a 9-8-2 record after starting 4-6-2.

In the tournament, which seemed to last forever due to rain and high seas that postponed a playoff trip to Nantucket several times, Cohasset made a statement.

Cohasset beat Seekonk in the opener, and then after all the waiting, they beat Nantucket.

The layoff was tough for Cohasset though, as they were still recovering from the long trip to Nantucket when they had to face a tough Carver team on the road at noon the next day.

Carver won that game to eliminate Cohasset.

Of all the teams, the biggest thrill may have been the field hockey team.

Laura Giuliano's squad finished the regular season 15-0-3 before being upset in overtime by No. 19 seed Dedham, a team that was much better than their record.

The season was among the best in team history.

Kelsey Erler led the team's scoring with 13 goals and six assists.

On the golf course, The Skippers won the South Shore League regular-season title with a 13-1 record, ahead of Mashpee (11-3), East Bridgewater (10-4) and Abington (8-6).

Cohasset's Morgan Grasz captured the league tournament individual crown by a single stroke, shooting a 1-over-par 35 at Ridder Farm Golf Club in East Bridgewater.

Not bad overall for a season.

Here's hoping that the new season is as successful and fun as last year was.

Cohasset's Alli Ritts cast in 'Breakfast with Mary'

Alli Ritts is an Actor in Residence with Playwrights' Platform, Boston's only developmental theater for new plays.

Cohasset's Alli Ritts has been cast in the world premiere of the original play "Breakfast with Mary" to be performed Wednesday, Aug. 24, through Sunday, Aug. 28, at The Deertrees Theatre, Dawes Hill Road, Harrison, Maine. The performances will be produced by G.P. Productions and The Deertrees Theatre.

For the past several years, Ritts has focused on the reading and performing of new plays. She is an Actor in Residence with Playwrights' Platform, Boston's only cooperative developmental theater for new plays. She's performed in the Playwrights' Platform annual Festival of New Plays, Mill City Minutes and the Hovey Summer Shorts Festival. To her acting credit, she has appeared as Audrey in "Little Shop of Horrors," Sarah in "Guys and Dolls," in addition to performances in "Triple Play," "The Dining Room," "Godspell" and "Hamlet."

In this comedy, a group of friends reconnect on a birthday getaway during a weekend in the country. Their chosen destination tosses the party into the tumultuous realm of a sage, but declining innkeeper in a remote New England town. Through a hilarious and surprising turn of events, the friends find themselves immersed in ghostly intrigue and mystery, testing their perception of truth and each other. Little did these friends know that a bed and breakfast escape would surround them with the questions of honesty, family and loss. As their caretaker slips further into her own deluded world, images of her lost family take on a new life through these guest strangers. Before the weekend's out, each will have to face a bevy of ghosts – Mary's and their own.

This new work is the creation of playwright and Curry College Playwright in Residence Gail Phaneuf of Boston. Phaneuf is an award-winning writer and director of many plays and musicals.

"'Breakfast With Mary' highlights the everlasting connection to family," said Phaneuf. "They don't go away, you wouldn't give them up even if decided to in haste. In this play, the lead character Mary recreates her family from a group of strangers, because it is integral to her survival. Her fear of being alone is something everyone can relate to."

As the production approaches, members of the public will be welcomed to lend their own touch of family, blood related or otherwise, to the "Breakfast With Mary" set. Framed images of people lent from across the area will cover the walls of the production. Details on how to participate will be forthcoming.

Tickets are $20 for adults and $10 for students.

Call the Deertrees Theatre Box Office for more information about performances at 207-583-6747 or visit www.deertreestheatre.org.

Openings available in SSCC programs

The South Shore Community Center would like to remind residents that there are still available spots in Summer Gymnastics, Sports & More for Boys and Girls. Join Ruthann and staff for fun filled days of gymnastics, bowling, crafts, water play and more. Each session runs Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The sessions will continue each week with the final session being held Aug. 29 through Sept. 1. The cost per session is $120M/$130NM with a half off discount for siblings attending the same session.

Registration is open online or by calling the SSCC office at 781-383-0088. The summer office hours are 9 to 11 a.m. Monday through Thursday, but if you leave us a message, they will reserve your spot and return your call at our earliest convenience to complete the registration.

Hull Road Race

The annual Hull Road Race will be held on Saturday, Sept. 3, with an 8 a.m. start. The race will be a 4-mile run/walk to benefit Hull Academic Support Coalition-Enrichment grants and Academic Awards for Hull Students. Registrations available at: www.racemenu.com, www.town.hull.ma.us, it is also posted to Facebook.

Lacrosse League

The first round of the co-ed Glory Daze Lacrosse League for adults, ages mid-20s and up, will start in September and end in early November. The league will consist of pick-up games, probably one, maybe two, evenings a week, on a field in Hingham.

Dates and times will be available shortly, but anyone interested in participating should contact Victoria O'Doherty-Popp via email to victoriaodp@gmail.com or call 339-788-1783. The Glory Daze League will be stress-free with friendly competition, and low cost.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 5, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) As tensions ease on the home front, you can once more focus on changes in the workplace. Early difficulties are soon worked out. Stability returns as adjustments are made.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new romance tests the unattached Bovine's patience to the limit. But Venus still rules the Taurean heart, so expect to find yourself trying hard to make this relationship work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to consider home-related purchases. But shop around carefully for the best price — whether it's a new house for the family or a new hose for the garden.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A contentious family member seems intent on creating problems. Best advice: Avoid stepping in until you know more about the origins of this domestic disagreement.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A recent job-related move proves far more successful than you could have imagined. Look for continued beneficial fallout. Even your critics have something nice to say.

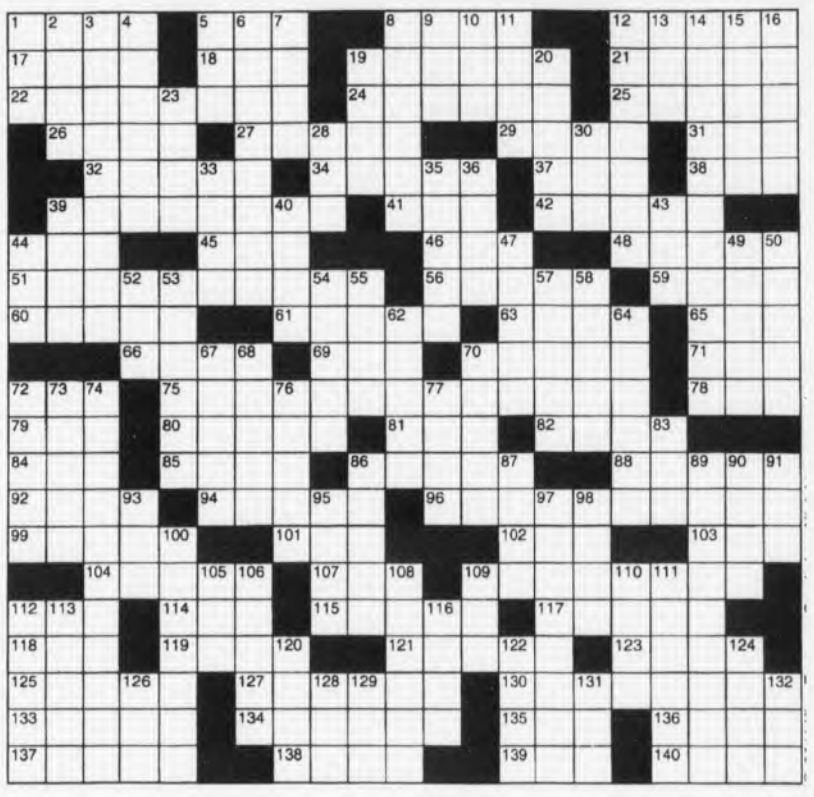
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Ease up and stop driving yourself to finish that project on a deadline that is no longer realistic. Your superiors will be open to requests for an extension. Ask for it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should soon be hearing some positive feedback on that recent business move. An old family problem recurs, but this time you'll know how to handle it better.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprising statements shed light on the problem that caused that once-warm relationship to cool off. Use this newly won knowledge to help turn things around.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual side is especially strong at this time. Let it guide you into deeper contemplation of aspects about yourself that you'd like to understand better.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your merrier aspect continues to dominate and to attract folks who rarely see this side of you. Some serious new romancing could develop out of all this cheeriness.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're always concerned about the well-being of others. It's time you put some of that concern into your own health situation, especially where it involves nutrition.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Just when you thought your life had finally stabilized, along comes another change that needs to be addressed. Someone you trust can help you deal with it successfully.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a sixth sense when it comes to finding people who need help long before they think of asking for it. And you're right there to provide it.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave: If you live on the South Shore and you're looking for a church home we encourage you to join us on Sunday mornings. We are an open, welcoming congregation.

There are two summer services. Our 8 am Sailing Club service is informal and it meets rain or shine. Come and worship outside in the beautiful, tranquil setting overlooking our harbor. Our 10am service meets in the Chapel located at the back of our building. This is a traditional service and the chapel is air conditioned on hot summer days.

For more information visit us on our website at scc@2ndcc.org or call the church office at 781-383-0345

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Summer Worship Schedule Continues Sunday

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us in this exploration on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday (August 28) our summer schedule happens for the second to last time this year. We will have services at 7am (Sandy Beach) and 9am (church) instead of the usual 8am and 10am. If you haven't been to church on the beach, you have two more chances!

During the summer, our normal Godly Play and youth programs do not meet, but they will pick back up again when school begins in the fall. Instead, our more relaxed summer children's program, which meets at 9am on Sundays, is working on projects to help those in need in the surrounding community. This Sunday is the final day of the summer program.

AA now meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Please call the church office at (781) 383-1083 or visit ststephenscohasset.org for more information.

Vedanta Centre, 130 Beechwood St., 781-383-0940. Denomination: Vedanta, an Indian philosophy which honors all world religions. Clergy: Rev. Dr. Susan Schrager. Sunday morning, 11 a.m. Refreshments and fellowship after the service. Thursday Meditation and Study Class from 7 to 8 p.m.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom is at 1112 Main St., Hingham. For information, call 781-749-8103 or visit the website at www.shaaray.org. Denomination: Jewish; Rabbi Shira Joseph; Cantor Steven Weiss. Congregation Sha'aray Shalom is a Reform Temple, which strives to make interfaith families, as well as those with a more traditional background feel welcome. To learn more about Sha'aray Shalom and if interested in becoming part of the synagogue-community, call 781-749-8103.

From June 25 through Sept. 3 there will be no Saturday Shabbat services

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints: 379 Gardner St. Denomination: Mormon; Contact: Bishop Rob Westergard, Norwell, 781-987-1004 or the Hingham building 781-749-4869.

First Church of Christ, Scientist: 386 Main St., Hingham. Denomination: Christian Science (781-741-2874).

Regular services: Sundays at 10.30 a.m., and Wednesday evenings (readings and sharing of inspiration) at 7.45 p.m. 386 Main Street, Hingham. Phone: (781) 749-2874

Young people up to age 20 can attend our Sunday school at the same time. We also provide child care for infants and toddlers.

Our Wednesday evening testimony meeting at 7:45 p.m. offers a quiet respite midweek. Listen to topical readings from the Bible and the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, after which you can share or just listen to experiences of inspiration and healing. If you'd like to read the Bible or Christian Science literature, please visit our Reading Room at 35 Station Street (call 781-749-1172 for hours) or go online to spirituality.com.

Temple Beth Sholom: 600 Nantasket Ave., Hull, 925-0091, 925-2377; conservative; clergy: Rabbi Ben Lefkowitz. Daily Minyan, Monday-Friday 7:45 a.m.; Saturday, Sunday & Holidays, 9 a.m.

Original member still performs with The Four Tops

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

Not one, but two of the vocal groups that helped Motown Records achieve its groundbreaking crossover success with the label's signature sound of pop-infused soul music – the Temptations and the Four Tops – will be on a double bill at Cohasset's South Shore Music Circus on Saturday.

Like the Temptations, their also all-male counterparts, the Four Tops have been turning out hits for five decades. Founded in Detroit, the group's quartet of lead singer Levi Stubbs, Abdul "Duke" Fakir, Renaldo "Obie" Benson, and Lawrence Payton were together from 1953 to 1997, when Payton passed away. With Benson's death in 2005, and Stubbs' passing in 2008, Fakir became the only surviving original member.

"There is a bittersweet part to performing today. I miss Levi, Obie, and Lawrence very much, but my new Tops – including Lawrence's son, Lawrence Payton, Jr., and Ronnie McNeir – are just terrific. And our new lead singer Spike DeLeon sounds a lot like Levi. Spike has wanted to be a Top for a long time, so he's been a great addition to the group," said Fakir by telephone from his home in Detroit recently.

Fakir, 76, first came together with his original group mates under the name The Four Aims while all four were Detroit-area high-school students. Wanting to avoid confusion with the Ames Brothers, the quartet renamed itself The Four Tops and set about landing a recording contract.

"After we had been on Columbia, Chess, and Riverside Records, we finally felt we were good enough to come home to Motown. Berry Gordy saw us on 'The Tonight Show' and said, 'I want the Four Tops.' We knew that for the Four Tops to have success at Motown, it would have to come through hit records. When Berry first started recording us, however, he didn't put us with any new songwriters. He just had us recording standards from the American songbook. He then put those recordings on the shelf as too non-commercial and took us to the songwriting team of Holland, Dozier and Holland, who wrote 'Baby, I Need Your Loving,' our first big hit back in 1964."

A string of hits followed, including "I Can't Help Myself (Sugar Pie, Honey Bunch)," "It's the Same Old Song," "Standing in the Shadows of Love," and "Bernadette," supported by an intense touring schedule that continues to this day.

The Temptations and the Four Tops will be at the South Shore Music Circus, on Aug. 27.

"When Berry put us together with Holland, Dozier and Holland, we were off and running. They wrote mostly for the Supremes and the Four Tops, and did very well by both groups. And we worked every imaginable gig from burlesque houses to Las Vegas showrooms."

Unlike so many other groups, the Tops stayed together for 43 years, with changes in personnel coming only with the passing of original members.

"We learned at an early age that if we stuck together we could be as good as any other group. We had arguments and dealt with various tensions over the years, but we still always kept our pact to stay together. We had seen almost every group pull apart, usually because lead singers would leave. We always kept our vow to stay together. Levi would get offers to do things on his own, but he wouldn't accept them," recalls Fakir. "We had many differences, but we always stayed together. Our attitude was, 'No matter what, you can't mess with the Tops.'"

The Temptations and The Four Tops will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Aug. 27. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at themusiccircus.org.

K-9 COMES TO TOWN

Erik makes his home in Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It seems to have happened overnight. On Wednesday, August 17, an incident occurred in Cohasset that required the use of a K-9, borrowed from another town; that Friday, the Town Manager told the Police Department to go ahead and get their own dog.

The following Wednesday, the K-9 officer and the Plymouth County dog trainer traveled to Connecticut to look at police dogs. The next day, they had one, and he was on his way to Cohasset.

The pup's name is Erik, he lives with his proud new owner, Pat (K-9 Officer Reardon), and the Cohasset P.D. is thrilled to add a four-legged member to the force.

IRENE'S AFTERMATH

Banding together

Many pitch in to help residents

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Police cars, along with fire, DPW and water department trucks, swarmed the cul-de-sacs. A Channel 5 news team also arrived on the scene. Curious neighbors trickled out to see what the matter was, some expressing concern over the police presence.

Was something wrong? After enduring three full days without electricity, had another crisis hit Cohasset?

But there was no need to worry — it was simply a courtesy call.

On both Tuesday and Wednesday evening, the town's public safety departments went door to door to check on residents who were still without power following Hurricane Irene, offering bottled water, buckets of water to flush the toilets, bags of ice and trash removal services.

By Wednesday evening, most of the 2,800 Cohasset customers who lost electricity during Sunday's tropical storm had seen their power restored. As of press time Thursday morning, the latest count had roughly 60 houses still in need of electricity.

While the majority of Cohasset had been lit up at last, the town management refused to leave the remaining households in the dark.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin said that he wouldn't stop until every house in Cohasset got the power back. Never mind that National Grid reports said that power would not be fully restored until Sunday.

"We want to keep the crews working in Cohasset until the job's done."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

"We're fighting hard to get it done by tomorrow," Coughlin said Wednesday afternoon. "It's been a multi-level fight each step of the way. We're in touch with National Grid, MEMA and the media to inform the public and put pressure on the power companies. We hope it will be a catalyst to getting National Grid to turn it back on."

Coughlin added that he hoped the town's efforts would send National Grid a message: "Cohasset matters."

The Town Manager expressed his disappointment that the few National Grid trucks that had been seen around town had already been "pulled out and redeployed."

"We want to keep the crews working in Cohasset until the job's done," Coughlin said.

Coughlin worked in the trenches along with the public safety team throughout the storm and during its "after action," as he called it. His involvement began as early a 5 am on Sunday,

POLICE BEAT

Two crashes along Route 3A

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• At 3:54 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 24), police responded to a two-car crash at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Ridge Top Road. Police said a 2000 Pontiac Bonneville, operated by a 68-year-old Marshfield man, had slowed due to the traffic flow when the Pontiac was "rear-ended" by a 2005 Toyota. The operator of the Toyota, a 21-year-old Scituate man, was cited for failure to use care in stopping.

• At 4:57 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 24), police responded to another two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 1996 Dodge Neon, operated by an 82-year-old Scituate woman had stopped on Beechwood Street at the light facing east. A 1999 Buick LeSabre, operated by a 91-year-old Scituate woman, traveling south on 3A entered the intersection as the light was turning red. Police said the driver of the Neon began to drive out while the light was still red on Beechwood.

The front-end of the Neon hit the rear passenger door of the LeSabre causing it to turn around and come to a stop 20 yards past the intersection facing north in the south lane of 3A, police said.

Both women were cited for red light violations.

Search warrant

At 12:57 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 22), Cohasset police executed a search warrant after receiving information that a 24-year-old Cohasset man, with whom they have had excessive dealings with, had firearms in his house. No firearms were found, police said. They have also been receiving complaints about this same individual leaving handwritten notes of a threatening nature at the homes of his acquaintances.

ID theft

A Pasture Road woman reported to police last week that she had been the victim of identity theft and that the credit card company notified her that someone had tried to open a line of credit in her name. There was no monetary loss and she was advised to contact the credit rating agencies to put a fraud alert on her credit report before there is another attempt.

Larceny

A subcontractor at a local construction site notified police last week that another subcontractor had paid him with a $3200 check that bounced, police said. Police spoke to the contractor that wrote the check and explained he needed to make good on the check or face prosecution.

Police said the man, who wrote the check, explained had been depending on checks he had received to cover the $3200 check. However, when he deposited those checks, they bounced.

Verbal threats

The manager at a local business notified police last week that a former employee keeps showing up intoxicated, making verbal threats and causing problems. Police left a message with the alleged harasser and told the individual to cease and desist.

Summons

A 48-year-old Hull woman is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding following a traffic stop at about 9 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 25) on Forest Avenue. Police said the 2008 Honda Element the woman was driving was traveling 46 in a 30 mph zone. A check with the Registry of Motor Vehicles revealed her license had expired. Her car was towed.

Exposed

Police arrested a 35-year-old Cohasset man last week after he allegedly exposed himself to a 15-year-old girl who was working with her mother cleaning. The man allegedly told the girl to bring some clothes to his room and then exposed himself when he opened the door. The mother and daughter reported the incident to police several days later. After an investigation, the man was arrested and charged with open and gross lewdness.

Deportation

At 5:48 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 25), police made a traffic stop after the vehicle ran the red light at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street. Investigation revealed a warrant of deportation had been issued for the 25-year-old Marshfield man who was driving. Police said the warrant was for failure to appear for removal (deportation). The man was also arrested for operating without a license. Police notified ICE (Immigration and Customs Enforcement) about the arrest.

Vandalism

Police are investigating vandalism to about 15 cement caps on balustrades surrounding a wall at a home on Jerusalem Road. The homeowner reported the vandalism last week.

Engine

A walk-in to the police station last Friday (Aug. 26) reported the Mercury outboard engine was missing off her inflatable boat that had been on a slip near the sailing club.

Intoxicated

Police took a 33-year-old Marshfield man into protective custody following a complaint about an uninvited guest at a party on Hobart Lane last Saturday (Aug. 27). The woman hosting the party made the call to police. Officers said the man was highly intoxicated; he was taken to the station to sleep it off. The next day the same man reported that his car, a 2006 Infiniti, which was parked on Hobart Lane, had been keyed.

Visual Emergency Notification System (VENS)

The Visual Emergency Notification System (VENS) is a system geared toward identifying individuals who are in need of help in the event of a power failure and have no means of summoning assistance should they need it. Cohasset Elder Affairs will provide the Police Department with an active and updated list of individuals who wish to be included in the VENS program. This program is not limited to seniors but rather is open to all who may wish to participate. Participants will be given a bright yellow placard to place on the outside door should assistance be required. The placard should be placed on the door most visible to officers checking the home. VENS will only be used in the case of a power outage and should be regarded as a last resort for summoning help.

In the event of a power outage, the shift commander will order the car(s) responsible for the sector where the power outage has occurred to the station to retrieve a list of individuals who have registered for the VENS program. Officers will then check each home designated by the list to see if the yellow placard has been placed on the outside door signaling the need for assistance. Each home designated by the list will be checked once every hour or as often as possible, and the officer will notify dispatch of the house check. Should that officer, for whatever legitimate reason, be unable to check the homes designated in his/her area, he/she will notify the supervisor. Should the sector car be unable to check the home in a reasonable amount of time the supervisor will assign another car to check the home. Should the officer observe a placard, or any other sign of distress, he/she will provide whatever service is necessary including relocation.

Bomb squad takes custody of hand grenades

A Boston police bomb squad was called to the Cohasset police station last Friday (Aug. 26) to remove a pair of hand-grenades from a car.

Police said a 72-year-old Cohasset resident came to the police station on Elm Street at 12:47 p.m. and spoke to the dispatcher about turning in some items that he had found while clearing out some things.

The items were two Vietnam-era hand-grenades and an AK-47 rifle, which the resident — who was a US Marine — had brought back from Vietnam in 1966.

Police said the man left the things in his car when he came into the station to let police know he wanted to drop them off.

Police, who called the Boston Police Bomb Squad, shut down Elm Street, Stevens Lane and access to the Harborview Apartments behind the station. They also set up a perimeter.

An officer met the Boston Bomb Squad at Exit 14 off Route 3 and escorted them to Cohasset.

The bomb squad determined the hand-grenades were real; boxed them up in a Kevlar crate and took them to Moon Island (the location of the BPD firing range) where they were detonated. They also took custody of the rifle, police said.

"We were playing it safe and rightfully so, as the grenades were live," Chief Mark DeLuca said.

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

Stopping predators on the internet

The Sex Offender Registry stops at the door to the Internet.

But Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey, Senator Robert Hedlund, Rep. Garrett Bradley and a dozen other legislators are teaming up to try to change that.

"Registering as a sex offender means giving police your name, home and work address, and any alias you have used," said Morrissey. "But sex offenders aren't required to give their screen names, online aliases, email addresses or web addresses – and that is a dangerous omission."

That means that predators can pretend to be anyone they want in chat rooms, on social networking sites and in email correspondence without violating the sex offender registry. "The registry was designed before electronic communication became so much of everyday life," Morrissey said. "It is time for the registry to reflect the realities of this generation."

"I am thankful to District Attorney Morrissey for his leadership on this issue," said Bradley. "This legislation will further protect children from sex offenders who use the internet to probe for potential victims. The information will be useful for police as it will create a disincentive for creating misleading online identities and it will criminalize creating identities that are not shared with police."

Senator Hedlund agreed. "With the growth in online dating sites, online personal ads, and other Internet-based forums, Email addresses and log-in handles are becoming just as important pieces of personal data as residential addresses and cell phone numbers.

"In addition to protecting children, this legislation will also discourage sexual predators from using the anonymity of the Internet to create a false online identity to probe for potential victims of all ages," Hedlund said.

The Joint Committee on the Judiciary is slated to hold a public hearing on the bill, House Bill No. 3587, on Sept. 27, 2011.

Tolman MDA Telethon starts Sunday

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

This year marks the end of an era with Jerry Lewis stepping aside as host of the annual MDA (Muscular Dystrophy Association) Telethon. But the annual Hingham Tolman MDA Telethon Party to raise money for the Association continues in its usual 24-hour format.

The event attracts many Hingham, Cohasset, and other South Shore residents and beyond. Everyone is welcome. This year marks its 35th anniversary.

Tolman's family lives in Cohasset, and his relatives and many friends are among those who make the event happen every year. While the party is based in Hingham, residents of Rockland, Weymouth, Quincy, Marshfield, Duxbury, Cohasset, Hull, and beyond attend every year.

Some people travel from out-of-state, including Tolman's 90-year-old father, John, who lives in Florida.

"I've been watching the Telethon since 1968," Tolman said. "I was inspired by what Jerry Lewis was doing to help those who needed hope and help as they battled Muscular Dystrophy. He gave them both."

As he watched the entire event in amazement each year, Tolman would send a small donation to help support the MDA cause. "That's where it all began. In 1976 I decided to have a 24 hour Telethon Party and raised $50 from a few friends to donate to the MDA. Our annual Labor Day party to support the work of the MDA was born that year."

After 45 years, Lewis will make his final appearance on the show and perform his signature song, "You'll Never Walk Alone." The national broadcast of the MDA Telethon is also changing from 24 hours to six, but the Hingham party remains a 24-hour event.

"It just doesn't seem right. There's something wrong when Jerry doesn't sing that song on Labor Day," Tolman said. "It's unnatural. It throws the seasons out of whack! I always felt when Jerry finished the last note of his splashy show bizzy number that summer had ended. I swear I could see leaves begin to fall!"

As the end of an era with Jerry Lewis as host comes to a close, Jay's response is: "The show must go on!"

A family affair

The Tolmans' children play an active role in every event. "I look forward to the Telethon all year long," said their daughter, Chloe. "It's so great that you can have so much fun helping other people."

This will be their son, Jack's, 13th year participating in the event. "I was four weeks old at my first Telethon," he recalls. It's great seeing my Dad do all these great things, and I feel so good knowing how much we are all helping. Just knowing that we are helping kids and adults with Muscular Dystrophy makes me smile."

Throughout the Hingham party, there's an opportunity to not only join in the fun but to also drop a donation in the famous fishbowl to help reach this year's $20,000 goal. "We're only $16,000 away from raising a total of $500,000 over the years," Tolman said. "One of the most important things we can give is hope."

Tolman enjoys thinking back on past memories. "There are so many stories of loving, caring people who have gotten involved with our effort, giving up Labor Day weekend every year, along with those who donate to help our Telethon Team," he said. "Words can't describe what I've observed over the years. The human spirit is alive!"

As Tolman's friend Peter Miller said recently, "It is the desire of all of us that someday, not too far into the future, we can all acknowledge not 35 years of hoping, but the year that someone finally brought an end to Muscular Dystrophy. That, everyone would agree, would be a day truly worth celebrating."

Last year the event was hosted by Congregation Sha'ray Shalom for the first time, since the Hingham Community Center — its usual headquarters — was under renovation. It was decided to hold the party there again this year.

The effort to find cures for forty neuromuscular diseases such as Duchene and ALS (Lou Gehrig's disease) continues. Advancements are being made through vital research, Tolman said.

Proceeds from the Hingham event benefit MDA research and the many patient services the Association provides. They will be presented to the MDA in memory of former Hingham resident Richard Berberian, Jr., son of Richard and Joan Berberian; former Weymouth resident John Fasci, Jr., son of John and Mary Fasci; Mattie Stepanek, son of Jeni Stepanek (Mattie was the National Goodwill Ambassador for MDA for three years); and former Quincy resident Mary Cronin, who raised more than $40,000 over the years as a longtime supporter of the annual Tolman event.

For further information about the event or to make a donation, visit tolmantelethon.com.

Event organizer, Jay Tolman and his daughter, Chloe, of Cohasset, update the numbers on the amount of money raised on the national level of the MDA Telethon in 2010.

Lt. Governor tours regional call center

SCRECC set to open next month

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray visited Hingham on Friday, August 26 to attend the first public tour of The South Shore Emergency Regional Call Center (SSRECC). Murray called the center a model of collaboration between state and municipal government, as well as collaboration between towns.

Come October, Norwell, Hingham, Hull and Cohasset will all rely upon the new 911 call center for emergency assistance. This call center is the first in Massachusetts to receive Development Grant funding from the state 911 department.

Opening the SSRECC, Murray said, allows the government to be "better stewards of taxpayer dollars without compromising on public safety." Murray added that he hopes the success of this center will help encourage regionalization in other Massachusetts communities.

Cohasset Town Manager Michael Coughlin was in attendance, along with Police Chief Mark DeLuca, Fire Chief Robert Silvia, and Fred Koed and Ted Carr from the Board of Selectmen.

Coughlin applauded the Patrick-Murray Administration for their efforts to partner with town governments, and their "thinking outside the box" approach to regionalization.

Coughlin added that he hoped folks will realize "how big and groundbreaking this is. This is the first like it in the state — it's the model. The folks working here are part of something historic."

According to Chief Silvia, who helped lead the tour of the new facility, the SSRECC will service over 50,000 residents. The center's state-of-the-art equipment and technology would "have a high cost point in the towns," Silvia said. By pooling their resources, each town stands to save around 25 percent "right off the bat."

"Other communities will see this and want to get on board," said Silvia. The center will "save money and provide service. It's a win-win."

This echoed Murray's sentiment that he hopes the SSRECC will become a beacon of regionalization, and that other Mass. communities will soon follow suit.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley agreed, saying that SSRECC will "serve as a model as we streamline. We hope this will allay concerns in other communities when they have a look at this."

"We can only be successful when we hold up models where collaboration has taken place," Murray said.

Will the Cohasset station close?

Some residents have expressed concern that, once the new 911 regional call center opens, the Cohasset station will no longer be opened overnight.

"It's a concern," said Selectman Fred Koed. "We want a safety haven for citizens, a secure place to go in emergencies."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin assured that the station would remain open. The Board of Selectmen originally suggested that junior cadets be allowed to work at the station overnight, but Coughlin quickly vetoed that idea, saying it is too much of a liability.

"It's important to keep the police station opened," Coughlin said, adding that the town plans to staff a safety clerk — "someone experienced."

This is an issue "we're still working on," said Koed. Acknowledging that there are a few "trade-offs" associated with moving to a regional center, Koed believes the positives outweigh the negatives.

This center will provide "much stronger service to the four communities," Koed said.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca explained that if, for some reason, the regionalization plan doesn't work out, Cohasset has a backup plan in place.

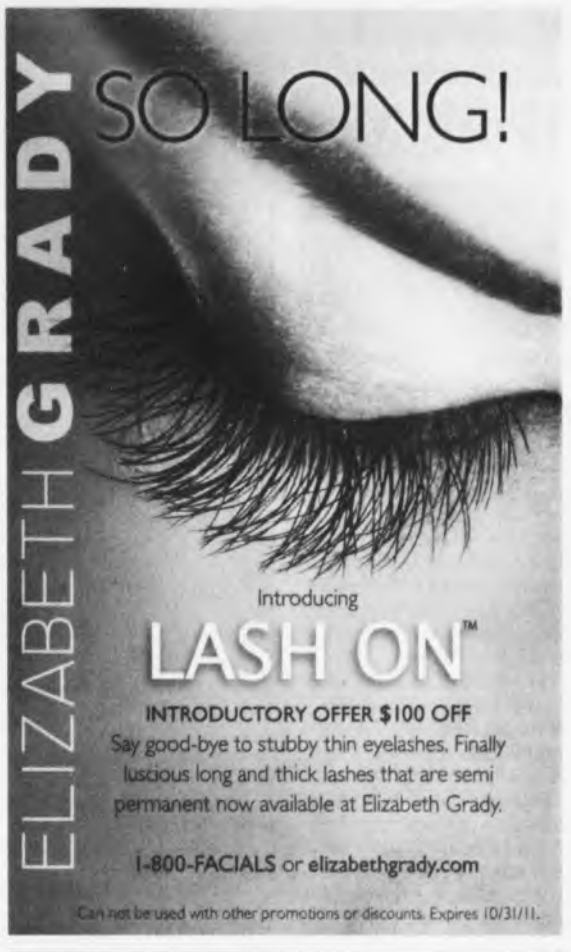
"We own the frequency in Cohasset," said DeLuca. "It's very difficult to get a frequency; we're going to keep it as a fallback."

Still, Coughlin said, "We expect the program to work, although we've thought through all the contingencies."

Fire Chief Robert Silvia also believes regionalization was the way to go, saying that moving from a single dispatcher in a small office to a regionalized center would streamline the emergency dispatching process.

"In Cohasset, you have a single dispatcher answering phones, dispatching police, fire, taking calls, working the window — anyone short of Superman can't accomplish all that." Silvia added that delegating these tasks to multiple dispatchers would provide better care to the community.

The Cohasset Mariner asked Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray if Cohasset would be eligible for some type of transitional grant as the public safety force moves into regionalized dispatch.



"That's something we're willing to look at," Murray said. "We want to hear these types of issues and needs. We encourage folks to ask questions; we want to learn from this, and we're trying to be as helpful as we can.

"[Regionalization] has obviously been successful to date," Murray added. "We're saving taxpayer dollars and enhancing public safety."

The bottom line, said Coughlin, is improving the level of emergency care offered to the community at large.

"This is important," Coughlin said. "It has to be public-safety driven, not cost-driven."

AROUND TOWN

Emily Matthews makes her debut

Well, hello Cohasset and how is everyone doing? What a wild week for so many and I am hoping that most, if not all who were without power have it back after Tropical Storm "Irene" whipped into town. I want to send out a huge thank you to the Cohasset Fire, Police, DPW, National Grid workers and volunteers for handling this issue in a professional and efficient manner. Yes, for many, I am well aware that you felt that the power outages should have been handled in a different way but for most of us, I think we took the time to realize the big picture and instead of criticisms or comments that were not appropriate, we went on and handled it well. Hoping that the Labor Day weekend is going to bring some much needed relaxing time, celebrations and fun, family times for all. Enjoy Cohasset and create those awesome memories that last a lifetime. Happy, Labor Day.

I want to wish all of those who recently left to head off to college or are preparing for the big day. Remember that good-byes do not need to be said, instead, "See you soons" can be said. Also, a good luck wish to all children and teens who are getting ready for the first days of school next week. Hard to believe that another summer has passed and the first days of school, 2011 are here. Get the Kleenex ready no matter what grade level they are headed into parents.

Baby girl

A special message to announce a wonderful little girl! Brian and Jennifer Matthews, daughter of Barbara Meehan, proudly announce the birth of their daughter, Emily Elizabeth Matthews. Emily came into the world on August 19, 2011 at 7:46 p.m.; she weighed in at 6 pounds and measured 19 inches. "Thank Heaven for Little Girls!"

Congratulations to you all and sweet Emily, welcome to our world. If you see Emily's grandmother, Barbara, around town smiling more than usual – be sure to give her a big congratulatory hug!

DTC to meet

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its first meeting of the fall season on Sept. 10th. at 9 a.m. They welcome any registered Democrat interested in civic engagement to join them at their monthly meeting. Come find out about our many civic and political events held throughout the year, such as the annual scholarship yard sale, Friday night movies, public interest issues forums, food pantry drives and candidate nights, to name a few. Monthly meetings are held in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library.

Have a great week Cohasset!

Class of '41 celebrates 70 years

The Cohasset High School Class of 1941 hosted its 70th reunion on Aug. 18, at Cohasset Golf Club. Of the 11 remaining members, four attended. They were: Joseph Perroncello of Cohasset, class president; Mary (Figueiredo) Maree of East Bridgewater, class secretary; and Eileen (Mitchell) Sargent and Stewart Sargent of Carver.

Following a lunch as guests of the class president, Joe Perroncello, each received a gift bag of mementos.

Those unable to attend were: Virginia (Wheelwright) Bland of Texas; Nicholas DeVito of Texas; George Haley of Cohasset; Milton Kerr of Virginia; Augustine Mello of Arkansas; George Mulhern of California; and Edwin Pratt of Cohasset.

CSC seeking donations for estate sale

CSC is seeking items in good condition such as furniture, decorative home goods, accessories and sporting equipment. No books, clothes or toys unless of special value such as Lionel trains or American Girl items.

Cohasset Sailing Club will host an estate sale on Saturday, Sept. 17, and Sunday, Sept. 18, at the clubhouse and grounds with all proceeds going to the building fund for the new clubhouse. The sale will take place 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day.

CSC is seeking items in good condition such as furniture, decorative home goods, accessories and sporting equipment. No books, clothes or toys unless of special value such as Lionel trains or American Girl items. All donations are tax deductible; let someone know if a tax receipt is needed. Pick up of items can be arranged or people can call Diane Shipp at 383-9198 for drop off. People are asked to consider donating unwanted but still good items rather than to the boutique at the Cohasset recycling facility.

Volunteers are sought to take shifts each day.

People are asked to use this upcoming long weekend to clear out a few things that are no longer need but would be a find for someone else and a way to help the CSC's fundraising goal.

STARTING FRESH

Cohasset schools kick off the new year

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"It's invigorating, fresh and exhilarating. We're full of hope and full of changes. It's a new day, new chapter and new Cohasset."
— Spanish teacher Peggy Jordan

"There's a new era in the wind," said music teacher Bryan Marks as he worked on the computer in his choir room.

He was referring to the new Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo, who addressed teachers, staff members and administration during Wednesday morning's Opening Day breakfast and meeting.

This Tuesday, September 6 will be the last "first day of school" for Marks, who is entering his last year as Cohasset Middle High's musical director.

The Opening Day breakfast and welcome "made the sweetness of this year even sweeter," Marks said.

"It was wonderful," he said of the meeting, which went by more quickly than it had in past years. "All of the speeches were succinct and pleasant. We had a feeling of collaboration and cooperation, which summarizes this administration's plan."

Spanish teacher Peggy Jordan, who enters her 27th year as a Spanish teacher and her sixth at Cohasset, said the day was "a terrific start."

"It's invigorating, fresh and exhilarating," Jordan said. "We're full of hope and full of changes. It's a new day, new chapter and new Cohasset."

She added that the "real sense of community effort" apparent at the meeting made her "feel inspired."

"We haven't felt that energy for a long time," Jordan said of her fellow teachers.

These reactions are what Cataldo was hoping to hear after kicking off Opening Day. In addition to hosting the breakfast, with food supplied by Atlantic Bagel, Cataldo gave each attendant a Cohasset Schools insulated drawstring bag with a comic strip enclosed. She hid four blue comics in four separate bags and said that whoever wound up with a blue comic would be treated to lunch on her this October.

In addition to sharing her vision for the school year, Cataldo continued to boost morale with an awards ceremony for teachers entering their 20th and 30th years. She also gave special recognition to Ken Cisneros, who upon entering his 40th year is now "the most seasoned employee in the district."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin was on hand to speak, and he expressed his goal to have the town and school district work together as a team.

Marks said he appreciated how Coughlin "pledged partnership between the school and town" in an "efficient, pragmatic" way.

Cataldo thanked Coughlin and the town emergency management for their "diligence in getting the schools back in power" after Hurricane Irene.

Dr. Helene Lieb, Chairman of the School Committee, also addressed the crowd. Cataldo told the Cohasset Mariner that she'd asked Lieb to speak, and that the School Committee hadn't done so at Opening Day for years.

It seemed that this is just one of many changes Cataldo has in mind for the new school year.

"I'm looking forward to getting into the classrooms," said Cataldo, who will pop into each school on the first day next week. "A lot of teachers have invited me to come and visit. Today is a new day in Cohasset, and a new chapter we're going to write."

Labor Day concert on the common

Crossroads Blues Project to perform Monday

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Crossroads Blues Project is closing out the Cohasset Recreation Department's summer concert series with a live show on the common this Labor Day at 4 pm.

Holding concerts on the common is a proud tradition of the Rec. Department stretching back three decades, said Director Ted Carroll. While the department used to host one band – the South Shore Concert Band – Carroll has been striving to include a variety in recent years.

This summer, the Rec. Department has hosted several shows on the town green during the weekly farmer's market on Thursdays. The Labor Show is something new, but also something Carroll hopes will continue year after year.

"We've had some great bands this summer," said Carroll, citing the New City Cowboys, Matt Browne and Jackson Weatherbee. "We're rocking the neighborhood a little bit."

Rocking the common on Monday afternoon is the Crossroads Blues Project. The local band is comprised of teachers and students from the Crossroads Music store in Hanover. The Labor Day lineup includes guitarist Paul Doolittle, drummer Jim Weston, keyboardist Jeff Simpson, bassist Chris Franzen, and vocalist Erin Thornton.

The Crossroads Blues Project came about when Doolittle, whose brother owns Crossroads Music, noticed that there were student musicians, kids and adults alike, looking for performing experience but lacking the connections to land gigs on their own. Doolittle, who teaches lessons at the store, had the idea to "mix students and teachers" so that the less experienced musicians would have the chance to play live with more seasoned performers.

Doolittle said that this is a summer band that performs four to five shows each year, and each year the lineup changes. Many musicians who start in Crossroads Blues Project tend to go on and start bands of their own. This is the third year the band has performed in Cohasset.

"We love it there, and we love the town green," said Doolittle. He added that he's supportive of Carroll's efforts to start up a Labor Day concert tradition and applauds the Rec. Department's efforts to bring folks out to the farmer's market with this summer's Thursday evening shows.

"It's good for the town," Doolittle said. "We hope people will come down and enjoy the music with us."

OUR VIEW

Powerless, not!

We could not be prouder of our public safety and town officials who all rose to the occasion – before, during and after – hurricane-turned-tropical storm Irene came to town.

We wish we could say the same for National Grid.

In our opinion, National Grid's response to Irene in our region has been abysmal.

They may argue to the contrary – but, even judging from our own personal experience – much more should have and could have been done.

There are many households in the area (including those in Scituate and Norwell) who are entering the weekend still without power. Eating by candlelight loses its charm day after day – as does going to bed at 7:30 p.m.

We acknowledge that then Hurricane Irene wreaked havoc in states to the south and north of us – but on the South Shore of Massachusetts, it was barely a tropical storm. What would have happened to us had Irene remained even a "Category One" hurricane?

There will be those who will argue that in the grand scheme of things – losing power for a week is not all that bad. Ok, we accept that.

But, simply put, the aftermath of Irene was preventable. Those who recall Hurricane Bob back in 1991 may remember a similar situation with widespread power outages that went on for days. The resulting outrage brought a series of public hearings and a game plan going forward. As we recall, the utility serving us at the time was required to have a crew in place in town during a big storm and had to trim back branches from the wires.

We are not electrical experts – but we would guess that the outages due to Irene had a lot to do with lack of tree maintenance around the power lines. (We cannot recall the last time we saw an Asplundh truck around!)

Whoever said the best government is the one closest to home – could also apply that to electric utilities. Hingham Municipal Light was not only prepared for the potential effects of Irene but knows the neighborhood. That translates into great, efficient service and happy customers.

National Grid's seeming lack of communication and response has translated into terrible service and irate customers. It is also a public safety issue. Case in point: traffic lights were out for days at major intersections.

We know here in Cohasset – our police chief, fire chief, town manager and other officials – are not going to give National Grid a pass on this one. We need to support their efforts by contacting our legislators, Rep. Garrett Bradley and Sen. Bob Hedlund – to make sure that hearings are held and we are not held hostage again by National Grid's lack of preparation and service the next time a storm comes to town.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Suggestions for the water commission

The following letter sent to Lee Jenkins, Cohasset Water Commissioner, was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

Dear Mrs. Jenkins:

Referencing your most recent letter giving us a water and sewer update. You requested ideas. I have several ideas that may help the overhead and debt problem in Cohasset. You point out that the $33.6 million was used for capital improvements. I'm not sure that is what the money was used for over the past several years. The so-called improvements seem non-existent. Improvements usually imply that quality and efficiency are made better. Well, we all know that the cost has risen and the quality is very questionable.

You are operating an enterprise that is basically insolvent and you allow for unpaid bills? Not exactly the best move. If residents don't pay, then turn the water off. People will attempt to get away with whatever they can. Put their names on a bulletin board in all public buildings, including schools and online. They will pay.

I also question the consumption on my water bill that the identical amount of water that we use is also the same amount of sewer waste. This seems impossible in a residential setting. Although, I suppose nothing is impossible in Cohasset.

Secondly, you point out that we are experiencing greater delinquency in payments to your department. As price goes up and quality goes down, accounts receivable usually increases then decreases as people find other options. Not sure how you want to think about that, but you might consider reading a book on economics.

You also point out that the school owes your department $104K. I suggest you turn off the water until you receive payment. People will attempt to get away with whatever they can. Put their names on a bulletin board in all public buildings, including schools and online. They will pay.

Lastly, I suggest that you cut your operating expenses and use the extra funds to retire debt. This should be done in conjunction with a complete debt restructuring. If you need a hand, give me a call. I've had great success in this area during my career. - Anthony DiPaolo, 43 Pond St.

FOR THE RECORD

Another lesson on school coverage

GREGORY MATHIS

With all that happens each and every day in the schools, we rely on principals, teachers, parents and even students to be our eyes and ears.

Back in April, I wrote about ways to get your school notices and information published in the newspaper and on the website.

It's hard to believe, but some students are already back in the classroom this week, with the remainder scheduled to return to school a day or two after Labor Day. By the middle of next week, everyone will be back and a new school year will be under way.

I thought it would be a good idea to revisit some of the guidelines I wrote about in April as far as getting the best coverage possible for your classroom and school this year.

Beyond school lunch menus and honor rolls, which have been staples of the community newspaper for decades, there is so much more to cover that we just don't have the time and resources to get to. With all that happens each and every day in the schools, we rely on principals, teachers, parents and even students to be our eyes and ears.

If you don't see coverage of your school, there's something you can do about it. Take a picture or two of the science fair, the spelling bee or any school event, and send it along with a detailed description of who's in the photo, what they're doing, the name of the school and any other pertinent information. Ideally, we'd love to have each school mentioned every week in the newspaper.

While our resources are limited in terms of dedicated coverage to schools, we certainly would make the space available in the newspaper and on the website if a representative of the school or a parent from a PTO were to provide us with photos and information from each of the schools in the community.

We get calls from time to time from frustrated parents of students complaining that all we cover is high school sports. "What about the marching band?" they'll argue. "What about the drama club?" "How about some coverage of National Honor Society students?" We do devote space and resources to covering local sports, so those are indeed valid points, especially if you're child isn't a star varsity athlete. We would certainly be able and willing to work with the various clubs and organizations to come up with more consistent coverage with a little help from those involved.

As I said back in April, amazing things are happening in our schools every day, every week, every year. So let's work together to make sure the entire community is aware of all the good work being done in classrooms and schools across town. Contact your local editor, Mary Ford (mford@wickedlocal.com) if you have any questions about getting your school information into the local newspaper or on the Wicked Local website, or send me an email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I can help get those questions answered.

And don't forget...

We're still looking for your input on the 10th anniversary of 9/11, as well as first-person accounts for our Paint the Town Pink breast cancer awareness coverage. I'm also looking for readers to serve on a regional Readers Advisory Network that will kick into gear after Labor Day. As always, you can send me an email if you have any questions or would like to contribute to any of the above-mentioned efforts.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South unit, with offices in Marshfield, Plymouth and Raynham.

Behind the scenes with tropical storm Irene

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Power pole and transformer down on Nichols Road.

Typical Emergency Planning Group meeting.

Things you may not know about Irene — After Irene has passed, some of us are without power, phone and other services, but all things considered, Cohasset escaped major damage from storm Irene. Several things contributed to our escape. Frankly, luck played a part and high quality planning played a very important part. First let's look at the "luck" part.

Irene came from the southeast, but our harbor opens to the northeast so we had natural protection from this storm. Since the eye of the storm passed to the west of Cohasset, we were spared the punishing rainfall that causes much flooding. The flip side of this was, that being on the eastern side of the eye, we had the highest winds the storm had to offer. However, Irene had lost some of her punch by the time she reached Cohasset, so we were spared very high winds. You may have heard that on Sunday we had astronomically high tides, the highest being near midnight at 11.23 feet. Imagine what the coastal roads would have been like if we had a tide like this with a 4 foot or 6 foot or even an 8 foot storm surge on top of the high tide. But, the bulk of the storm actually came near low tide with minimal flooding impact.

Even thought things were not a bad as they could have been, a number of Cohasset residents felt the effects of the storm on a very personal level, including this writer. Several of the photos we have included show a few of the damaged areas.

Nichols Road was closed when a power pole with oil-filled transformers came down on the roadway. In the photo you can see the top part of the power pole still hanging from the overhead wires. Clean Harbors had to be called to clean up the oil from the surrounding area. Fortunately, this type of damage was not typical.

Now, let's look at the planning part, which is invisible to most residents, but vitally important. In times of emergency, with out pre-planning and coordination, emergency operations often come apart at the seams. The result is very poor response to emergencies and angst among our residents. We had the good fortune to be a party to these planning preparations and we'd like to give you a detailed idea of the efforts that actually go into this work.

We had the good fortune to be a party to these planning preparations and we'd like to give you a detailed idea of the efforts that actually go into this work.

Our new Town Manager, Mike Coughlin, took on the task of effective planning as a personal goal. After being on the job for less than one month, he marshaled meetings of all town functions critical to a recovery from storm damage. For example, starting Wednesday the 24th, Emergency Planning Group meetings were held along with conference calls with updates of storm progress and expected track from the National Weather Service and an update of the emergency efforts taking place from the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency. These meetings and conference calls were held daily until Friday and Saturday, when these updates were held twice a day. Then two special resident update programs were taped at the school's television studio for rebroadcast on both Comcast and Verizon television. These were designed to warn residents of the dangers present in a severe storm, how to protect themselves and how they could obtain help from our first responders.

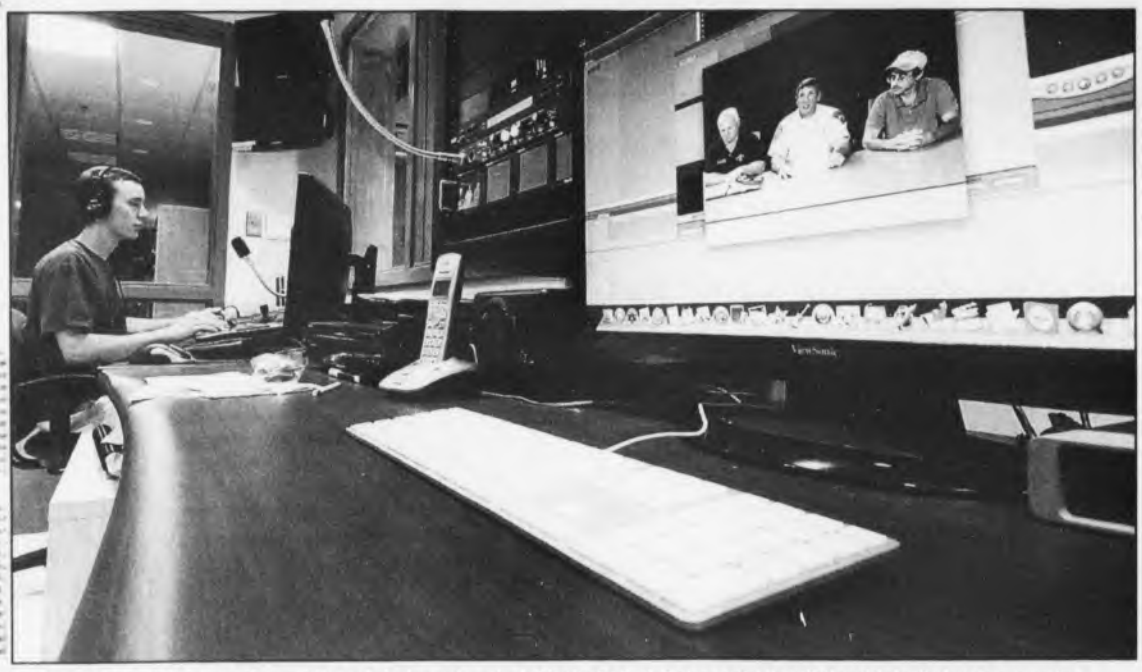
So who are the people critical to a coordinated response to an event like Irene? The breadth of personnel may surprise you, but if you think about it makes sense. First on the list is the Town's emergency planning coordinator. He is in charge of the emergency management facility located at a bunker at the Deer Hill School. At this site they have emergency cots and food supplies and blankets and such. An emergency communications hub is at that site as well.

Of course, the Police and Fire chiefs are critical the emergency planning operation as our first responders. Also critical is the Harbormaster for harbor safety. The Director of the Council on Elder Affairs, who detailed special programs to serve her constituents, like food services or a way for police to rapidly identify elders living alone who need assistance during a storm event. The Town Facilities Manager, who is responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of Town buildings, is another important resource so that any event that may affect a Town building can be addressed rapidly by his staff.

A group of largely unsung heroes in any major storm, whether it be a hurricane or snowstorm are the DPW. They had there entire crew on duty at 5 a.m. Sunday morning ready to react to downed trees and major debris in the streets. If you drove around Town on Monday morning you could see strong evidence of the yeoman's work that had already done to clear branches and trees from the roads. In their interest to clear things as fast as possible, very often they would just pile the branches at the edge of the road, rather than take precious time to truck them away. Removing the debris will come later after all roads are cleared.

Other Town resources that took part in the planning efforts were the Water and Sewer Departments. Both had fully tested their emergency power generation systems so they could continue to operate with prolonged power outages. The water Department had four days' supply of water in their tanks. This would allow them to supply us with water, even if their emergency generators were to fail. Cross departmental efforts were very much evident, with the Water Department loaning several pick-up trucks to the Police so that they could access places where the cruisers may not be able to travel, especially in areas of high water. The Water Department also reached out to the DPW with a front-end loader that they were not using this weekend.

Cohasset's Building Inspector is another piece of the puzzle, because he has the responsibility to assess damaged buildings to make sure that they are safe for use and not hazardous to anyone who might enter.



Our Greenbush Department, as readers will know, has been working on the Town's behalf, on the new tide gate that drains Jacob's Meadow. This function is vital in the event of severe rainfall. The gate was placed into "Storm Mode" several days before the storm. This mode only allows water to drain out of the meadow. Thus, before the storm even hits, the meadow water level will be as low as it can be. This in effect creates flood storage to hold the storm water before it can be released to the harbor when the tides permit. The gate had an emergency operation scheme that, fortunately, we did not need because power was not interrupted.

The Emergency Planning Group also had a conference call with National Grid regarding their plans for storm response. They sounded like they had plans to bring in extra resources and said they would have groups of trucks with crews stationed around their service territory ready to respond. As of early in the week after the storm, their planning didn't seem to be much to Cohasset's benefit. It was very hard to find their trucks any where around Town. But remember, their response is not under our direct control and they do have very widespread priorities.

The upshot is, as the Town Manager said at one of our meetings, initially we are really on our own. Later in the recovery cycle we saw the outside service providers around Town starting their restoration work, but early on it was truly up to us. Some of the programs that the Town provided before the outside recovery efforts started are very interesting. For example, the Council on Elder Affairs set up a charging station at their offices at the Community Center so that elders without power could charge their cell phones. For a large number of these residents their cell phones are their only link with the outside world and the safety forces, which is so important to our older population. Fire and Police in conjunction with the DPW collected spoiled food for disposal and distribute ice to help residents keep what food they had left, safe for consumption. Widespread interdepartmental cooperation was truly the rule.

So, the invisible job of planning for an event and the initial recovery work is detailed and involved and far-reaching. These dedicated people all pulled together to make the impacts of this storm as minimal as they could possibly be. But of course, it always helps to be lucky, too.

Electronic devices get all charged up

Starbucks, community center become hubs

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As the lights went out in Cohasset, and all over the South Shore, residents stuck without power turned to a few local stops to get caffeine boosts and to charge electronic devices.

The Cohasset Starbucks became an unofficial charging hub. Locals crammed the café to get their coffee fix while also giving their cell phones, laptops and tablets a much-needed power zap.

On Monday, the day after Irene hit, Starbucks was filled to the hilt with customers working on laptops and plugging in phones.

"The Starbucks on 3A looks like a Red Cross Shelter," Linda Fechter of Cohasset commented on Facebook. "People are everywhere, and there is a faint smell of burning power cords lingering in the air."

One Scituate woman, who works from home as a consultant, said on Wednesday evening that Starbucks became her haven after the storm.

The place was "jam-packed," she said. "People were working on their laptops, taking conference calls and sharing power cords with one another. It's such a global world now that when we're stuck without a connection, we're out of luck." She added that this particular Starbucks "has been so accommodating. It's good for people who work from home and need internet."

Another Scituate resident explained that she was working at Starbucks because the Scituate library was closed, although her power had been turned on the day before.

"I feel bad for the people who still don't have power," she said, mentioning Vermont. "I'm so happy to have it back; we're spoiled. It helps to keep it in perspective."

The Cohasset Community Center was another spot residents could turn to for their charging needs.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin called the Cohasset Mariner on Tuesday to get the word out that the center would be setting up a makeshift charging station.

"People can come down, grab a cup of coffee and charge up their electronic devices," he said.

Folks were still taking advantage of this service on Wednesday evening. After covering the Cohasset outages, Channel 5's news team headed over to the center to charge their phones before heading back to Boston.

when he arrived at the DPW with coffee in hand, said Police Chief Mark DeLuca.

"He was here for the entire town," DeLuca said, adding that Coughlin rode out the entire storm with Fire Chief Robert Silvia. "He was also at the front window [of the police station] taking information for downed trees — I've never seen that before."

As it became apparent the day after the storm that the outages would last for days, if not a week, Coughlin took action and authorized the town to provide ice and water.

The public safety team, along with Coughlin, made their final rounds on Lambert's Lane, Cedar Street and Beechwood Street on Wednesday. They were joined by a Channel 5 anchor and cameraman. The Police Department also gave this reporter a ride.

Officers knocked on residents' doors and asked if anyone needed water, ice or trash removal for any spoiled food. While many folks expressed surprised at seeing police officers on their streets or in their driveways, they all appeared grateful for the help.

Mark Delaney of Beechwood Street, one of the streets still waiting to receive power on Wednesday, said that he had only seen one National Grid truck in Cohasset.

"I understand they have a lot to do," he said of the utility company. "It's just a shame." He added that he and his family were "all right," although he worried about his 82-year-old mother in the heat.

"It's been ok because it's not winter," Delaney said. "This winter, we lost power for 27 hours. We've lived with it. But we threw out all the food today and head to get a cooler for the milk." (For more on how Cohasset folks coped without power, see sidebar.)

The public safety crew has certainly had their hands full, but everyone, from the police officers to the DPW guys, seemed energetic and eager to help out.

"The week's been very busy," said Kenny Thayer of the DPW. "It's been go, go, go — we've worked a lot of late nights. We're giving our 100 percent all for everybody to make sure they have comfortable living."

Some residents, like Jerry Reed of Beechwood Street, were thrilled by the assistance.

"I love the Town Manager," Reed said of Coughlin. "He's a great guy."

Even as the public safety team wound their way around the neighborhoods, reports started to flood in of the power getting turned back on.

Those who had their power kick in earlier in the week took to social networking to express their delight —a nd thank the town management for a job well done.

"I've never been so in love with a light bulb!" Selectman Diane Kennedy wrote on her Facebook page Tuesday evening. "I hope your neighborhood is next."

Kennedy said in a phone interview that her neighbors in Little Harbor were cheering when their power came back on.

Many Cohasset folks wrote on the Police Department's page to applaud their efforts.

"Thank you for all your hard work and above and beyond communication and outreach," one Cohasset Facebook user posted.

Lieutenant Bill Quigley vigilantly kept the public informed throughout the week, updating the P.D.'s Facebook page several times a day with photos and intel as power gradually came back to Cohasset.

How Cohasset coped

What to do when all the lights go out? Residents around Cohasset shared how they got through the week.

Chad Schmidt, president of M3 Technologies: Stone Care Products, said that the lack of power made doing his job nearly impossible.

"It's been hectic trying to run a business," said Schmidt, whose business is located right next to his home on Lamberts Lane. "We've been trying to operate without phone service, and that's hard to do."

He added that he had to plug his smart phone into his laptop in order to fulfill customer orders.

Another resident on Lamberts Lane who wished to remain anonymous said that his family has been "lighting candles and playing board games." He had just purchased a generator, and the Police Department assisted him with getting it up and running.

He remained optimistic about the blackout, saying it allowed his family to enjoy "lots of bonding." He added that water was what they missed the most.

Mark Delaney of Beechwood Street said that his family got by with flashlights, lighting the gas stove manually and going to bed early. He explained that it's been rough not having phone service or internet, especially since "the first of the month is coming" and he needed to pay bills.

"It's disheartening," Delaney said of waiting for the outage to end. "But what are you going to do?"

Jerry Reed of Beechwood Street said the blackout took him back to his boyhood.

"We've made believe that we're camping," he said.

Steps to follow after an emergency

STEVE BOBO

Cohasset Aftermath. Lights went on for about a third of the town at 5:30 Tuesday when power was restored to parts of Jerusalem Road and other parts of Town. A Pole near the end of Nichols road which held three transformers was still down on Wednesday morning, however the Town was faithfully clearing the grinder pumps around Town and a call to the Board of Health (382-4116) would ensure a safe use of the new elements of the new sewers using the E-1 grinder pumps (capacity 70 gallons). The rest of town was expected to have power restored by the time this edition of Mariner reaches homes.

After a Disaster or Emergency: The recent storm has caused several unusually severe problems for our area. Here are some suggestions from the Federal Emergency Management Administration:

When returning to your home after a hurricane or flood, be aware that flood water may contain sewage. Protect yourself and your family by following these steps:

• Inside the Home Keep children and pets out of the affected area until cleanup has been completed. Wear rubber boots, rubber gloves, and goggles during cleanup of affected areas. Remove and discard items that cannot be washed and disinfected (such as, mattresses, carpeting, carpet padding, rugs, upholstered furniture, cosmetics, stuffed animals, baby toys, pillows, foam-rubber items, books, wall coverings, and most paper products).

• Odors: Particularly of rancid food should be cleared rapidly since they will cause an allergic reaction. If your stove contains a vent fan, or even better, if the kitchen has electric ventilation capability, turn it on and let it run for 12 hours.

• Building and Structure Remove and discard drywall and insulation that has been contaminated with sewage or flood waters. Thoroughly clean all hard surfaces (such as flooring, concrete, molding, wood and metal furniture, countertops, appliances, sinks, and other plumbing fixtures) with hot water and laundry or dish detergent.

• Help the drying process by using fans, air conditioning units, and dehumidifiers. In an area where food has spoiled, set up fans to get rid of spoiled food smells which can trigger allergic reactions. Most stoves contain vent fans. Turn them on and allow them to run at least 4 hours to clear the smell.

After completing the cleanup, wash your hands with soap and warm water. Use water that's has been boiled for 1 minute (allow the water to cool before washing your hands}. You may use water, disinfected for personal hygiene. Let it stand for 30 minutes. If the water becomes cloudy, use a solution of1/4 teaspoon of household bleach per 1 gallon of water. Wash all clothes worn during the cleanup in hot water and detergent. These clothes should be washed separately from uncontaminated clothes and linens. Wash clothes contaminated with flood or sewage water in hot water and detergent. It is recommended that a Laundromat be used for washing large quantities of clothes and linens until your onsite waste-water system has been professionally inspected and serviced.

Outside the Home: Keep children and pets out of the affected area and use the same precautions described for inside the home. If you become injured or: call 911.

Health Risks: Floodwaters and standing waters pose various risks, including infectious diseases, chemical hazards, and injuries.

Diarrheal Diseases: Eating or drinking anything contaminated by floodwater can cause diarrheal disease. Practice good hygiene (hand washing) after contact with flood waters. Do not allow children to play in flood water areas.

Wash children's hands frequently (always before meals).

Do not allow children to play with toys that have been contaminated by flood water and have not been disinfected.

Wound Infections: Open wounds and rashes exposed to flood waters can become infected. Avoid exposure to flood waters if you have an open wound. Cover open wounds with a waterproof bandage.

Keep them clean as possible by washing well with soap and clean water. If a wound develops redness, swelling, or drainage, seek immediate medical attention. Be aware of potential chemical hazards during floods. Flood waters may have moved hazardous chemical containers of solvents or other industrial chemicals from their normal storage places.

K-9

"We're excited to have him as part of the team," said Lieutenant Bill Quigley.

Erik has already made the rounds at the police station several times over the last week. Reardon plans to bring him by the Farmer's Market on Thursday and to the next Board of Selectmen meeting. So far, Erik has made an unofficial debut on the P.D.'s Facebook page. Erik will be more formally introduced to the community at Cohasset Day on September 18.

So far, "the community support of the program has been more than we expected," Quigley said.

One of the driving forces behind the community support is Trish Morse, who volunteered to help the department fundraise for the K-9 program. Morse was astonished by how quickly the whole thing has come together.

"I thought it would take another few months," she said.

Morse shared that Officer Reardon was invited to check out dogs at Connecticut Canine Services because Plymouth County dog trainer Ken Belanger was already heading there last week.

"Erik was one of several they looked at on Thursday," said Morse. "Ken connected Patrick with this particular dog; it's all about the chemistry between the dog and his handler." Reardon and Erik hit it off, and the canine became part of the officer's family.

Erik may live and work with Reardon, but as the Police Department's mascot, he will quickly become part of the Cohasset fold.

"Erik really belongs to the town," Morse said. "He's going to be everybody's dog."

All about Erik

- Birthday: 7/15/2010
- Birthplace: Slovakia
- Breed: Purebred, longhaired German shepherd
- Training regimen: Will train for 14 weeks to track criminals and find missing persons; will eventually add drug detection to his skill set and become a dual-purpose dog
- Career: Can work 5-8 years as a police dog; will continue living with Reardon after he retires

The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation

Last week, the Cohasset Mariner reported that donations to the K-9 program could be sent to the police station in care of Officer Reardon. Since then, volunteer Trish Morse has set up the official K-9 fundraising entity: The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation.

Morse has provided a gift registry for Erik listing the supplies he will need throughout his tenure as the Cohasset K-9. Items include:

- Patrol harness: $340
- Kevlar vest: $600
- Electronic collar: $300
- Toys: $50 or $10 each
- First aid kit: $160
- Veterinary services: $35

Cohasset Kennels has already donated Erik's food. Other private donations have also helped fulfill equipment needs. The Hull police department donated a special dog insert for the cruiser. The Cohasset Police Association paid for the dog.

The vision of the foundation, said Morse, is for the entire K-9 program to be funded by community donations.

Morse will have Erik's registry list on hand at Cohasset Day.

Those who would like to donate can send checks to:

FLAG FOOTBALL

Registration still open

Hingham Youth Football's flag football season will begin on Saturday, September 17.

Registration cost is $100 for the first child, $50 for each additional with a $200 max and a late fee of $25 after July 15.

The league is co-ed and encourages girls to play as it is a non-contact sport.

Children ages 5 (by September 1, 2011) -14 are eligible to play.

Teams are divided by grade.

The game times are set every week.

If your games are scheduled for 1 p.m., they will be 1p.m. throughout the season barring any unforeseen circumstances.

Games are played on Saturdays at Lynch Field, Beal Street, Hingham.

Practice times are up to the coaches. Generally, they just have the kids show up a little before game time to run through plays and go over the basics of the game.

The season will run from September 10 through November 5.

On November 5, Divisions 4 and 5 will have their championship games played and Divisions 1-3 will have a regular game. There will be medals for all players in Divisions 1-3 and trophies for all players in Divisions 4 and 5.

Children are encouraged to wear cleats, sweatpants and dress in layers as it can get very cold at Lynch Field. The league provides all other equipment and jerseys for the kids. Please direct any questions to Liz Stasio. jlstasio@comcast.net

Skippers a work in progress

Soccer squad hoping for another long season

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

A year ago, the Cohasset boys soccer team finished the regular season 13-3-2 and picked up a No. 4 seed that helped the Skippers to the Div. 3 South Sectional final, where they lost 1-0 to Dover-Sherborn.

To get to the final, the Skippers relied heavily on their defense and goalie Sam Richardson.

Cohasset won two playoff games 1-0 in shootouts in the playoff run.

This year, Cohasset coach Jim Willis is hoping his team will be able to continue the outstanding play in the back and midfield, but will have to find different ways to get it done.

Richardson is gone to graduation, leaving Willis without a proven talent in net for the first time in five years.

"In my five years here I've never had to go to a backup goalie," Willis said. "We've been lucky. We had Will Wise for four years, then Sam

Send us your stuff

With the high school fall sports season heading at us at warp speed, as well as youth sports, as your humble Sports Editor, I am sending out an open invitation for help from the community.

Our goal here at the Mariner is to keep you informed about all the sports in town.

Still, what you may not know is that your humble sports editor covers four towns with an average of six teams in each one.

That's just the high school varsity.

That is where you come in.

The door, or even better e-mailbox is always open for you.

If you're reading the paper and see your team hasn't been in it, feel free to send me a bit of information.

Who's playing well, who had the big plays for the youth soccer or football team, or rugby, baseball, beer league softball or individual athletic accomplishment over the weekend.

This is always welcome and in fact, encouraged big-time.

Send us your photos, with a nice big resolution if possible. It helps to attach them separately from a document as a jpg.

I'm not trying to be picky, just trying to make it easier to send things along.

Send your mail to wwassersug@wickedlocal.com.

I'll be honest here, Cohasset has been outstanding in this category, but I still get questions about who and where to send things.

GOLF NOTEBOOK

Locals head to S.C. for World Amateur

PAUL HARBER

Now that Irene is history, golf's largest single-site tournament is set to take place this week in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

More than 3,000 amateur golfers from 45 states and 20 countries will gather for the 28th World Amateur Championship. More than 60 Myrtle Beach area golf courses will be used for the four-round event that will crown the world amateur champion.

We played in the first, third and fourth tournaments and they were a blast.

Went down with about a dozen members from Pembroke Country Club back in the 1980s when it began and some are still down there.

The format is simple. You are put with 125 golfers of a similar handicap and you play four days of stroke play. The fifth day the winners of each flight advance to a championship playoff.

But the real fun is the nightly party at the convention center when leaders can gloat and those with no-so-grand scores can commiserate. It's called "World's Largest 19th Hole."

Among this year's participants are several local golfers including Ralph Bowdridge of Weymouth, Steven Brockway of Norton, Mary Cotter of Stoughton, Joseph Kalil of Braintree, Stephen Lorance of Pembroke, Robert McPate of Whitman, Christopher Perry of Plymouth, John Santoro of Wareham and Walter Smith of Stoughton.

Mid-Am qualifiers

A starting field of nearly 400 competitors was trimmed to just 120 golfers who will now compete for the State Mid-Amateur Championship Sept. 13-15 at Pocasset Golf Club on Cape Cod.

Joining the 24 exempt players in Pocasset will be the qualifiers who battled through 18 holes of stroke-play competition at six sites.

More than 70 golfers teed it up in the State Mid-Amateur qualifier at Easton CC last week, but only Dan Najarian of Marshfield CC was able to break par and earn medalist honors with a score of 2-under par 69 last week.

Najarian began his round by making six straight pars, but then finished off his front nine with three straight birdies to make the turn at 3-under par 33.

Although he suffered bogies on the 11th and 18th holes, he carded his fourth birdie of the day on the 553-yard, par 5 13th hole which proved more than enough to finish atop the leader board.

Norfolk County Classic champion Kevin Carey finished second with an even par 71.

Mike Verde of Easton used his home course knowledge to finish third at 1-over 72. He was the only Easton CC member to qualify. Other qualifiers included Joe McCabe of Norfolk GC, who serves as the executive director of The First Tee of Massachusetts program and David Chiaffone, who plays out of MGA Links, the 18-hole, par 3 course in Norton that serves as home of The First Tee of Massachusetts.

Other qualifiers at Easton include Michael Willock of Plymouth CC, Joseph P. Powers of Olde Scotland, Joe Leroy of Indian Pond CC, Thomas Czarnota of CC of Halifax, Tom Lennon of Wampatuck CC, James Ferrera of Wollaston GC, Dan Sullivan of Marshfield CC), Paul Lacamera of Plymouth CC and Ken Ryder of South Shore CC.

In another qualifier at Bayberry Hills, Derek Ladd of Acushnet River took medalist honors with a 1-over 73. Finishing just one stroke back was Joseph Frew of Granite Links GC, who carded three birdies en route to a qualifying score of 2-over par 74.

Hurricane Irene had an affect on just about all courses in the region. South Shore Country Club withstood the storm, but certainly, nobody was teeing it up on Sunday. STAFF PHOTO / PAUL HARBER

In a show of the quality of play at Bayberry Hills Golf Course, the first and last qualifiers were separated by only six strokes.

Jim Forsgard of South Shore CC, John Mazzocca of Walpole CC, Robert Mancini of Thorny Lea, Mike Phipps of Atlantic CC, Tim O'Connell of Harmon Golf and Mark Dwyer of Green Harbor GC also earned berths in the upcoming State Mid-Amateur.

At Concord CC, Joe DiMarzio of South Shore CC tied for fifth and earned a berth. Anthony Bissanti of TPC Boston and Jason Clary of Thorny Lea, also earned berths.

Securing a berth during the final day of qualifying last Wednesday at Indian Ridge Country Club was David Pierce of the Country Club of Halifax. The local high school hockey coach posted a 1-over par 73, a stroke behind Stephen J. Molis, a member at Pocasset, the host course.

Vincent Bucci of Old Sandwich GC in Plymouth fashioned a 75 to earn a berth. Dan Tully and Andrew Harvey, who play out of Olde Scotland Links in Bridgewater, each shot a 78 to tie for the fifth and final tournament berth.

Harney was 'the man'

Massachusetts golf lost a legend last week with the passing of Paul Harney, a true champion in every sense of the word. The five-time Massachusetts Open Championship winner died Aug. 24 following a long illness.

Harney won seven times on the PGA Tour and was the first inductee into the New England PGA Hall of Fame in 1995. He played full-time on the PGA Tour from 1955 to 1963. He was named Golf Digest magazine's "Most Improved Golfer" in 1957 after back-to-back victories at the Carling Open and Labatt Open. He fulfilled a promise he made to his new bride, Patti, when they married in 1957, that when their first child started school, he would take a club professional position and play the PGA TOUR part-time.

After a decade as head pro at Pleasant Valley, Harney moved to Cape Cod to establish and run Paul Harney Golf Club in East Falmouth, a par 61 course he had purchased in 1965 and is still operated by his family.

Looking for a job?

Looking for a job in the world of golf? The Golf Course Superintendents Association of New England is currently seeking candidates for the position of Association Manager.

This position requires someone who is motivated and passionate about the association and the success of its members. Part of this is supporting the Board of Director's work, which includes lobbying efforts, relationships with allied associations in golf and green industries, scholarship and benevolent efforts, website operation, event planning, and public relations.

The association's goal is to be the go to organization when it comes to local golf, the environment, or when clubs are looking for employment help.

The position of association manager also provides personal administrative support to the GCSANE Board of Directors. The position should project a professional image through in-person and phone interaction. This position will work out of their Norton office.

They are looking for someone with a college degree and/or five to seven years of management experience. They must have excellent communication skills, both written and oral; strong presentation skills, be computer literate, ability to manage website.

Richardson took over for a year. Those are both special talents. Will was one of the best in the state. Both were game changers. We rode Sam last year."

Richardson had experience playing with the JV when he took over for the varsity.

This season, Willis will be looking at a couple of options in net.

"We have two good options," he said. "Pat Federle has been fantastic in the pre-season. He's a tall, athletic freshman. We also have a junior, Devon Kennedy who played JV last year and has a lot of experience. It has been spirited competition."

Willis said the final choice could be settling in on one goalie, or a rotation.

"I haven't decided yet," he said. "I'm not opposed to using whoever has the hot hand. The nice thing about those two is that they're also both good strikers. Whoever doesn't win the goalkeeper job will get time as a striker."

With six starters gone from last year's team, Willis has more than just the net to fill.

"We'll be young," he said. "We may be starting three freshmen. We have three freshmen who have shown they're the real deal."

There is still experience, and star quality experience at that.

Senior captain Jonah Adkins, a Super-Teamer, South Shore League All-Star and All-State player is back to run the middle.

"Jonah is a special talent, our centerpiece" Willis said. "He sees what's going on and dominates possession and distributes. The only trouble we have is that sometimes the kids stand and watch him. They expect him to score, but they should be getting into position to score themselves."

Four-year player Jamie Timothy is another senior captain.

"We're looking for a scoring punch from Jamie," Willis said. "We're hoping he'll step up and put the ball in the net."

The team's strikers are junior Nick Tangherlini and senior Patrick MacCormack.

"Pat came off the bench last year and played well," Willis said. "He'll start up fromt with Nick."

On the outside, there is also some experience.

"Jamie Timothy is outside and we have a skilled freshman Sam Morris with him," Willis said. "Senior Tucker Oddliefson will be between them."

On the inside, Cohasset lost playoff hero Drew Cobin and Mike Monaco, but still have Adkins.

"Mike Monaco was the perfect complement to Jonah," Willis said. "Now we'll have Nick Brown in there. He's been playing varsity since freshmen year. He was up front last year, but now he's off in the midfield. Brendan Kennedy is the other in the trio."

Sophomore Ryan McKeon brings a strong awareness to the field and Joe Buckley, the team's biggest player and a starter last year as a freshman will also be in the middle.

"Joe Buckley was one of the best defenders in the league as a freshmen," Willis said. "He'll be an anchor in the middle."

Defensively, there are some departed players, but again, Willis feels he has talent to step up in those spots.

"Anthony Nahill stepped in and played some defense as a sub last year," he said. "Freshman Teddy Craven is taking his brother Travers' spot. Travers was the anchor of the defense last year. He leaves and his brother takes over. Teddy played some varsity as an eighth grader. He's already one of our on-field leaders."

While last year was a great one, Willis said this season's team is focused on their own legacy.

"We're talking a lot about this year," he said. "There are a good chunk of kids who went to the South Finals last year. They've seen it, but are very conscious that this is not last year. They're looking forward to making a run at the South Shore League title and getting past the teams we couldn't beat last year (Scituate and Norwell). They also want to beat East Bridgewater."

East Bridgewater beat the Skippers last year, potentially keeping them from a league title.

This year's goals are set.

"First we want to qualify for the tournament, then we'd like to win a league title and then make a run in the tournament," Willis said. "It's fun. We have a really good group of young kids who have been working hard."

Cohasset opens Tuesday (Sept. 6) at Abington and hosts Carver Thursday and travels to Scituate Friday for a boys-girls twin bill at Scituate.

You can also call 781-837-4577.

With youth sports, I do ask a few simple things to keep things running smoothly over here.

First, please remember, space can get tight, so try to keep stories simple.

Tell us who played well, who made the big plays and scored the big goal or touchdown. That's what we're looking for.

We don't need play-by-play for every play of the game, who lined up for the snap or the coin toss. You don't have to be a professional writer. We can clean things up.

Get as many names in there as you can, or feel free to spread things out and get a few kids in one week and a few the next.

After three or four stories, everyone has had their name in the paper. It works out well.

When I was a PR director for Little League, that is what I asked of my coaches, and myself.

Another request, and these are requests and a bit of a writing primer (it is easier than you'd think), please no nicknames for the kids, unless of course that is the name a player uses all the time. They'll probably be edited and cut, unless there's something hilarious there.

When you write a story, get the final score right at the top. If you look at a Patriots or Red Sox game story, you'll see that's how it's done. Also, scores are always 1-0, or 5-2.

Try to stay away from 1 to 0 or 5 to 2, and it's always winner first. Teams don't lose 3-6.

If you're working on football, please just write the word touchdown or field goal, first down, quarterback.

Finally, please, please don't compare an 8-year old football player to Tom Brady, or really any professional.

Give them a few years when they're in the pros and we can talk. If you can find stats of a professional player at the same age as your kid and they match up, well that would be pretty cool, send it.

Most importantly, feel free to send that stuff. It is appreciated more than you can know.

That goes for all levels of sports, kids, middle school, Junior Varsity, Varsity.

You don't have to be a parent to send things along.

High school coaches or players, a team spokesman, everyone is welcome.

High school players or fans, if you're looking for extra credit and enjoy writing, we might be able to work something out.

Stories can also be submitted online at www.wickedlocal.com.

If you want to write something up or send a photo and still have questions on how to write, please get in touch with me. If you do send us writeups, let me know who wrote the story if you want to be recognized for writing or who took a photo. If you did the work, you get the credit!

I'm always glad to help.

Here's to having a great fall season.

P.S., if you still have summer stuff you'd like to see in the paper, there's still plenty of time.

Getting ready for new school year

A look inside Deer Hill, Osgood

Staff photos
by Robin Chan

Deer Hill art teacher Ann Berman opens up a package of fresh paper for her students while she gets ready for her 19th year.

Osgood School art teacher Betsy Ogden decorates her boards while getting ready for the new school year. She has been at the Osgood since 1994.

Instructional technology teacher Cassandra O'Brien, fourth-grade teacher Jennifer Clark, third-grade teacher Maggie Smith, and third-grade teacher Emily Gibbons try to coordinate their schedules for the new school year.

Fourth grade special education teacher Danielle Kent of the Deer Hill School organizes a shelf in her classroom that she will be sharing with Kerri Foley. Danielle is in her second year at Deer Hill.

School psychologist Meredith Whalen helps first-grade teacher Jennifer McPhillips put away her reading textbooks while she gets ready for the new year at the Osgood School.

Second-grade teacher Stephanie DeLeo takes out new workbooks for the math curriculum while getting her classroom ready at the Osgood School on Wednesday.

Fifth grade special education teacher Kerri Foley unloads supplies for her classroom while getting ready for the new school year at the Deer Hill School.

New Deer Hill music teacher Kristen Lewis gets her classroom ready for the new school year.

Second-grade teacher Barbara Wells drops off books for her coworker Stephanie DeLeo while they get their classrooms ready.

Miss Laura Keating puts away books and papers while getting her classroom ready for the new year at the Osgood School. The first-grade teacher has been in the Cohasset school system since 1997.

Deer Hill custodian Steve Flaherty unloads books for teachers while helping them get ready for the new year on Wednesday.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Throwing a clambake for Dolly Parton

1978 stands out in Parker Avenue's Bob Pattison's memory. It was the year that Dolly Parton entertained Cohasset at the South Shore Music Circus. But even more importantly, it was the year that Bob threw a clambake for her and her entourage at the Music Circus.

He was given permission to use the rear dressing rooms as the location. The Circus's props were moved out of the way, tables were set up, help was arranged and before you knew it, the festivities were underway. Bob was the chef, his ingredients were fresh from the ocean, and menu was set.

Share with us — In celebration of the 60th anniversary of the South Shore Music Circus an exhibit at the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building captures 60 years of musical shows. Included in the exhibit are photographs, playbills, artifacts and recollections from patrons and friends of the Music Circus.

Did you work at the South Shore Music Circus and/or have encounters with the stars? We invite you to share your thoughts with us. Please call us at 781-383-1434 and also join us on the evening of Saturday, September 10th for a celebration wrapping up the 60th season.

Support —Please consider supporting the Cohasset Historical Society.

You tax-deductible donation can be sent to: Cohasset Historical Society, PO Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. All donations are greatly appreciated.

Celebrate 60 years of the Music Circus

Join friends and members of the Cohasset Historical Society at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., to celebrate the South Music Circus' 60th season under the big tent and the Cohasset Historical Society's latest exhibit, "One Night Only." This special event will begin at 6 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 10, to give guests a 'One Night Only' opportunity to view the exhibit before it closes at the end of September.

The exhibit will highlight 60 seasons of South Shore Music memorabilia. From concert and box office posters, to programs and ticket stubs, to a wide range of photos, the exhibit spans six decades of big tent entertainment in Cohasset that has included concerts, large scale theatrical productions, comedians and entertainers from across the spectrum. Spread throughout the two main rooms of the Pratt Building, the collection of Music Circus items is supplemented by textiles and collection pieces from the Historical Society's 23,000-piece archive.

Tickets are $60 each and proceeds will support the Cohasset Historical Society's programming, exhibitions and stewardship of Cohasset's history. Guests will enjoy cocktails and hors d'oeuvres while viewing the exhibit, touring the Historical Society, and gaining a better understanding of the work the Historical Society conducts to preserve the history of Cohasset.

For more information or to purchase tickets, call 781-383-1434.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR WEEK OF SEPT. 12, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mars, your ruling planet, helps you deal with career challenges in a way that reflects some of your own hidden strengths. This impresses some important decision-makers.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your strong Bovine will, combined with your romantic nature (you are ruled by Venus), helps turn a romance with a potential for problems into one with more-positive possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Mercury's influence creates some unsettling moments, but nothing that you can't live with. You'll soon learn more about that major change that is about to be revealed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Opportunities for you are like the phases of the Moon: constantly appearing and reappearing. So, cheer up. The opportunity you think you let slip by will be replaced by another.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An opportunity that you hoped would open up for you remains closed. Stop wasting time scratching at it. Something else you'll like will soon make itself apparent and accessible.

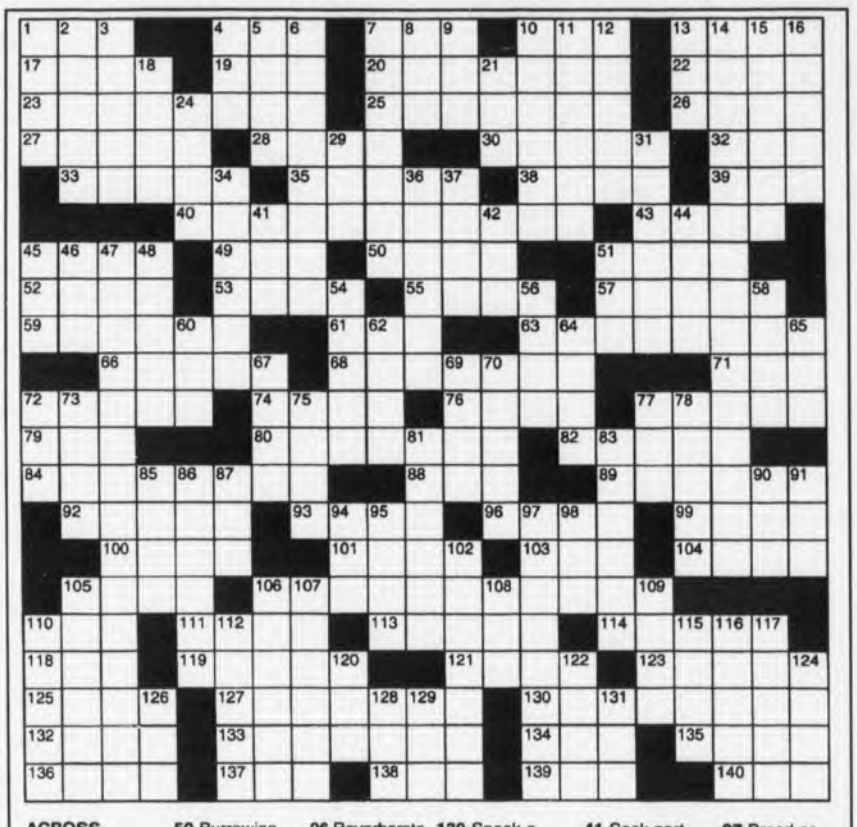
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. You'll soon hear some positive feedback for all the hard work you recently put into a project. A Pisces could soon swim into your personal life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone whose friendship you felt you had to write off will try to revive it. What you do is up to you. But don't do it without giving it considerable thought.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A job-related plan might need to be reworked to allow for changes. Lucky for you that Saturn remains a strong influence that can help you focus on getting it done right.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time to move into areas of self-discovery. You might be surprised about who you really are and how you really relate to those around you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Expect to confront someone who will make an unwelcome request. Stand by your resolve to do the right thing no matter what "persuasion" might be offered.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A friendly competition could become more contentious than you expected. Take time out to discuss the reasons behind this unexpected change, and act accordingly.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You have a wonderful mind for solving mysteries, so you should feel confident about solving the one developing very close to you. An unlikely source offers help.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a great host or hostess. You love being with people, and you're very good about planning all sorts of social events that bring folks together.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

As the years go by, this question almost always surfaces: what were you doing when the news broke? We recall, as a reporter in 1991, going to a VFW post on the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor and asking the patrons there where they were when they heard the news about Japan attacking Pearl Harbor.

Most of us recall where we were and what we were doing when the planes crashed into the twin towers of the World Trade Center on 9/11. Those memories and the news that followed about the Pentagon and United Flight 93 are forever seared into our minds.

Common ground in Cohasset

Clergy and public safety come together

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Wall Street Journal has reported that, at New York City's 10th anniversary ceremony commemorating the terrorist attacks of 9/11, clergy members – from any religion – will not be in attendance. Mayor Bloomberg's controversial decision has caused a public outcry not just in the city, but all over the nation.

This is not the case in Cohasset. The town has held a

Town prepared for emergency

By Erin Dale

Cohasset might be a small town, but it's got big plans in place if disaster should strike. In the wake of 9/11, cities and towns across the country were forced to standardize their emergency response plans and modernize their facilities. Cohasset was no different, said Glenn Pratt, deputy director of Emergency Management.

"Since 9/11, homeland security and FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) really developed, leading to huge standardizations across the country at every emergency agency," said Pratt, who has served as deputy director for the past nine years. "FEMA requires all towns to have emergency plans; it's a critical infrastructure."

Cohasset has a community emergency response team (CERT) in place and is in compliance with state and federal requirements, said

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE? By Mary Ford / mford@wickedlocal.com

Greenbush is 'whistle-free' zone

EXTRA in YOUR MARINER

BACKGROUND
As the Greenbush Project was passing through the environmental review process, the Federal Railroad Administration was concurrently considering new rules to permit the establishment of "quiet zones." Some years earlier, following a tragic accident in Illinois where a train struck a school bus at a grade crossing, Congress adopted a law requiring the whistle to blow at every crossing in the nation unless the FRA adopted rules to insure safety in the absence of such a requirement.

HOW
Under the rules ultimately promulgated, a "quiet zone" could only be established if each town through which an existing line passed agreed to bear the cost of installing approved safety measures (such as median barriers or 4-quadrant gates) within that town. The five towns (Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Braintree and Weymouth) were fortunate that since Greenbush was a "new" line in the eyes of the FRA, the project proponent (i.e., the MBTA) would have to bear the cost of such measures. For technical and political reasons, the MBTA asked the towns to jointly petition for a single "quiet zone" extending along the entire Greenbush line. The joint proposal was one of the first approved by the FRA under the new procedure.

SAFETY MEASURES
Supplemental safety measures (which cost some $80 million) that, authorities believe, are as effective as a train whistle had to be put in place at grade crossings for the FRR to consider the whistle-waiver. Those safety enhancements included:
- Construction of four, grade separation projects (tunnels, bridges) eliminating eight grade crossings
- Closing seven additional grade crossings
- Installing four-quadrant gates with presence detection or curbed medians at the 23 remaining grade crossings

WHISTLES
All Greenbush trains are equipped with whistles that the engineers can use at their discretion. In other words, if an engineer sees someone or a vehicle on or near the tracks, he or she will sound the whistle.

WHY
Establishment of a whistle ban was an important consideration for environmental reviewing agencies, such as the Army Corps of Engineers, who wanted to "mitigate" adverse impacts of the Greenbush Project.
Much of the line in Hingham cuts through a National Register Historic District, which is entitled to special protection. The MBTA realized early on that there would not be a permit issued for the project if train horns blared. In other words, the impact on the historic district that includes dozens of antique homes just feet from the tracks would be too great to allow horns.

"No train horn" signs are located at grade crossings along the Greenbush line. PHOTO/MARY FORD

NEWS ALERT

Mosquito Control issues advisory

Mosquitoes will continue their search for blood meals until the first hard frost, which is when temperatures fall below 28° Fahrenheit for a few hours.

At the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project it is understood that the "psychological" end of summer has arrived for many people, Labor Day has passed, students are back in school and many people are pulling boats from their moorings, etc. However, the mosquitoes are not yet ready to leave people alone. They will continue their search for blood meals until the first hard frost, which is when temperatures fall below 28° Fahrenheit for a few hours.

Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project urges people to continue to take precautions by draining standing water on their property, including old tires; limiting exposure at times when mosquitoes are most active, dawn and dusk; by using EPA approved repellants, and to consider wearing clothing that will reduce the potential for being bitten by a mosquito.

Thayer takes on leadership role at vo-tech

Named vice-chairman of regional school committee

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

One of Cohasset's own was recently awarded a big honor on the regional level. In July, Kenneth "Kenny" Thayer of the Highway Department was elected Vice-Chairman of the South Shore Regional School Committee, the governing body of the South Shore Vocational High School in Hanover. Thayer has served as a committee member since 2008; he also spent 10 years on the advisory board for the automotive program.

Thayer calls the appointment "a big honor," saying he's always been "ecstatic about the school."

"It's one of the oldest trade schools in the state," Thayer said of the vo-tech. "The school itself is unbelievable — the administration, teachers and students are fantastic. The students get a good education and a good trade when they come out."

Thayer, who is a mechanic by trade, added that he would like to see more kids give trade school a try.

It's his passion and enthusiasm for the school that made Thayer a natural choice for vice-chairman, said Thomas J. Hickey, the vo-tech's Superintendent and Director.

"Kenny's involvement has been invaluable," Hickey said. When Thayer was presented with the "opportunity to take on a leadership role," the Superintendent said that Thayer took it "very seriously."

"He's passionate about the school and its mission, and in letting people know about vo-tech," said Hickey. "Kenny was talking about the school and speaking with passion before taking on this leadership role.

"He knows how the school operates and has seen students grow, and seen students win state and national awards," Hickey added. "He's a great representative [on the school committee] for Cohasset."

Eight South Shore towns, including Cohasset, Hanover and Scituate, have representatives on the South Shore Regional School Committee. Thayer has been Cohasset's rep since 2008. Although his duties are expanding with this new appointment, his involvement in the school will largely remain the same. In addition to attending monthly meetings and supporting the committee's chairman, John T. Manning of Scituate, Thayer will also take part in three subcommittees. If the chairman is ever absent, Thayer will also run the committee meetings.

This doesn't seem like a challenge to Thayer, who says he is "up there all the time."

"I have a good rapport with the kids," he said, adding that the students like to see his drag racing car.

Thayer "is a car enthusiast," said Hickey, which the Superintendent believes is an asset the new vice-chairman brings to the role.

"Overall, he's passionate about it and makes a great rep," Hickey said. "I'm happy to work with him."

"It's a great place," Thayer concluded of vo-tech. "I'm honored to be on the board and very flattered as vice-chairman."

About vo-tech

- Cohasset belongs to the South Shore Regional School District, which governs the South Shore Vocational Technical High School in Hanover.
- Vo-tech draws from eight towns on the South Shore including Abington, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate, Whitman and Cohasset.
- Vo-tech maintains the mission of providing two educational avenues for students in one, integrated high school experience. The school endeavors to teach relevant and challenging technical and academic curricula which match students' post-secondary goals and provide them with the skills and experiences to help them grow socially and professionally.
- Technical programs include: electronics, drafting, health careers, computer information technology, automotive, carpentry, graphic communications, auto body, culinary arts, cosmetology, precision machine technology, metal fabrication and welding, heating, ventilation, air conditioning and refrigeration, and carpentry. Students who complete the technical coursework receive a technical performance certificate, proving competency in a trade.
- Each member town's contribution to vo-tech varies based on how many students from that town attend the school.

POLICE BEAT

Bridesmaid cuts foot after being pushed into pool

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police were called to the Red Lion Inn at 10:51 p.m. on Sunday (Sept. 4) on a report of a disturbance in the pool area during a wedding reception. Investigation revealed an intoxicated guest had pushed one of the bridesmaids, a 24-year-old Marshfield woman, into the pool; when she stepped out she cut her foot badly on some broken glass, police said. Complicating the matter, the bride walked by the area where the bridesmaid had cut her foot and the blood got onto her wedding dress, police said. The ambulance had to be called for the bridesmaid, who did not know the man who pushed her, police said.

Summonsed

At 9:52 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 29), police responded to a two-car accident near the intersection of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Beechwood Street.

Police said a 25-year-old Marshfield man, operating a 1998 Toyota Camry, failed to yield when he pulled out of Leo's Gulf to make a left onto 3A to head south. He pulled in front of a 2008 Pontiac Vibe, operated by a 68-year-old Marshfield woman, who was traveling north.

Both vehicles were towed and both drivers were transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said. The Marshfield man is being summonsed to court on the charges of operating after license suspension and failure to yield.

Larceny

A 50-year-old Cohasset woman, who had hired a HVAC contractor to have $70,000 in work done on her home reported to police that she believes the contractor stole items after she fired him for shoddy workmanship.

She believes at some point he returned to her house and took a boiler and hot water storage tank that he had installed, along with pieces of copper piping. The items were taken from the basement attached to her garage.

Police attempted to talk to the contractor, who referred them to his lawyer. Police said he could potentially be facing charges of breaking and entering and larceny from a building. The woman told police she had paid the contractor $50,000 before letting him go.

Fraud

A 68-year-old Hull grandmother reported to police last week that she believes her 27-year-old grandson, also from Hull, stole two of her checks, forged her signature, and cashed them for $200 and $190, respectively. Police have copies of the checks that were cashed in Cohasset. The matter is under investigation.

MV crash

At 9:57 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 31), police responded to a two-car accident in Cohasset Village. Police said a 52-year-old Hull woman, operating a 1999 Mercury Grand Marquis on South Main Street headed toward Scituate, attempted to make an illegal turn into an angled parking space in front of Tedeschi's when she hit a 2003 Honda CRV, operated by a 20-year-old Andover man. Police said he was backing out of a spot when the accident occurred. There were no injuries and neither vehicle had to be towed. The Hull woman was cited for making an illegal left-hand turn, police said.

Dog scratch

As is the policy with the Post Office, a letter carrier reported being scratched by a three-year-old cocker spaniel last week while delivering mail on Linden Drive. Police said a child opened the door to the home and the black and white dog jumped on the letter carrier, scratching him. He declined medical attention. The dog was up-to-date on its shots, police said.

Altercation

Police responded to a reported altercation at a business in Shaw's Plaza involving a dispute over pay. Police said the boyfriend of a 24-year-old North Easton woman got into an argument with a 30-year-old Malden man over failure to pay her wages. The Malden man owns a cleaning company that was stripping the floors in the business. The woman claims she is owned $1200.

House egged

A resident of Linden Drive wanted it logged that his house was egged by a group of teens who drove by heading toward Jerusalem Road last Thursday (Sept. 1) at about 10:30 p.m. He cleaned the egg off but wanted the incident noted.

Larceny

A 73-year-old Cohasset man who had returned from vacation with his family reported that his $800, 50-inch Samsung Plasma TV had been stolen along with a Magnavox DVD player valued at $100. The resident provided the name of a potential suspect and police are investigating.

Engine

A 45-year-old Cohasset man reported last week that on Aug. 26 he was removing his 20-foot skiff from the harbor in preparation for Hurricane Irene when he noticed a couple of bolts missing. He told police it appeared someone had tried to steal his 20-horsepower Mercury engine.

Hit & Run

A 55-year-old Nichols Road woman reported her signpost and potted plants, valued at $300, had been damaged in a hit-and-run accident last Sunday (Sept. 4). She conducted her own investigation and determined it was a local college student who is now off to college out-of-state. She was not interested in pursuing charges but wanted it logged, police said.

Expired registration

At 9:38 p.m. on Sunday (Sept. 4), police pulled over a 1999 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 53-year-old Marshfield man, with expired registration. The Jeep was towed and the operator was issued a $100 fine.

Tolman MDA telethon party a big success!

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

The 35th Annual Tolman MDA Telethon Party, which raises money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association without even a phone call, drew a large crowd.

Over the years, this Hingham event has coincided with the annual Jerry Lewis MDA telethon, which was scaled back this year. The Tolman event, however, continued in its usual 24-hour format.

"We had the biggest crowd ever with hundreds stopping by over the [Labor Day] weekend," Jay Tolman said Tuesday morning, "although from a fundraising standpoint, the numbers were down a little from last year. We are currently at $376,800 with more money coming in – enough to hit the $500,000 mark [raised through the Hingham event throughout its history] – a great 35th anniversary present!"

This year's goal is $420,000. Rather than making phone calls asking people for donations, the Hingham party raises money for the local MDA chapter through individuals collecting money from supporters; the famous fish bowl, into which partygoers drop their donations; raffles made possible through generous donations from the local community; and contributions sent by mail or made online.

For those who missed this year's event but would like contribute to the cause, donations may be mailed to: MDA Telethon, c/o Jay Tolman, 3 Forest Circle, Cohasset, MA 02025 or made online at: tolman-telethon.com. Contributions of any size are appreciated.

"Once again our volunteers made it happen!" Tolman said. "Twenty-four hours' worth of activities takes a long time to coordinate. They just know what to do, when to do it, and all at the right time. They are the best!"

Tolman expressed special thanks to Congregation Sha'aray Shalom for its generous support again this year – "for being our Telethon home and welcoming the community to participate in our 35th anniversary MDA event."

But Tolman's biggest thanks goes to his family – his father, John, who has been part of the effort all along, working tirelessly year after year and "continuing to amaze us all," Tolman said. "Thanks, too, to our kids, Chloe, Jack, and Charlie -- who join in every year to help fight muscular dystrophy and have gotten their friends involved, resulting in new ideas to help raise more money – and to my sister Ellen who is always there to help no matter what."

Linda Sheehy, 9, gets help with a beverage from her 13-year-old sister Shannon on Sunday at the MDA Telethon party.

"Once again our volunteers made it happen!"
Jay Tolman

Jay's wife, Jodi, also plays a key role, working hard to make the event a success. "We had our first kiss at our Telethon event many years ago, and the next year we got engaged at the Telethon," Tolman recalls with a smile. "Each year she puts up with me running around like a crazy person as we gear up for the party!"

This year Jodi put together an amazing scrapbook detailing the telethon party's history and containing comments from supporters about the past 35 years, which meant a lot to Jay. "Jodi has been such a big part of our Telethon journey even before we got married and adds so much to the event because she is such a caring, loving person," Tolman said.

"What can I say except that I'm a lucky man to have the support of my fantastic family and friends as we continue to help the fight against muscular dystrophy."

The event features games, prizes, raffles, food, music, a giant Labor Day cookout, and many children's activities, including pony rides, clowns, balloon animals, and face-painting – a fun-filled time for all while raising money for a good cause.

UNITED WATER SALUTES OUR EMPLOYEES FOR EXTRAORDINARY EFFORTS DURING HURRICANE IRENE.

Widespread flooding and power disruptions caused by the recent Hurricane/Tropical Storm Irene made it a challenge to keep vital water and wastewater services functioning. At United Water, our priorities are focused on ensuring the health and safety of employees, customers and clients while protecting critical infrastructure and the environment.

We thank our employees who performed superbly around the clock before, during and after the storm to keep these essential services available for our customers. We also appreciate the extra efforts of emergency management, police, fire and rescue services personnel for their hard work and support under extremely difficult conditions.
In instances where temporary curtailment could not be prevented, we also thank our customers for their patience and understanding.

We honor all United Water employees who make every effort to provide water and wastewater services without interruption on a 24-hour, seven-days-a-week basis throughout the year. The response to Hurricane Irene displayed the extraordinary dedication and commitment of our employees to make seamless service a reality.

Pratt. Cohasset's committee consists of around 20 people, including Pratt, the police and fire chiefs, various town department heads and the Board of Health.

During events like last December's blizzard or last week's tropical storm, the emergency management team "gets to be the quarterback," Pratt explained, acting as the liaison between local police and fire and state and federal emergency response groups like MEMA (Mass. Emergency Management Agency) and FEMA.

The emergency planning committee "had meetings just before the [tropical] storm and did exercises on hurricane preparedness," said Pratt. "Little did we know that the next weekend, we'd have to do it."

Currently, the committee meets in a command center located under the Deer Hill School, but the space is still awaiting completion. Pratt said the subject will come up at October's special Town Meeting, when the committee plans to ask for funding to complete the structure. The CERT did receive a $3,500 grant from MEMA, but additional grants will be required to cover the estimated $60,000-75,000 cost of completing the center.

The space, said Pratt, is "usable" at the moment, but the CERT can't fully operate without the proper communications connected. Pratt said the center still needs cellular antennas, radio and cable redundancies, wireless internet and phone connections to both the police station and the new regional dispatch center in Hingham.

A fully functional command center would have come in handy during Irene, when CERT members gathered in the meeting room in the police station for briefings, Pratt said. At one point, someone walked in with hand grenades, diverting any further storm discussion at the time. During the storm's aftermath, the phones went out in the police station; the CERT then had to meet up at the DPW, said Pratt.

While the CERT did a commendable job during and after Irene, Pratt explained that it was no easy feat.

"The police station meeting room is small," he said. "On Tuesday night when we were going door to door, there was a lot of activity and no place to plan. With different situations going on, decisions have to be made every minute. Things change, surprises come up — that's why you need the command group."

Pratt believes that Cohasset "is as prepared as any other small town" for a possible disaster. "But we've got to get going on the CERT program and certify volunteers trained in first response." What the current CERT needs is "manpower," Pratt said. "We'd like to have 30 to 40 people trained, and have that done by the end of the year."

Part of the problem the CERT encounters is securing all the funding needed to train volunteers.

"We have to pay for trainees and equipment," Pratt explained.

Despite the lack of a completed command center, Pratt felt that the town's emergency and public safety teams did a "tremendous" job aiding residents during the tropical storm. He also commended Town Manager Mike Coughlin for his "high-energy" approach to the event. Together, the emergency and public safety teams were able to assist residents while they waited to regain electricity. Programs like the ConnectCTY phone service and VENS (visual emergency notification system) allowed them to reach out to locals and learn who was in need of assistance.

While these programs have proven helpful, Pratt pointed out a few problems. ConnectCTY is useless in areas where phone service has been knocked out along with power. And since 82 people have enrolled in the VENS program, it took two officers all of Sunday to check on each one of them. While these old-school approaches seem to work for the time being, Pratt is hopeful that having a more high-tech communications center will speed up the emergency response process.

Pratt is hopeful that funding will come through and that the CERT command center will soon be completed.

"If we get the money, the center could be done at the end of the year," he said. "I think this is the time; this is emergency management's year."

NEWS UPDATE

Project manager hired for Willcutt Commons

The Social Service League announced recently that it has hired KVAssociates Inc. as the owner's project management firm to oversee the design and construction of the proposed senior center at Willcutt Commons. Willcutt Commons will be an approximately 18,000 square foot senior center located off (proposed for) Sohier Street in Cohasset.

"We are excited to have reached this early benchmark in the process to build Willcutt Commons for the Town of Cohasset," said Marita Carpenter president of the Social Service League. "The appointment of KVA is the first critical step in what we believe will be a seamless and successful project that will benefit the community and preserve the legacy of Cohasset as a community that stands with its neighbors."

One of three firms interviewed, KVA was selected for their extensive experience working with both the public and private sector. KVA representatives will play an integral role in making certain that the construction of Willcutt Commons adheres to all project goals. KVA's recent projects have included Wellesley Senior Center, Duxbury Model Middle/High School, The Hemingway Theatre for the Boston Conservatory and the Cape Ann Historical Museum.

KVA's project director H. Lee Keller said "KVA is excited to be a part of the team that will provide a new welcoming amenity with numerous programs for the senior residents of Cohasset. Like many comparable facilities in other South Shore towns, Willcutt Commons will be like a home away from home."

ONE OF BEST DISTRICTS IN STATE

Cohasset schools earn top marks

Boston magazine named Cohasset as the 13th best public school district in Massachusetts in their September 2011 issue.

Boston magazine crunched the numbers in a ranking of the best public school districts and biggest values in the area. Rankings were based on data gathered from consulting school officials and websites, as well as the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Determining factors of the district rankings includes test scores from elementary, middle and high schools in 135 districts, per pupil spending, student to teacher ratio, number of AP classes, graduation rate, percent of students who continue to college, as well as the amount of sports teams and clubs.

George Recck, director of the Math Resource Center at Babson College, calculated the mean scores for each category and then ranked the districts based on a weighted average of each school data point's difference from the mean.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. I would like to start this week's column by congratulating all children and teens who started school this past week and I hope that all the grown-ups in your lives made it through the first few days with very few tears. I wish all of you a very successful and happy school year. I am hoping that we see some warm and dry weather in the upcoming week for us all.

This Sunday, September 11, 2011 marks the 10th anniversary of a horrible act of terrorism that is so etched in our minds. Please make sure to take the time to stop and remember all of those who were injured and those who lost their lives and also, to remember all of the brave men and women who worked to reach as many as they could. To all the families who lost loved ones, prayers and thoughts are sent to you all.

Youth leader

Derek Benson, a sophomore at Cohasset High School, was selected to attend the 10-day National Youth Leadership Forum in Medicine at Babson College this summer. The program introduces students to a variety of concepts in public health, medical ethics, research and general practice, including site visits to Boston teaching hospital medical facilities and clinics.

As a NYLF Scholar, Derek engaged in a simulation using problem-based learning, an educational method in which students are presented a fictional patient's case history to diagnose and develop a treatment plan for the patient. The NYLF forum creates a virtual classroom with hospitals, clinical facilities and healthcare professionals. As students shadow physicians and other key personnel, they have the opportunity to gain a behind-the-scenes perspective on a medical career.

Derek – you have made Cohasset proud! This is wonderful news!

Rectory school

I would like congratulate the following Cohasset student William Marsden who recently graduated from The Rectory School, a junior prep school located in Pomfret, Conn. Will, along with his brother Max, were members the last three years on the hockey and tennis teams where they both were top players. He and his brother Max, who finished the 8th grade, will both be attending The Portsmouth Abbey School in Portsmouth, R.I. in September.

This was great news to receive and you have family and friends who are so proud of you all, nice job!

Auditions

Looking for a fun way to get up on the stage? Well, here is your chance. Cohasset Dramatic Club auditions will take place Sept. 11 and 12 for the first production of its 90th season. CDC will present "The Sisters Rosensweig" by Wendy Wasserstein, directed by William Gardiner, from Nov. 4 through 13, on Fridays and Saturdays, at 7:30 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m. Winner of the 1993 Outer Critics Circle Award for Best Broadway Play, "The Sisters Rosensweig" is a portrait of three very different sisters reuniting in London after a lengthy separation, for the eldest sister, Sara's, birthday. The reunion is challenged by Sara's teenage daughter, who brings perspective to the banter from a new generation of Rosensweig. The dialogue between the ladies about their lifelong "family issues" is only slightly upstaged by the comedic turns of the four male characters in this comedy, who ultimately bring an unexpected outcome to the family dynamic.

Derek Benson was selected to attend the 10-day National Youth Leadership Forum in Medicine at Babson College this summer. COURTESY PHOTO

Auditions will take place at 7 p.m., on Sept. 11 and 12, with callbacks at 7 p.m., on Sept. 13, at Town Hall.. Readings will be from the script, and are currently posted on CDC's website, along with detailed character descriptions for each of the eight characters. Go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org for all the details.

For more information, email info@cohassetdramaticclub.org. Prop masters, costumers, set builders, painters, ushers, concessions, ticket office assistance and more are needed, and working behind the scenes is an excellent way to see the process come together, so don't be shy, get involved!

'Citizen Kane'

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will continue its monthly series of movies on Friday Sept. 16th. The feature this month is Citizen Kane which some believe is one of the best movies ever. Orson Welles plays the part of the audacious newspaper baron Charles Foster Kane, which is a thinly veiled portrait of publishing magnate William Randolph Hearst. Welles' film chronicles Kane's rise from poverty to becoming one of America's most influential men. Welles both directs and plays the part of the newspaper king. Shades of Rupert Murdock and the British Tabloid, News of the World scandal?

Come enjoy the big screen in an intimate setting, the meeting room of the Paul Pratt Library. Movie starts at 7 p.m.; There is no charge and, of course, there will be popcorn.

That's the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news for the upcoming week to me no later than Tuesday by 5 pm.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Sixty years of Music Circus memories

'One Night Only' event highlights exhibit

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Ginger Rogers graced the stage here. So did everyone from Bob Hope and Zsa Zsa Gabor to Dolly Parton and Johnny Cash. This could easily describe star-filled performances on the Great White Way or at the Hollywood Bowl, but in this case the story's all about Cohasset.

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating 60 seasons of big tent entertainment at the South Shore Music Circus with a special exhibit. Music fans and history buffs alike can gather to reminisce and fete the Music Circus at the Pratt Building on 106 Main St. this Saturday at 6 p.m.

"One Night Only" captures a bygone era of elaborate musicals and concerts featuring big-time acts and Hollywood stars. With an array of archived photographs and posters as well as specially recreated costumes from its own textile collection, the Historical Society is pulling out all the stops.

Patrons pay $60 to attend the event, the proceeds of which help the Historical Society continue to preserve the town's history.

The Music Circus began its rich performance tradition in 1951 as an outgrowth of the South Shore Players, a group of 55 thespians who performed onstage at Town Hall, said Lynne DeGiacomo, executive director of the Cohasset Historical Society.

"They wanted to move to a more permanent facility for performances, and theater-in-the-round tents were becoming popular," DeGiacomo said.

The first show was held under the tent in '51, and 60 seasons have quickly flown by. In the past, the Music Circus hosted weeklong shows, primarily Broadway musicals like Camelot and Carousel, as well as special one- or two-night concerts featuring famous headliners.

But after awhile, these elaborate musicals proved to be too costly to put on, DeGiacomo explained. "They ran every night of the week, and it took a lot of people."

These performances are immortalized in the Pratt Building exhibit, which has taken over two rooms and a corridor, offering a glimpse of a more gilded time. The Historical Society reached back into their Helen Howes Vosoff collection of theater artifacts to create the displays, said Kathy O'Malley, president of the Historical Society. Locals have also dropped off photos, newspaper clippings and memorabilia. The Society supplemented their archived photos with articles from their historic textiles collection.

"There are no real costumes from the plays [here]," said DeGiacomo. "Actors took them with them. So we created vignettes from the shows with things we've collected from the last few decades."

The Society sourced their "enormous" collection of textiles, including a Japanese kimono, 1930's men's bathing suit and a dress from the 1880's. The costumes were created by textile assistant Martha Fisher of Hull, who is working part-time at the Historical Society under a grant.

Fisher "has been instrumental in setting up the exhibit," said DeGiacomo. The textile assistant's handiwork "lends a three dimensional aspect" to the showcase, DeGiacomo said. She pointed out the Friends of the Paragon Carousel in Hull even lent a carousel horse for the exhibit.

Locals have also had a hand in personalizing the presentation.

"People who have had involvement in the Music Circus have stopped by to share how fond their memories are of going to the shows or working in them," said DeGiacomo. "A few were lead actors back in the '50s; one came in with his scrapbook."

Historical Society member Judy Sestito recalled when the Music Circus went up in the lot where she went blueberry-picking as a young girl. She grew up watching the rehearsals at the tent and went on to sell tickets for the shows.

"There are a lot of people who have stories and experiences with the South Shore Music Circus," said Linda Pratt, one of the co-chairs of the event. "We're hoping the event has them come out and share their stories."

O'Malley hopes many folks will turn out for the "opportunity to share their Music Circus experiences." She encourages those who want to attend to call ahead and make a reservation.

Saturday night's presentation also offers cocktails and hors d'oeuvres. For tickets to "One Night Only," call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434. Following Saturday's fundraiser, the exhibit will continue to be on display in the Pratt Building through the end of September.

The exhibit includes this poster and replica costume from the 1951 production of "Show Boat."

Saturday evening celebraton should not be missed

Join friends and members of the Cohasset Historical Society at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., to celebrate the South Music Circus' 60th season under the big tent and the Cohasset Historical Society's latest exhibit, "One Night Only." This special event will begin at 6 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 10, to give guests a 'One Night Only' opportunity to view the exhibit before it closes at the end of September.

The exhibit will highlight 60 seasons of South Shore Music memorabilia. From concert and box office posters, to programs and ticket stubs, to a wide range of photos, the exhibit spans six decades of big tent entertainment in Cohasset that has included concerts, large scale theatrical productions, comedians and entertainers from across the spectrum. Spread throughout the two main rooms of the Pratt Building, the collection of Music Circus items is supplemented by textiles and collection pieces from the Historical Society's 23,000-piece archive.

Tickets are $60 each and proceeds will support the Cohasset Historical Society's programming, exhibitions and stewardship of Cohasset's history. Guests will enjoy cocktails and hors d'oeuvres while viewing the exhibit, touring the Historical Society, and gaining a better understanding of the work the Historical Society conducts to preserve the history of Cohasset.

For more information or to purchase tickets, call 781-383-1434.

Cohasset Day fun is for children of all ages

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

The 4th annual Cohasset Day is in a little over a week, Sept. 18th, from 1–6 p.m. There will be something for everyone in the family to enjoy. The downtown will be closed to vehicular traffic so that all can browse the stores and shop the sidewalk tables that will be lining the streets. After strolling through the village the youngest among the crowd are encouraged to head over to the Common for some good ole' fashioned fun.

Cohasset Day is a "back to basics" afternoon for the kids including everything from a dunk tank to smaller, sweeter activities for the youngest among us, like eating a Dunkin' Donut from a string. For some of the older kids it will be smooth sailing on the duck pond filled with rowboats.

"Touch a Truck" is always a favorite with the parents and the kids. Among the touchable vehicles will be a fire engine, squad car, fire truck and an ambulance all accompanied by Cohasset's finest who will help explain each vehicles purpose to the kids. A dump truck and backhoe will also be parked for all to see and touch.

The Fine Food Galore event — an event within the overall Cohasset Day-will take place from 4-6 p.m. on South Main Street in the Village. This gastronomic aspect of Cohasset Day, includes local fare by more than 16 local eateries, and is the only event within Cohasset Day for which there is a fee. The food sampling has a cost of $10 for individuals and $25 for a family. Proceeds of Fine Food Galore will benefit Cohasset Elder Affairs and Cohasset Food Pantry. This year there are no advance sales for Fine Food Galore, tickets may be purchased on Main Street on the Day of the event.

Other Cohasset Day activities can be considered "priceless" such as the parade procession down Main Street featuring the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Decorated Bike Parade, music from the Rusty Skippers and local sports teams and groups all coming together to march and show their town pride. There will also be a special Saturday edition of the Farmer's Market and Historic Society buildings will be free and open to the public. Everyone is invited to come learn more about Cohasset's rich history.

Another main attraction for many on Sunday the 18th will be the 3rd annual Classic Car Concours. Public viewing and People's Choice Awards judging will take place after the cars cruise down Main Street along with the much anticipated Fashion Show which will feature clothes from all three of Cohasset's boutiques including Ports, Pink Tulip and Wendy's Closet.

Bells will be ringing on Cohasset Day courtesy of resident Mary Kennedy from 12:45 – 1 p.m. The beautiful music of St. Stephen's world-class carillon is one of the things that make our town so unique. Music throughout the day will include the Jackson Weatherbee Band, Aldous Collins, the Loco Locals and the Rust Skippers.

Cohasset Day is a joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Donations will be made to the Council on Elder Affairs, the Cohasset Food Pantry and the American Legion.

For the full schedule of the day's activities visit www.cohassetday.com.

Sunrise lends seniors a hand during Irene

Sunrise of Cohasset would like any seniors who are in need due to weather to call if they experience any power outages at any time of the year.

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset is no stranger to providing charity to those in need. In the wake of Hurricane Irene, Sunrise of Cohasset worked tirelessly to ensure that seniors that had lost power in their homes were still getting their proper nutrition.

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, Sunrise of Cohasset brought nearly a dozen meals to seniors at the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs who were still without power and unable to use their kitchen. James Barber and Susan Gregorio, both directors of community relations for Sunrise, said "with so many people still without power, Sunrise felt that it was necessary to work with the Council on Elder Affairs to provide meals to seniors in need."

Sunrise Senior Living also provided shelter prior to and after Irene to some families in other areas of Massachusetts. Chris Mele, executive director for Sunrise of Cohasset, says "It is a true pleasure working for an organization that is active in the community and willing to extend a helping hand to so many of the seniors in Massachusetts."

Sunrise of Cohasset continues to work with the different councils on aging to make certain that our local seniors are staying healthy and eating properly. Nutrition and hydration are essential to the health of seniors, especially late in the summer when temperatures rise and weather related issues are more probable, says Barber. Sunrise of Cohasset would like any seniors who are in need due to weather to call if they experience any power outages at any time of the year. Anticipation of storms should be monitored closely at this time of the year and as long as apartments are available, Sunrise of Cohasset would be more than happy to provide shelter and meals for seniors, says Gregorio.

Upcoming events at Holly Hill Farm

Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, upcoming events will include the following. For more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565.

The meal will include wines to complement the tapas, selected by The Weinery of North Scituate. The evening will include a silent auction of art, jewelry and wine. Tickets are $75 per person and proceeds will benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center at the farm that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Call to reserve a spot. The event will take place rain or shine.

Discover the Woods Day - Sunday, Oct. 2. There will be a 5K run at 9 a.m., a 1 mile fun run/walk at 11 a.m. and in the afternoon there will be guided nature walks all through the 130 acres of woods that abut and surround the 5 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs. There will also be a home composting workshop at 1 p.m. to learn how to make compost at home. Registration forms and more information are available at www.hollyhillfarm.org or by calling 781-383-6565. Proceeds from these events will benefit Friends of Holly Hill Farms.

Tomato contest celebrates tastes of summer

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Summer may be nearing its end, but tomato season is still going strong. This is especially apparent at the Cohasset farmer's market, where the juicy red fruit is sold in abundance week after week. During the August 25th market, the summer staple was celebrated with a tomato contest and cooking demonstration.

Awards were given to some pretty distinctive looking tomatoes.

Pat and Steve Hague of Cohasset submitted a vegetable sculpture featuring a tomato and carrots that was dubbed "most creative."

Cohasset resident Anna Abbruzzese's tomato earned the title of "most unusual." Cretinon's Farm of Kingston boasted the largest, while Cohasset resident Claire Tinory's tomato won "best all around."

Each winner was given a cash prize reward.

While tomatoes were being awarded and photographed, health coach, yoga teacher and cooking instructor Linda Storm of Scituate whipped up fresh gazpacho and sautéed kale for a hungry crowd.

"I'm getting in line," said one observer as Storm began dishing up the gazpacho.

"You can taste every vegetable in there," said Abbruzzese of the cold, tomato-based soup that Storm served up chunky like salsa. "It's delicious."

Storm said that she based the demonstration's menu on what was available at the farmer's market that day. She was especially excited about introducing folks to kale.

"I've met so many people who have never tried kale before," Storm said. Her kale dish "literally takes five minutes to make. It takes longer to dial up a pizza place and place your order than it does to cook up some kale."

Storm, who graduated from the Institute of Integration Nutrition in New York City, offers in-house cooking classes and offers free health consultations in addition to teaching yoga at USA Fitness in Cohasset, Bay Sate Athletic and Art & Soul Space, both in Scituate. This was Storm's first time doing a cooking demo at the Cohasset farmer's market. She was happy to share her cooking and health tips with the crowd, notably when it comes to eating seasonally.

"Tomatoes are my favorite this time of year," said Storm. "There's nothing like tomatoes from the garden in New England. Our season is so short here that we get them all at once, and just don't know what to do with them."

Storm's gazpacho recipe is one way to take full advantage of the abundance of tomatoes (see sidebar). And while Storm stuck to her list of ingredients, managing to source most of them from the local produce around her, she also encouraged folks to experiment.

"Feel free to substitute with whatever looks good at the market that day," Storm said. "Don't be afraid to put your own twist on things."

Gazpacho
Serves 4-6

1 cucumber seeded and halved
2 red bell peppers seeded and cored
4 plum tomatoes
1 red onion
3 cloves of garlic, minced
3 cups of tomato or vegetable juice
1 tsp of red wine vinegar
1 tsp of Worcestershire sauce
1/4 cup of extra virgin olive oil
2 TBS of fresh lime juice
Salt and pepper to taste
Cilantro or basil for garnish

Linda Storm cuts heirloom tomatoes from the Farmers Market while making her homemade gazpacho.
STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Roughly chop the cucumber, peppers, tomatoes and onion. Put each vegetable into the food processor separately and pulse until coarsely chopped.

After each vegetable is chopped, combine them in a large bowl. Add the garlic, juice, vinegar, Worcestershire, oil, like, salt and pepper.

Chill for one hour or longer.

Garnish with fresh cilantro or basil just before serving.

Sautéed kale with pine nuts and dried cranberries
Serves 6

1/4 cup of pine nuts
2 TBS of extra virgin olive oil
2 bunches of kale roughly chopped
1/2 tsp of sea salt
1/3 cup of dried cranberries

Toast pine nuts in a 325-degree oven for 5 minutes. Set aside.
Heat oil in pan over medium heat.
Add kale, salt and cranberries. Stir and cook for 5 minutes.
Turn off heat toss with pine nuts and place on a serving dish.

Cohasset Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

Proposals for community-oriented arts, humanities, and science programs are due Oct. 15.

The Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to Council spokesperson Sarah Wood Torrey, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset — including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,800 in grants. Previously funded projects include the South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common, enrichment programs for students at the Deer Hill School, and the Cohasset Dramatic Club's musical theatre productions.

LIFE AT CHS

Senior life is pretty sweet

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Eating in the upper lobby, premier parking spaces, being the oldest in the school, and having various other privileges is definitely worth the wait.

Well, here we are again. Summer has flown by and is already over and that only means one thing: school is starting up again. On Tuesday, students filed into the halls of Cohasset High School, ready to begin yet another school year. While it's hard to believe that summer is already over, this year promises to be both exciting and rewarding. With a new principal, I'm eager to see what changes will be made within the next few months. I'd like to welcome new teachers Ms. Wahle, Ms. Norton, Ms. Melia, Ms. O'Malley, Mr. Kerr, Ms. Hebert, Ms. Macalarney, and Ms. Helm to CHS!

Although I'm still not used to being a senior yet, I have to say that life on top is pretty sweet. Eating in the upper lobby, premier parking spaces, being the oldest in the school, and having various other privileges is definitely worth the wait. I hope the freshmen aren't as scared of us as we were of the seniors when we were freshman...On another note, I'm sure most seniors are already stressing out about the whole college process. Yikes...

On the first day of school, students in grades 10 through 12 had to go to an assembly while students in grade 9 were ushered into their homerooms. By 12th grade, the first day of school is pretty much routine. Teachers tell you what supplies they believe to be absolutely necessary, you struggle while trying to open your locker after two and a half months of nonuse, and you get to see a bunch of people you didn't see all summer long. After going to all five classes (instead of the usual four-a-day schedule), it felt like we had been in school for an eternity. Sitting still for six-and-a-half hours on the first day of school after summer break honestly feels like torture. The first homework assignments were rude wakeup calls that school is back in session and that means it's time to go back to reality and hit the books.

Although some may not be so thrilled about the end of summer, most of the CHS students are excited for the upcoming sports season. Preseason started up at the end of August, and fall sports are now in full swing. While at my friend's house on Oak Street earlier this week, I could hear the football players counting and yelling, enthusiastic about the start of another season. I, for one, can't wait to go to some Friday night football games! Both the boys and girls soccer teams are looking good, and the field hockey team, coming off an undefeated regular season last year, should be fun to watch. Although many people often forget about the golf and cross-country teams, they are both off to great starts as well!

Well, welcome back CHS. I know we're all upset about the end of our summer freedom, but we'll settle in soon enough...I can't wait to see what this year will bring, especially to my fellow classmates in the Class of 2012!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

GIMME SHELTER

Reese is a real lap cat

Reese, at only four months old, is already a real sweetheart. COURTESY PHOTO

Reese loves to be snuggled, so if you've been looking for a lap cat, Reese is a sweetheart. She's good with children, is gentle and well behaved. She always uses the scratching post and the litter box.

--This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Reese, an adorable four-month-old Calico kitten.

Reese loves to be snuggled, so if you've been looking for a lap cat, Reese is a sweetheart. She's good with children, is gentle and well behaved. She always uses the scratching post and the litter box. She's up to date on her shots.

If you've been looking for that special feline to share your home with, please come visit the shelter. HSAR has white, black, tan, Tiger, Calico, Tuxedo, large, small, young, old; something for everyone!

You can check Reese out on the website along with many of HSAR's other cats at: www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the Adoption Coordinator.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net.

The Shelter is offering a low cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

HSAR is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638. You'll be glad you did.

Thanks to the many people who generously donate to the HSAR cause. They couldn't do it without you.

Where we were

Cohasset community leaders share their 9/11 stories

9/11 THE DAY AMERICA CHANGED

"I was living in Washington D.C. and had just graduated from seminary the previous June. I passed the Pentagon every day, twice a day... We all remember what was going on. I was at home and got a call from my sister sounding panicked. My daughter was 11 at the time, so we went and got her out of school. It was a defining moment for her generation: she wanted to drive around the city and see what was going on. It was unbelievable — there were tanks, armored cars and soldiers on every corner. The world changed forever."

—The Reverend Margot Critchfield

"I worked in Duxbury at the time. Like most of the U.S., we watched as the first plane hit the first tower. Shortly after that, myself and 10 cops from Duxbury headed to New York. We were up there by afternoon and worked for three days. We were heading down 93 with the lights on the whole way.

"Driving into the city, we saw flashing signs that read 'New York City closed'— it was like a movie. The people in that town were so good to us while we were there; people in restaurants would stand up to eat when they saw us so could have a place to sit."

— Police Chief Mark DeLuca

"In Cohasset, a large number of people involved in the financial community knew a lot of people who lost family, friends and business colleagues. It hurts Cohasset because of those ties. On a personal note, we had a family friend who grew up here and got married; a girl in wedding with us was a stewardess on the first flight [Dianne Snyder of Westport, Mass.]. My wife, in the investment business, lost numerous friends that day. It's really not about me; this community as a whole has very close ties to what happened. Being involved in the ceremony is my way of giving something back, honoring those people who perished that day.

"We offer the memorial service in hope that it helps in some small way. We hope people who can't attend will take a moment to have thoughts or prayers for the folks who unfortunately did not survive that day. People have been affected in such a way; by doing something small, it helps keep the memory alive. I hope this will be an ongoing tradition; something at very least should do on an annual basis. It's something I think about quite often, not just on the 10th anniversary."

— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

"9/11 made a tremendous impact on me. I didn't lose anybody that day, but a lot of people in town knew people who did. It's important for us at citizens to remember the sacrifice made by the first responders and appreciate ours by honoring them and those in New York. I can't even imagine – never saw the real horror – watching that [in person], being in another office building. Just watching the news footage, I couldn't give up; I wanted the workers to find somebody. I think back to what I was doing that day; 10 years have gone by since then? Life changes so fast, but that's a good thing.

"9/11 was a wakeup call; you never know when you wake up and go out, and think life will continue on. Anything could happen to anyone on any day. It puts things in perspective. You focus on the important things in life, the people you love and care about, and let them know it."

— Karen Quigley, who has attended every Cohasset ceremony

"This is the 10th anniversary and when you look back at it, those are 3,650 days. If you had a day to remember one individual lost on that day, you still wouldn't have enough time. I lost a fraternity brother who worked as broker in the World Trade Center.

"I was working as town manager in Southbridge on 9/11 and was in a meeting with police and fire on unrelated matters. The police chief got a call from his detective lieutenant that the towers had been hit. We asked how we could help out, and one of the items [the NYPD] requested was K-9; we sent two dogs, a shepherd and a bloodhound. They stayed there the entire week. We were the first public safety personnel from Massachusetts to get into New York City.

"The public safety team from Southbridge was invited back to New York City [to be recognized for their service], and I accompanied them as town manager. I was struck by the quiet at Ground Zero. New York has a lot of hustle and bustle, but the site itself is dead quiet. The only thing I've seen like it was in Germany, at a concentration camp... It's hallowed ground."

— Town Manager Mike Coughlin

9/11 OBSERVANCES

non-denominational ceremony on the common every year on 9/11 for the past 10 years, inviting every local clergy member to participate. Each religious leader is allowed to give a brief reading during the service, which typically lasts between 15 and 30 minutes.

Normally, the event is held at 9 a.m. sharp to coincide with the time of the initial attacks. However, since 9/11 falls on a Sunday this year, the decision was made to hold the ceremony at 1 p.m. after regular church services have ended.

Both Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca mentioned that the time was changed so as not to conflict with morning worship.

"We wanted to make sure everybody was available," said Silvia. "We didn't want to interfere with church."

The Reverend Margot Critchfield of St. Stephen's recalled how, just after 9/11, "church attendance went way up.

"What a moment it was," Critchfield continued, "and what a missed opportunity. On the other hand, how wonderful that people knew church was a place they could turn to; in times of crisis, they had some place to go."

Karen Quigley of Clayspring Road, who has attended the ceremony every year, wondered if the issue of having clergy present is simply less contentious in a small town like Cohasset. "There isn't quite the same level of emotion here," she said.

Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, has helped organize the ceremony along with the fire and police chiefs each year. He explained that they like to keep the brief ceremony simple, which is why each clergy member is allowed to do a short reading. However, the inter-faith service features no "sermons or preaching," Wigmore explained.

Yet accommodating the local church leaders and parishioners seems to be in keeping with the spirit of camaraderie originally fostered in the aftereffects of 9/11.

Chief DeLuca worried that, over time, much of that solidarity has been lost.

"It's sad that, 10 years later, the camaraderie seems to be gone," DeLuca said. "Since that went on, it's dissipated; it's back to life as usual."

The Police Chief, who volunteered on 9/11/11 and was in NYC by afternoon that day, is adamant that "we should never stop" commemorating the event.

"We should always remember," DeLuca said. "Too many people lost their lives, and we still have young men and women losing their lives in Afghanistan."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who will speak during the ceremony, believes that "the spirit in which we came together out of adversity" is the most important takeaway from 9/11.

"It's fitting that this year's ceremony is on a Sunday," said Coughlin. "A lot of people will be doing their part to remember 9/11 in their place of faith."

And in Cohasset, at least, no one will be excluded from the ceremony on the common, no matter where their place of faith may be.

OUR VIEW

A decade to remember

As a society, we tend to fit life neatly into decades: the 50s, 60s, 70s and so on. We remember the politics, fashion, music, movies, TV programs, cars and other cultural icons that defined those eras.

In some decades there have been major historic events – such as the stock market crash of 1929, Pearl Harbor in 1941, the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963, and of course, Sept. 11, 2001 — that not only set the era apart but laid the foundation for events to follow.

As the years go by, this question almost always surfaces: what were you doing when the news broke? We recall, as a reporter in 1991, going to a VFW post on the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor and asking the patrons there where they were when they heard the news about Japan attacking Pearl Harbor.

Most of us recall where we were and what we were doing when the planes crashed into the twin towers of the World Trade Center on 9/11. Those memories and the news that followed about the Pentagon and United Flight 93 are forever seared into our minds.

This week, we reflected about the 10 years since 9/11 and the years following the assassination of JFK – the defining event of a very different era.

Clearly the decade following 9/11 will define a generation. Those who grew up during the early 2000s will have had their youth framed by 9/11 and the world events that followed.

If someone had asked us on Sept. 10, 2001 that there would have been two wars in the next 10 years – we might not have believed them. After all, Operation Desert Storm 10 years earlier was short in duration and the Vietnam War had been over for 25 years.

Clearly the decade following 9/11 will define a generation. Those who grew up during the early 2000s will have had their youth framed by 9/11 and the world events that followed.

We cannot help but hark back to the 1960s where many of us "baby boomers" spent our junior high, high school and college years. In the early 1960s, during the height of the Cold War, we were very much afraid of a nuclear attack. So much so that the discussion of bomb shelters was chronicled on the front pages of the Hingham Journal, one of the Cohasset Mariner's sister newspapers. (The Cohasset Mariner did not debut until 1978).

The 10 years from 1961 to 1971 were as jarring as they were historic. Youth of that era saw the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy, The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and Senator Robert Kennedy. Race riots broke out in cities across the country. Youth of the 60s saw the Vietnam War escalate from a relatively small number of American advisors to 500,000 American troops deployed there. Colleges across the country shut down and sent all their students home after the Kent State shootings.

As years pass, we move on and look at historic events in the rear-view mirror — including 9/11, which was perhaps the most defining event of all – we know we must never forget, we must stay involved, trust we will learn the lessons of history, and hope for the best.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for sharing the power

Last week was a very trying time for South Shore residents who lost power after Hurricane Irene. My company even shut down for two days due to power loss. The Cohasset Starbucks became a refuge for many of us who needed to access the Internet, work, pay bills online, charge our cell phones, check email and share stories. Many customers came in with power strips so that we could all access the outlets.

Starbucks was so accommodating and patient. Thank you for sharing the power in our time of need, Starbucks!

WILLCUTT CORNER

Working together after Irene

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

When the impact of the storm left long-lasting power outages throughout town, Elder Affairs stayed in constant communication with police, fire and Emergency Management.

When Tropical Storm Irene hit Cohasset recently, clearly she left devastation in her wake. But it could have been worse. Her arrival at the end of August highlighted the integral part Cohasset Elder Affairs plays in ensuring the most vulnerable citizens in our town remain safe during emergencies.

As it became evident that Cohasset was going to feel a major impact from storm force winds and rain, Coral Grande, Director of Cohasset Elder Affairs and her small staff kicked into high gear. They purchased supplies of water, non-perishable foods, flashlights and batteries to distribute to elders and other vulnerable citizens and broadcast the existence of the Cohasset Community Contact List (3C List) to seniors. As reported previously in this column, this list includes the names of citizens with limitations who may require added support during an emergency. Maintained by Elder Affairs, the information on the list is distributed to town safety officials. As a result of the pre-storm outreach, several new names were added.

Using the 3C list as a resource, volunteers from Elder Affairs and the Social Service League made home visits to 80 plus residents prior to the storm's arrival on August 28, ensuring proper emergency supplies were on hand, and determining supplementary needs. During the height of the storm, follow-up calls were made to all 3C List members, confirming their safety. If citizens on the list were unable to be reached by phone during the storm, Cohasset police officers were dispatched to perform wellness checks.

Grande calls the 3C List invaluable. "It was a critical organizational tool during an emergency. Without it we would have been unable to coordinate resources among elders, police, fire and emergency services, leaving vulnerable people at risk. The list heightened the attention we could pay to those who may have needed us during the storm, helping us to help them when time was of the essence."

When the impact of the storm left long lasting power outages throughout town, Elder Affairs stayed in constant communication with police, fire and Emergency Management. Using the 3C list, Elder Affairs identified which addresses on the list remained without electricity and or phone services, so safety officials could follow up. Once Cohasset Police obtained ice to deliver to affected citizens, they were able to prioritize delivery to those on the 3C List and perform yet another wellness check.

Response to this proactive outreach from those on 3C List has been uniformly positive. "Our seniors were amazed we were checking on them," Grande said. "They are not used to getting phone calls to insure their safety, and they deeply appreciated it."

If you or anyone you know would like to be included on the Cohasset Community Contact List, call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112.

Liza Carens Salerno is a freelance writer and a volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

BRIEFLY

DTC to show 'Citizen Kane'

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will continue its monthly series of movies on Friday Sept. 16th. The feature this month is Citizen Kane which some believe is one of the best movies ever. Orson Welles plays the part of the audacious newspaper baron Charles Foster Kane, which is a thinly veiled portrait of publishing magnate William Randolph Hearst. Welles' film chronicles Kane's rise from poverty to becoming one of America's most influential men. Welles both directs and plays the part of the newspaper king. Shades of Rupert Murdock and the British Tabloid, News of the World scandal?

Come enjoy the big screen in an intimate setting, the meeting room of the Paul Pratt Library. Movie starts at 7 p.m.; There is no charge and, of course, there will be popcorn.

Republicans to host picnic

Cohasset Republicans will host their annual picnic at Lou Harvey's home, 465 King St., Cohasset, from 4 to 8 p.m., on Sunday, Sept. 11. Tickets are $20 per person. Just show up and pay at the door. There will be a cash bar, hamburgers, hotdogs and home-baked goods.

First order of business will be a memoriam to the Sept. 11, 2001, victims and expressions of gratitude to the men and women in military service.

Invited elected officials are: Sen. Scott Brown; Plymouth County D.A. Tim Cruz; Plymouth County Sheriff Joe McDonald; Sen. Bob Hedlund; Rep. Geoff Diehl; Rep. "Rocket" Ryan Fattman.

Special invited guests are: Charlie Baker; Karen Polito; Mary Connaughton; Mass GOP director Jennifer Nassour and Christen Varley, president of the Greater Boston Tea Party.

Operational leadership at Town Hall

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Since people are our most important asset, this change in philosophy will have effects on the organization in "Town Hall." Cross-departmental barriers need to be removed to create an effective Town organization.

Breaking organizational news —Last week we spent some time talking about the planning work that happened behind the scenes to prepare for the storm. Even though Irene was not as serious as it could have been, the planning was critical to the excellent response that we witnessed. Interdepartmental cooperation was very visible in our response. To cite one example, the Sewer Department had generators available for other departments to use to supply electrical power to critical functions that were without power. This is an excellent example of a more contemporary management style that utilizes assets regardless of where they are in an organization. This emphasizes the central philosophy of Mike Coughlin, our new Town Manager. His philosophy is to utilize assets for the betterment of the Town, regardless of where the assets are located. Historically, that has not always been the case.

When we talk about assets, the term applies to all of the assets that make an organization operate. Assets consist, first of all, of the people who make it all work. The Town's employees are our most important asset. Without these people and their brainpower our Town will not work, at all. The key is how to coordinate our people power and other assets to create the most functional and most cost effective organization for our Town.

Assets also include all of the tools at the disposal of our people resources, whether they are items like trucks, computers, tools or even the buildings that house any given operation. These are all assets of our Town used to provide services to our residents. In the past, it seems that some departments have become islands unto themselves. Assets from a given department have tended to stay in that department. Efficient use of assets is the new driving philosophy that we see at Town Hall.

Since people are our most important asset, this change in philosophy will have effects on the organization in "Town Hall." Cross-departmental barriers need to be removed to create an effective Town organization. In discussions with the Town Manager, he sees his team with two strong supporting structures. One of these quarterbacks will be financial. The financial quarterback will be responsible for all the money aspects of Cohasset, regardless of the function creating the financial impact. As a first step, the Town has now invested in a comprehensive financial operating system that can easily integrate all the data that has a financial impact on Cohasset. These data will range from taxes, to expenses, to budgets, to bonding, to payroll and a lot more. This has not been the case, historically. The Town's goal is to operate with an integrated system that can be easily queried or integrated to achieve a comprehensive picture of Cohasset's financial health. Of course, the financial functions are driven by the actions of all operating units

The other quarterback will deal with the operational aspects of Cohasset's assets. Cohasset has many operating pieces that must all work in unison to create a 21st century operation. What are some of the operating components that create a functioning town? These are elements such as the Highway Department, responsible for our roads and their infrastructure. Other elements are Tree and Park Department, Cemeteries, the Transfer Station and Facilities department. There are other operating units that still, in other ways, come under the purview of the Town Manager. In fact, Town Meeting actions several years ago mandated actions to improve coordination among functions that historically have been quite separate and independent by making the Town Manager the Chief Administrative officer of the town as well as the Chief Procurement Officer. During the Special Town Meeting on June 14, 2010, the meeting voted to give joint supervision of the Water Enterprise Fund to the Board of Water Commissioners and the Town Manager. This action has paved the way to begin to integrate the finances of this operating unit into the Town. In addition, the Town Manager Act also gives oversight responsibility to the Town Manager for all operations of the Town.

What we have described here is the basic operations plan. Initially, the Town Manager is establishing the function of Director of Operations as an umbrella organization to begin the effective coordination of Cohasset's various operating units. Remember, this is just the start. As time goes on we'll certainly see this organization begin to mature and generate benefits and economies for the Town.

Greenbush weekend info — If you live near the Greenbush Commuter rail line, you may have noticed that the trains ran over the Labor Day weekend. However, don't be misled. This past weekend was an aberration. The reason the train has not been running on weekends, was that the MBTA currently is replacing railroad ties in certain parts of the Old Colony railroad system.

The only portion of the replacement project that affects the Greenbush is the stretch of trackage between Braintree and Boston. The MBTA is replacing the ties in this area on the weekends. All other tie replacement is being done on other Old Colony routes. Work on the Braintree to Boston was suspended during this past Labor Day weekend, thus the commuter train could maintain its regular weekend schedule for this past weekend. We are told that there will be no other weekend service until the project is completed.

HEALTH NOTES

Dealing with bugs, mold and pollen

STEVE BOBO

Frequently we see pictures of people in other countries wearing masks to avoid inhaling airborne contaminants. Not a bad idea. If only they were a bit less 'hospital' looking.

Critical Critters — Mosquitoes, Fleas, Ticks and other Fall Nuisances The summer has come to a close to be replaced by a lush season of greenery just now beginning to turn. Deer have recently been sighted; many people are complaining about an excess of bugs. The real threat is from the creatures the larger animals are carrying; as well as on the particles given off by flowers. All animals of every description host parasitic insects; Lyme ticks on deer and other furry animals; fleas from household pets and others of similar size; also, those one comes into contact with in sports such as riding etc.; horses and pets. With the lush summer greenery came an increase of deer, smaller animals like foxes, badgers and skunks, each having its complement of pests, fleas and other worrisome critters. Added to the concerns about insects are the reports of one case of Eastern Equine Encephalitis, found in Bristol County.

Then, of course, we have the other irritants like mold and pollen. Animals carry small amounts of the stuff, but most is microscopic; carried by normal air circulation.

Pollen is a dust found on plant buds, which carries the genetic signature of the plant for the purpose of reproduction.

Molds are tiny fungi related to mushrooms but without stems, roots or leaves. Their spores float in the air like pollen. Outdoor mold spores begin to increase as temperatures rise in the spring and reach their peak in October in the New England states. However, they can be found yearround almost anywhere, including in soil, plants and rotting wood. Symptoms are often less prominent on rainy, cloudy or windless days because pollen does not move around during such conditions.

To those of us who have specific activities for which threats from insects are common, we are knowledgeable about the causes and their specific results. Frequently we see pictures of people in other countries wearing masks to avoid inhaling airborne contaminants. Not a bad idea. If only they were a bit less 'hospital' looking. Many women look attractive in veils; the next closest thing to a mask, with most of the qualifications needed to protect them from pollen, etc. If such practices were more widespread and extended to males, there'd be a lot less sneezing and coughing going on during pollen season.

You yourself can limit exposure to the pollen or molds that cause your symptoms. Keep windows closed at night and if possible, use air conditioning, which cleans, cools and dries the air. Try to stay indoors when the pollen or mold levels are reported to be high. Wear a pollen mask if long periods of exposure are unavoidable. Don't mow lawns or rake leaves because it stirs up pollen and molds. Also avoid hanging sheets or clothes outside to dry. Consider taking a vacation during the height of the pollen season to a more pollen-free area, such as the beach or sea. When traveling by car, keep your windows closed. Of course, in Cohasset, generally, pollen and bugs are less of a threat, but become function specific. Walks in the woods are open season for ticks, etc.

Reporting of all nationally notifiable diseases, including Lyme disease, is based on standard surveillance case definitions developed by the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists and Center for Disease Control. The usefulness of public health surveillance data depends on its uniformity, simplicity, and timeliness. Surveillance case definitions establish uniform criteria for disease reporting and should not be used as the sole criteria for establishing clinical diagnoses, determining the standard of care necessary for a particular patient, setting guidelines for quality assurance, or providing standards for reimbursement.

A new series of meetings will start Tuesday, Sept. 13, at 7 p.m., at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset, at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier St. For more information, call Christie at 781-740-7808, Kathleen at 781-749-2404, Heather at 781-544-9230 or Laura at 781-544-4077.

FOR THE RECORD

Postscript to storm coverage

GREGORY MATHIS

Tropical Storm Irene was undoubtedly the biggest story of the week, and one we were able to cover before, during and after. And that's saying a lot for those who still think of us solely as a weekly community newspaper.

Last week presented many obstacles and challenges as Tropical Storm Irene blew into town and left most without power and some with significant property damage.

It was undoubtedly the biggest story of the week, and one we were able to cover before, during and after. And that's saying a lot for those who still think of us solely as a weekly community newspaper.

What a difference five years makes. Well, almost five years.

It has been almost five years since our newsrooms gained control over the news content posted to our Wicked Local websites. What that means is our editors, sports editors, reporters, photographers, editorial assistants and practically everyone who has a hand in the editorial process has access to our Web platform to post content.

That hasn't always been the case.

Back in September of 2006, Community Newspaper Company (CNC) and Enterprise News Media (which included the weekly MPG Newspapers) were on the verge of being sold to the company that would become GateHouse Media. Soon after the mega-deal was made, we introduced Zope (our Web-posting platform) to our journalists and our lives haven't been the same since.

Before Zope, when the Boston Herald owned the CNC division of what is now GateHouse Media New England, the online presence was known as Townonline. Each town in our CNC coverage area had its own Townonline site, much like the Wicked Local sites today. The newsrooms and the journalists, however, had very little to do with posting the content.

Our contribution to the Web was that each week, after the newspaper went to press, editors would dump a dozen or so files — news stories, sports, a feature, maybe a letter to the editor, obituaries — into a folder on a server. Someone in the Interactive Department sitting in the Herald office in Boston would take those files, do whatever they did with them and they would (magically?) appear on the website.

Truthfully, we didn't pay much attention to the websites. Occasionally we'd get a complaint from a reader and were forced to log on to see what the reader was referring to.

And if the Townonline process and workflow was antiquated, the system we had at MPG back in the mid-1990s was truly prehistoric by today's standard. The Old Colony Memorial was the only paper that had any online presence back when being online was at the leading edge of the industry. We had one Apple computer to post content to the Web that was shared between a few editors who had a working knowledge of HTML coding. We painstakingly had to mark up and code each story and it literally took hours to post a handful of stories each week, after the newspaper went to press.

I'm glad those days are long behind us.

Zope allows us to post our content rather easily and quickly. And it has given us control over how the content we generate is presented online.

This past week was a clear example of how far we've come since those days of Townonline and HTML coding.

Most of our papers had gone to press last week before Irene was knocking on our doorstep. On Thursday and Friday, with the storm approaching, our websites had stories detailing the hurricane's movement, preparation tips and local stories on how emergency management teams were planning for the storm. Coverage on the website continued in earnest on Saturday with landfall imminent and then well into Sunday, until we lost power and things went dark for a while. After the storm, and before our next issue of the newspaper, we had stories detailing the aftermath, the power outages and the damage done. Readers supplied us with photos taken before, during and after the storm that appeared on the website.

So we were able to cover this big story between an entire weekly newspaper cycle and not miss a beat.

What a difference five years makes.

AMERICAN THOUGHTS

Reflections ten years later

MARY JANE HANRON

The strength of the United States is immeasurable. More people know this than not. Despite its wounds and worries the nation will never be weak.

Ten exquisite autumns have passed by since that momentous morning of September 11, 2001. Countless times Americans have looked toward the glory of the bluest skies and thought of the evil then unleashed upon this nation on a day so similar it was hard to imagine anything sinister existing in the universe. Bells have tolled from fire stations in haunting tones lingering on breezes and memories. . Thoughts of loved ones lost in those unspeakable crimes of horror have hovered in the minds of citizens innumerable times.

Questions remain in the hearts and convictions of Americans. Most have found a way to continue with daily life though it is different from that which propelled the nation on September 10th of that year. The country is alert and awakened, aware of the fragility of life, the presence of hatred and danger, the realization that all the world does not uphold noble and righteous principles.

But we have continued with a renewed consciousness that what our nation represents must be guarded and protected. It would be much easier if it were possible to comprehend why such acts occur. Solutions would be clear visions; well orchestrated plans executed and adapted.

It has not been that simple. Well-intentioned citizens disagree vehemently not only about methods but motives, reasons not realities and the meaning of the nation's very soul. Initially a force that united Americans, during the past decade the horror of that day has at times, divided good people.

When reflecting upon the years past, the recollection of what we did the afternoon of September 11th brings very fundamental loves and treasures to mind. People went home, grateful for their families and safe abodes, dependable neighbors, the gift of faith and the knowledge that though the hours that followed held the unknown, it was still the best thing in the world to be in America.

Even those who directly experienced loss and tragedy found support and compassion; protection and prayers.

As we observe the passing of a decade, few have found complete peace. The complexity of living through the days is as vast and relentless as the powerful ocean. Many see the nation as fundamentally flawed, in decline and following the wrong path. Rather the country, ever scarred by the wounds of that day emerges stronger with a people newly inspired and determined to preserve all that is sacred about the nation.

The strength of the United States is immeasurable. More people know this than not. Despite its wounds and worries the nation will never be weak. An unspoken spirit assures this. It is found in the hearts of citizens, the memories of ancestors, the souls of those who died that day and the service of those who fight to protect our liberty and way of life.

May all Americans take a moment on Sunday to remember the suffering of that day and the grace that has sustained us since. May the love and passion for all that is America be renewed as it was on September 12th of that year.

This great nation which continues to withstand assault domestically and throughout the world rises stronger than before from the ashes of despair and sorrow to remain the utmost story of freedom, innovation, compassion and greatness ever known in this world.

Mary Jane Hanron is a columnist and staff reporter for the Mariner Newspapers.

HAPPENINGS

Sugar blues?

Anyone who is constantly craving sweets and wants to understand why and wants to gain control without deprivation will have these issues addressed at a presentation titled "Sugar Blues." Presented by Linda Storm, a certified health coach and yoga instructor, the program will take place from 7 to 8:30 p.m., on Thursday, Sept. 15, at Cohasset Family Chiropractic, 814 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy./Route 3A, Cohasset.

The event is free, but seating is limited. Call 781-923-1226 or email drlisa@cohassetfamily-chiro.com to reserve a seat.

Tomato Festival at Holly Hill Farm

Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, will host its annual Tomato Festival from 1 to 5 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 10. There will be a fresh tomato-tasting contest, tomato recipe contest, freshly baked treats from the farm's wood-fired mud oven, hayrides, children's activities, local food vendors and live music by Ragweed from Scituate. This event is free for members of Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $5 for non-members.

For directions and more information, visit www.hollyhill-farm.org or call 781-383-6565.

Dementia support

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset will be hosting monthly support groups for family members who are coping with a loved one afflicted by dementia. Dementia is a rapidly growing concern in our country and affects many of our senior residents on the South Shore. Through the support of trained professionals in the field and with the sharing of best practices from families currently dealing with the care giving of a loved one affected by the disease, this support group's main objective will be to give the proper tools and approaches to family members to help alleviate some of the emotions of frustration and sadness that comes with the job of caregiver.

The support group will meet monthly. Bonnie Haley, a licensed social worker, will be conducting the meetings and educating family members on Alzheimer's disease and related types of dementias and how they impact individuals with memory loss as well as their caregivers. This monthly support group is open to the public and will take place at Sunrise of Cohasset located at 125 King Street (Route 3AThe first meeting will take place on Sept. 21 at 6 pm.

Volume 37 - Report No. 35 September 2, 2011

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate during the week of August 29-September 2.

Beacon Hill Roll Call reports local representatives' roll call attendance records for the 2011 session through September 2.

The House has held 104 roll call votes. Beacon Hill Roll Call tabulates the number of roll calls for which each representative was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the roll call attendance record.

Several quorum roll calls, used to gather a majority of members onto the House floor to conduct business, are also included in the 104 roll calls. On quorum roll calls, members simply vote "present" in order to indicate their presence in the chamber. When a representative does not indicate his or her presence on a quorum roll call, we count that as a roll call absence just like any other roll call absence.

Only 38 percent or 61 of the 158 House members have perfect 100 percent roll call attendance records.

Some representatives may have poor attendance records because of a variety of reasons including health problems or military service. Beacon Hill Roll Call does not ask each individual representative why he or she missed roll call votes.

The worst roll call attendance record belongs to Rep. Jerald Parisella (D-Beverly) who missed 86 roll calls (17.3 percent roll call attendance record). Parisella missed the 86 roll calls while on active duty with the U.S. Army in Iraq.

Rounding out the top five worst are Reps. Cheryl Coakley-Rivera (D-Springfield), who missed 31 roll calls (70.2 percent attendance); Christine Canavan (D-Brockton), who missed 23 roll calls (77.9 percent attendance); Cory Atkins (D-Concord), who missed 21 roll calls (79.8 percent attendance); and Christopher Fallon (D-Malden), who missed 18 roll calls (82.7 percent attendance).

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' 2011 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The House has held 104 roll calls in 2011. The percentage listed next to the representatives' name is the percentage of roll call votes for which he or she was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the representative missed.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

SENIOR CITIZEN SAFETY ZONES (H 1969) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would allow cities and towns to create senior citizen safety zones in which the maximum speed limit could be reduced to as low as 20 mph. Locations would include areas with high senior citizen population such as senior centers, hospitals, nursing homes, assisted living facilities and other senior citizen housing.

Supporters say the bill will prevent injuries and save lives.

UNSAFE JEWELRY FOR KIDS AND CLEANING PRODUCTS - The Committee on Public Health will hold a hearing on September 13 at 10 a.m. on several bills including one prohibiting children's jewelry containing cadmium with more than 75 parts per million. (S 1074).

Supporters say kids are sometimes exposed to more than 100 times the recommended limit of this noxious metal when they lick, chew or accidentally swallow inexpensive jewelry items aimed at kids. They noted that ironically manufacturers in China and other places that are complying with regulations limiting lead in children's items are turning to cadmium, which is unregulated but can also be toxic in large quantities.

Another piece of legislation (H 624) on the committee's agenda would prohibit the use of cleaning products in any school, day care center or public building owned by state or local government unless the product is on the annual list of safer cleaning products established by the state public health commissioner. The list would include environmentally preferable products that are free of certain toxins.

Supporters say this mandate would protect people from toxins that may cause asthma and noted Massachusetts asthma rates rank near the highest in the nation.

Opponents argue the proposal is too restrictive and would prohibit the use of many products that actually help reduce asthma and other health threats. They argued that these products are safe and are already heavily regulated by the state and federal government.

FRESH AIR FOR PATIENTS (S 986) - The Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse has scheduled a hearing on September 13 on legislation that would give patients in residential mental health facilities the right to daily access to fresh air and the outdoors.

Also on the agenda is a bill (H 554) that would prohibit jails from disciplining or isolating a prisoner who either commits self-mutilation or attempts suicide.

TEACH CANCER PREVENTION AND MAKE SEX ED OPTIONAL IN SCHOOLS - The Education Committee's list of bills for its September 20 hearing at 10 a.m. includes one that would mandate all sex education courses in local schools be offered on a strictly elective basis and require written parental permission in order for a student to participate (H 155). Current law allows schools to make sex education a part of the regular curriculum but permits parents to exempt their children with written notice to the principal.

The proposal would give parents five school days advance notice, an opportunity to review the materials used in the course and the option to ask teachers and administrators questions about the course.

The committee hearing will also cover a proposal (S 250) that would require all public schools to teach detection and prevention of skin cancer including the harm of ultraviolet radiation obtained trough tanning beds and too much exposure to the sun.

PROHIBIT PUBLIC FUNDS FOR SEX REASSIGNMENT (S 878) - A bill that would prohibit transgender inmates from receiving taxpayer-funded sex reassignment surgery, laser hair removal or hormone therapy will be the subject of a Judiciary Committee hearing at 1 p.m. on September 20.

Supporters argue the state should not be funding elective transgender surgery for criminals.

Opponents say the proposal is mean-spirited and that the physical and psychological needs of prisoners must be dealt with by the state.

The committee will also consider a measure that would require non-indigent prisoners to pay the state $5 per day to defray the costs of incarceration (H 483). The proposal also includes other costs that prisoners would pay including up to $3 for a prescription drug and up to $5 for medical visits, dental visits and a pair of prescription eyeglasses.

New Senior Center planning group assembles

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The newly appointed senior center planning group met for the first time Wednesday evening at 6:15. The group had a walk-around at the proposed site for the new senior center, Willcutt Commons; afterward, they conducted their meeting at Town Hall.

The meeting was "very well-attended," said Social Service League Vice President Sandra Halverson.

The new committee was finalized at the last Board of Selectmen meeting on August 16, when the board appointed four public at members: Lynda Mooney, Joan Brown, Woody Chittick, and Diane Karcher.

The four members at large joined two members of the Board of Selectmen, Paul Carlson and Diane Kennedy; two members of the Advisory Committee, Peter Pescatore and Tom Reardon; two members of the Council of Elder Affairs; one member from the Friends of Elder Affairs; and two from the Social Services League of Cohasset. The town manager, town accountant, Director of Elder Affairs will provide the committee with their support.

The Social Services League has pledged $1 million toward the building project and is fundraising to cover additional costs. They recently proposed to construct the building privately and lease it to the town.

At Wednesday night's meeting, Selectmen Paul Carlson and Diane Kennedy were named chairman and co-chairman of the committee, respectively. The two were appointed as liaisons to the senior center planning group by the Board of Selectmen.

Glenn Pratt, Deputy Director of the Emergency Management team and member of the senior center ad-hoc committee, was on hand to give an overall view of the new senior center building project.

The decision was made to establish subcommittees to review budget and legal issues. These subcommittees will meet before the committee at large holds their next meeting.

SENIOR SCENE

Power outage takes me back to my youth

When this happens it reminds me of my childhood. In the house where I grew up we had no electricity until I was 9 or 10 years old.

LOUISE SMULLEN

As I write this, the wind and rain from hurricane Irene is revving up. Although the wind can cause a lot of damage, I like the sound it makes blowing through the treetops and sometimes whining through the window screen. Oops! There goes the electric power. No music from the CD player and no humming from the refrigerator. So much today depends on electric power.

When this happens it reminds me of my childhood. In the house where I grew up we had no electricity until I was 9 or 10 years old. We had gas lights. Heat was supplied by a pot-bellied stove in the living room and a big cast iron coal and gas range in the kitchen. There was a meter also in the kitchen and when the gas was low my mother would drop a quarter into it, and we'd have gas again. Could those really have been "the good old days"?

The Senior Center will soon be humming with activity. Wednesday seminars will again be presented. Chair yoga, line dancing and other activities will begin this month. Call 781-383-9112 to sign up for these. Also the Coffee Café at Lightkeepers will reopen on Mondays from 9 to- 11 a.m. No reservations needed – just drop in. However, if you need transportation, call the center at the above number.

On Aug. 10, Cohasset seniors joined those from other towns for a delicious spaghetti dinner at Sunrise Assisted Living. This is an annual affair. Tables were set up on the open porch, and the weather was perfect. During the meal music was provided by the mellow voice of Mike Mianno, who sang oldies but goodies as he moved around among the tables. One of the guests was Fr. Liam Scanlon, who has been filling in at St. Anthony's during Fr. Mulvehill's vacation. He also sang a couple of songs in his pleasing baritone. At one point Fr. Scanlon and Rosmarie Engel-Conn got up and danced to the music. We all really enjoyed the day and are looking forward to more good times.

Senior Scene appears monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

LIVING WELL

Backpacks can be a real pain

When loading, make sure (the backpack) doesn't weigh more than 15 percent of one's body weight.

JOAN F. WRIGHT, CMC

September is Backpack Safety Month.

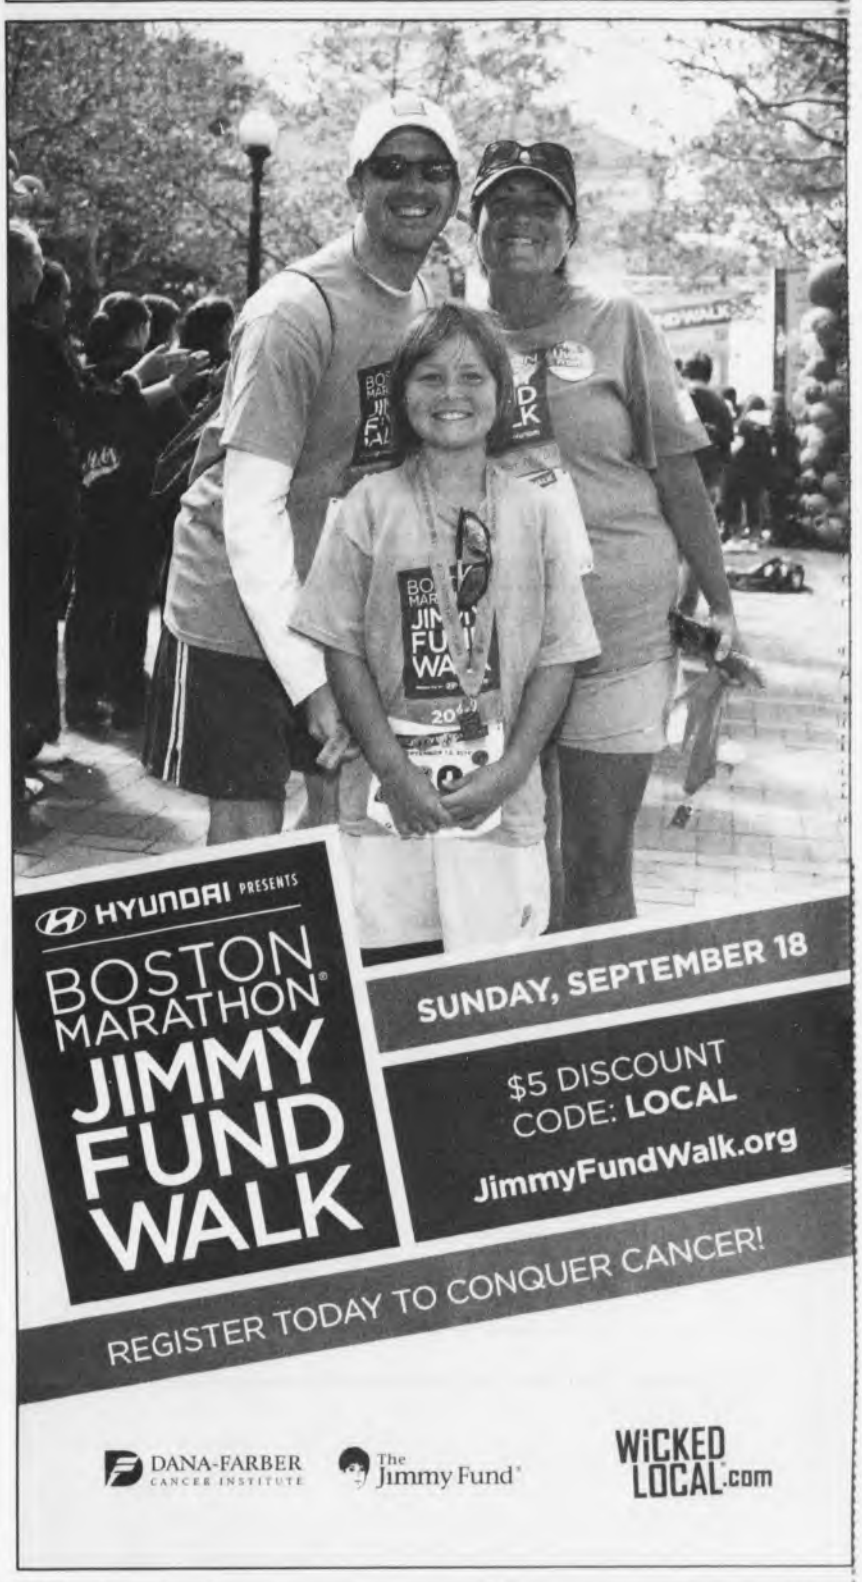
The inventions of the backpack, the pocketbook and the briefcase are pure genius. Think of life without them . . . balancing within our arms piles of books and notebooks, pencils, pens, laptop computers, lipstick and makeup, combs and brushes, wallets and all the other ingredients we stuff into these great "carriers of things!" When our arms are full, possibly impairing our view and throwing off our gait, we're a set-up for a fall and have no free hands to break it. So not only do these wonderful bags and packs help transport all our "stuff", but they keep us safe . . . or do they?

More than 23,000 backpack-related injuries were treated in hospital emergency rooms, clinics, and doctors' offices in 2007. Chiropractors' and physical therapists' offices are full of patients complaining of neck and back pain, very often associated with an overloaded pocketbook or briefcase. The way we pack and carry our bags can cause back injuries, create bad posture, impede the way we walk, and cause falls or other injuries.

The American Occupational Therapy Association, Inc. (aota.org) publishes ergonomic strategies for using backpacks, briefcases and pocketbooks. You'd think we wouldn't need instructions but how many of us have felt the neck strain or back pain from lugging around an overloaded purse, backpack or briefcase?

Backpacks should have well-padded shoulder straps so too much pressure isn't applied to nerves in the neck and shoulders causing pain and tingling. When loading, make sure it doesn't weigh more than 15 percent of one's body weight. Heaviest items should be loaded closest to the back and unable to slide around. Distribute the weight evenly by wearing both shoulder straps. Slinging the pack over one shoulder can cause you to lean to the side, curving the spine and causing pain. Wear the pack's waist belt (if there is one) to distribute the pack's weight more evenly. Make sure the bottom of the pack rests in the curve of the lower back and doesn't sit below the waistline.

You can still be fashionable without crippling yourself with an overstuffed purse! Again, shoulder straps should have padding to avoid too much pressure on nerves and alternating shoulders when wearing a shoulder bag balances weight distribution and prevents blood flow restriction at the shoulder. Match the size of your purse to specific activities (hence a safety reason for owning multiple purses!) such as a compact purse for short errands and a larger one with built-in compartments for longer errands or work-related activities. Empty your wallet of coins, use travel size toiletries, and eliminate duplicate contents such as multiple pens or lipsticks.



When carrying a wallet in your back pocket, make sure it's not overloaded and remove it from your pocket when sitting for long periods of time or when driving. Wear laptop bags diagonally across the body to balance its weight.

Your briefcase should be proportionate to body size, preferably made of lighter materials such as microfiber or nylon rather than leather (which just adds extra weight) and have padded straps that are adjustable and not too long. Pack heaviest items at the bottom and use its compartments to distribute weight evenly. Again, alternate hands and shoulders when carrying and rest it on floors and counters when possible.

Simple tips that can keep us upright and feeling right!

Regional Stormwater Management conference

To respond to growing concern about storm water management the Old Colony Planning Council is presenting a conference; "Stormwater Management; What Should be Done, What Must be Done , and How to do It" from 1 to 4 p.m., Sept. 21, at the Massasoit College Conference Center in Brockton.

The conference reflects the challenges communities on the South Shore and in the rest of Southeastern Massachusetts continue to face in managing storm water. Concerns range from preventing floods, protecting surface water supplies from pollution, recharging the ground water, and maintaining year round stream flows crucial for wildlife, to meeting the specific requirements of evolving state and federal storm water regulations.

Speakers covering the range of related topics are:

Beth Lambert, Massachusetts Division of Ecological Restoration discussing long term climatic change and Its implications for rainfall, storm water flows, and the natural and human environments.

Thelma Murphy, Storm Water Coordinator, US EPA New England, Office of Ecosystem Protection, reviewing local requirements under the new Municipal Separate Storm Sewer Systems (MS4) storm water permits.

Fred Civian, Massachusetts Storm Water Coordinator, Mass. DEP presenting public and private property owners roles and obligations under the state Storm Water Regulations - who must do what and when.

Scott Turner, P.E., Nitsch Engineering, Boston, Massachusetts, exploring traditional and innovativedesign approaches to comprehensive storm water management; (e.g., Low Impact Development –LID) giving examples of simple and complex designs and techniques; what works and why.

The event is sponsored by the Old Colony Planning Council and co-sponsored by the Mass Audubon Society, The Nature Conservancy, the Taunton River Watershed Alliance, and The Pilgrim Resource Conservation and Development Area Council.

The event is free but registration is requested. The conference is at the Massasoit Conference Center, 770 Crescent Street (Rte. 27) Brockton, adjacent to Christos Restaurant. For questions and registration call Jim Watson @ 508-583-1833 x 210 or Jane Linhares) at Extension 200.

SPORTS NOTES

Registration still open

Hingham Youth Football's flag football season will begin on Saturday, September 17.

Registration cost is $100 for the first child, $50 for each additional with a $200 max and a late fee of $25 after July 15.

The league is co-ed and encourages girls to play as it is a non-contact sport.

Children ages 5 (by September 1, 2011) -14 are eligible to play.

Teams are divided by grade.

The game times are set every week.

If your games are scheduled for 1 p.m., they will be 1p.m. throughout the season barring any unforeseen circumstances.

Games are played on Saturdays at Lynch Field, Beal Street, Hingham.

Practice times are up to the coaches. Generally, they just have the kids show up a little before game time to run through plays and go over the basics of the game.

The season will run from September 10 through November 5.

On November 5, Divisions 4 and 5 will have their championship games played and Divisions 1-3 will have a regular game. There will be medals for all players in Divisions 1-3 and trophies for all players in Divisions 4 and 5.

Children are encouraged to wear cleats, sweatpants and dress in layers as it can get very cold at Lynch Field. The league provides all other equipment and jerseys for the kids. Please direct any questions to Liz Stasio. jlstasio@comcast.net

INSTRUCTIONAL HOCKEY

Coastal Stars

Coastal Stars Instructional Hockey registration is now open at www.coastalstars.com. Coastal Stars is the town based youth hockey program for Marshfield and Cohasset. Instructional Hockey introduces boys and girls 5 to 8 years old to ice hockey. Emphasis is on teaching the fundamentals of the game, including how to skate with a stick and equipment. The Instructional Hockey program will start in early Fall. Games are once a week on the weekend thru March. Weekly practice/skills sessions will take place at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke on Mondays at 5 p.m. Full equipment is required.

If you have any questions, please contact the Coastal Stars Instructional Director, Kevin Walker at 617-710-7300.

LACROSSE

Glory Daze Lacrosse League for adults

The first round of the co-ed Glory Daze Lacrosse League for adults, ages mid-20s and up, will start in September and end in early November. The league will consist of pick-up games, probably one, maybe two, evenings a week, on a field in Hingham.

Dates and times will be available shortly, but anyone interested in participating should contact Victoria O'Doherty-Popp via email to victoriaodp@gmail.com or call 339-788-1783. The Glory Daze League will be stress-free with friendly competition, and low cost.

SOCCER

Coach wanted

Hingham High School has a Boys Freshmen Soccer Coaching vacancy.

All interested candidates should contact athletic director Margaret Conaty via email mconaty@hingham-schools.com or phone 781-741-1560 ext. 5.

FOOTBALL

Skippers more than ready to roll

Season starts tonight at Quincy

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Over the past few seasons, the Cohasset football team has had a lot of success and an ability to reload when key players graduate.

They did it last year when Thomas Flibotte took over the running game from Dana Valentine and look to do the same this year.

Quarterback Jeff Cavanaro and Flibotte are gone to graduation, but reinforcements are ready.

Senior Jamie Faber, who pitched for the state champion baseball team, will be behind center, while senior Kyle Livingstone returns to the backfield.

Livingstone backed up Flibotte last year. He started against Scituate when Flibotte was out and had a big game.

"Kyle Livingstone has a stronghold on the running back position," Afanasiw said. "He's had a couple of nice performances in the preseason. Last year he started at Scituate and had a pretty good game (70 yards in a 21-18 win)."

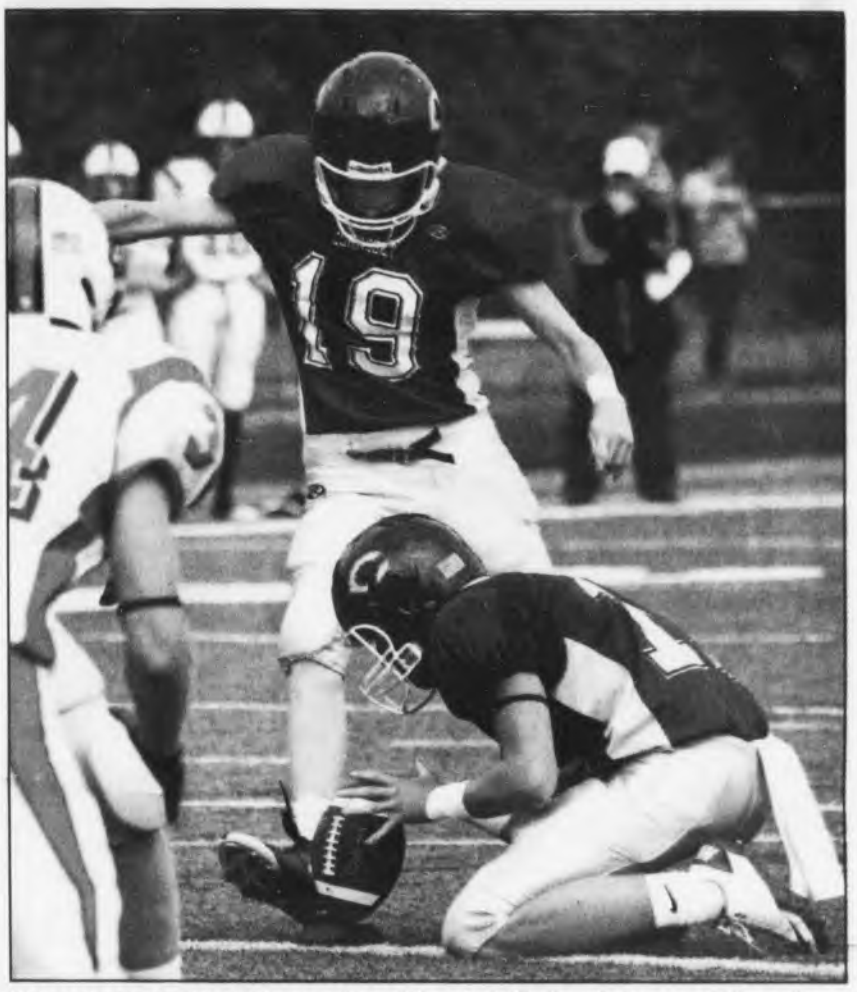
Faber is also ready to shine.

"Jamie is quite tall," Afanasiw said. "He has a strong and accurate arm. He has good composure and quick feel. He's very smart. He rarely gets confused. He doesn't let little things unravel him. He's able to benefit from being in pressure situations in other sports."

Faber was the winning pitcher in the MIAA Div. 4 State Baseball Championship game this summer. He pitched a complete game while allowing just one unearned run.

Faber will look to hook up with seniors John Collins and Mitch McNary, along with junior Chris Carpenter, who will be the team's rotating receiver corps.

"Both have very good hands," Afanasiw of Collins and McNary. "John might have the best hands in the league. Mitch is explosive."



Two members of last year's offensive line return.

Chris Brash and Robbie Mahoney will both protect Faber.

They'll be joined by junior right guard Craig Davis, sophomore right tackle Steven Maher, Jake Herth at left guard and for the moment Dallas Purcell and senior Ben Curley at left tackle.

Curley and Purcell have been battling for the position throughout the preseason and

A fresh fun start

Cohasset ready to create new memories

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Last year, the Cohasset field hockey team completed the best regular season in school history with a 15-0-3 record and a South Shore League championship.

This season promises to be a good one, according to coach Laura Giuliano.

"It's an exciting time, she said. "Knock on wood. We're ready to get out there. It seems like it takes forever to get through the preseason, and now it's here. There will be a different dynamic this year. There is a different dynamic from year to year."

Cohasset opens their season today at Hingham.

Cohasset lost a number of starters from last year, but have a solid group coming back.

It starts with the midfield.

"With the exception of one, the midfield is back," Giuliano said. "Sage Stebbins, Kayla Orner and Amber Silvia form a very strong core."

MAJOR LEAGUE LACROSSE

A Daye for celebration

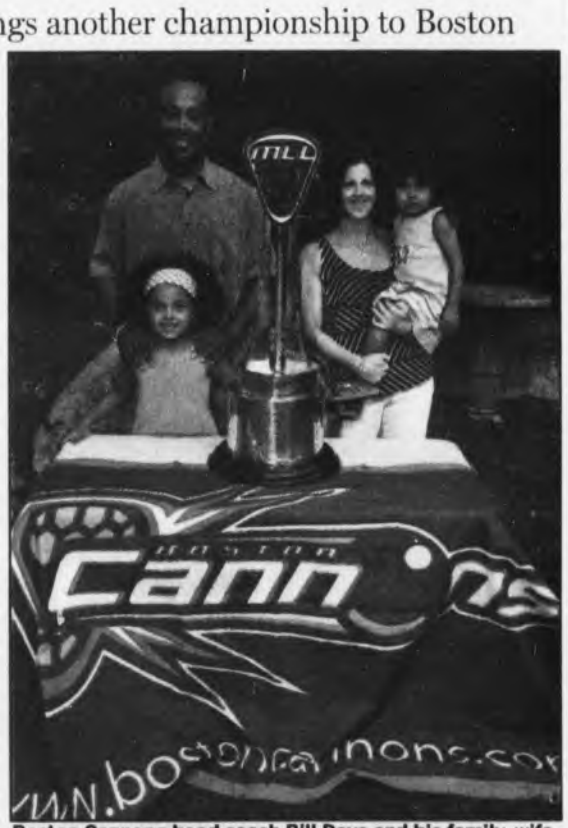
Cannons coach brings another championship to Boston

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The city of Boston has been known as the City of Champions in recent years for good reason.

Since 2001, the Patriots, Red Sox, Celtics and Bruins have all won their respective sport's championship.

Boston can add another to the list, and this time there's a very local connection.



Hingham's Bill Daye is the head coach for the Boston Cannons Major League Lacrosse team that just won the Major League Lacrosse championship with a 10-9 win over the Hamilton Nationals at Annapolis, Md. Last Sunday.

Duxbury's Max Quinzani netted the game-winning goal with 1.2 seconds left to play in a 14-13 semifinal win over the Chesapeake Bayhawks.

The championship is the first for the Cannons, and it has been noticed.

Thursday, the team was honored by the Patriots at their preseason game against the Giants, and Saturday, the Red Sox honored the Cannons before their game against the Texas Rangers.

BOYS SOCCER

Rally in the rain

Skippers come back to tie Abington in opener

By Jay N. Miller
Gatehouse News Service

Steady rain did little to dampen the offensive part of the game, as the South Shore League boys soccer season kicked off with an action-packed opener at Abington High Tuesday afternoon.

The host Green Wave scored twice within the game's first 20 minutes, as sophomore Rob McClafferty provided a goal and an assist in his first varsity start. But Cohasset's relentless pressure kept the home team backed up for much of the rest of the game, and Skipper striker Patrick MacCormack's goal with 12:29 remaining enabled the visitors to escape with a 2-2 deadlock.

Abington's offense was dangerous and capable of quick strikes, but the Skippers had much better ball control and territorial advantage in the second half. Only a half-dozen highlight reel saves by Green Wave junior goalkeeper Brett Williams kept the Cohasset comeback at bay.

Inside the 6 - Soccer Power Rankings

2011 preseason poll

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

After nearly two weeks of preseason training, it all comes down to this, the start of the 2011 season. And this is the debut of the 2011 Inside the 6 Soccer Power Rankings. As we saw last year, any team is capable of climbing to the top of the poll. But what does it take to have a banner season? We went all the way to Iceland, yes Iceland, for the answer.

"The best way to have a successful high school season is to train before preseason begins to be sharp technically and fit for the busy practice and game schedule," said Meagan McCray, keeper for Valur of Iceland's top-flight professional league. "Players who aren't competing in club soccer year round, should spend time in the offseason doing extra training sessions with the ball in addition to regular conditioning. Once the season begins all the extra workouts will help a player feel

A quick nine holes of September golf

PAUL HARBER

September is one of the best months for golf on the calendar.

Youngsters – and their teachers – are back in the classroom and the golf courses are not as crowded.

You enjoy it more because you realize how precious time is. It is the last good golf in these parts until next spring. You treasure every round, every shot.

Sure, you can tee it up in October; the weather is still tolerable. But often times you are blinded by the sun that is closer to the horizon and you have to hunt for your golf balls, which always seem to snuggle under fallen leaves.

So enjoy this month and savor every shot. The end is in sight.

So let's play a quick nine before the sun goes down and we have our first frost.

Here are nine random notes and quotes and some idle thoughts while standing over a fourth putt to get you through the week.

1. September has been the crown jewel on the local golf calendar because of the tournaments that conclude the season. The PGA Tour is in our backyard and many clubs are holding their club championships over Labor Day weekend.

How the PGA Tour got to Massachusetts is a good story. Cuzzy Mingolla ran Pleasant Valley Country Club in the late 1950s and early 1960s and he wanted to bring the Tour to his course and New England. First, he had the women play at Pleasant Valley and then it finally lured the PGA Tour to his course. He brought in Arnold Palmer to cajole the media in a pre-tournament press outing.

And the late Neil Singelais of the Globe, who didn't know much about golf, asked Mingolla and Palmer if Pleasant Valley was a nine-hole or 18-hole golf course. Pleasant Valley was the birthplace of Stadium Golf, and there was no louder place on the PGA Tour than the 17th green, where spectators roared as title contenders negotiated the devilish dogleg.

2. Norton has to be considered the "Capital of New England Golf."

Besides hosting the PGA Tour at TPC Boston, just about all of the region's golf's organizations are headquartered in Norton and there is MGA Links at Mamantapett, a great place for youngsters and beginners to learn how to play this crazy game. There was a time when the only golf in Norton was a pair of nine-holers. There was Norton Country Club, built and operated by Alex Ohlson and his family after World War II. Alex put his heart and soul into the golf course. It was ranked by the National Golf Foundation as one of the best nine-hole courses in America. Each hole was a gem.

Later they sold it and the new owners expanded it to 18 holes and it is still quite a test of golf. The other nine-hole layout was Wading Brook, which was purchased by the MGA and transformed into Mamantapett. The PGA Tour built the TPC course because the Mingolla family refused to sell them Pleasant Valley CC. If the Mingolla family relented, TPC Boston would not exist. There would be a TPC Massachusetts in Sutton instead.

3. For many years, this was a traumatic time for me. I was the tournament director of the Boston Globe's Tournament of Club Champions. At first, it was simple, there was a five-club rotation of courses: Belmont, Woodland, Brae Burn, The Country Club and Pine Brook.

There would be 60 or 70 club champions competing for the championship. The tournament began in the early 1950s, thanks to Joe Looney, but when the Golf Boom hit in the 1980s, everything changed. First, we had to initiate a Women's T of CC, which meant another tournament to run. Second, with so many clubs opening in the 1980s and 1990s, there were tons more champions to play in the championship. When the number of entrants reached 120 and 130, you worried about getting them around these difficult courses during the limited daylight hours of September. Some club champions shouldn't have even played because they had no chance of winning. I remember one club champion standing on the first tee at Woodland. It stretches to just a little over 300 yards, and this champion, from a little course down the Cape, remarked, "This is longer than any hole at my course." But what scared me the most was the weather. After getting everything set, you never wanted a rainout, just more headaches.

Eventually, the Globe higher-ups ended the tournament in a cost-cutting move.

4. Another tournament that ended when a newspaper decided to no longer sponsor it in a cost-cutting move was the Brockton Enterprise Celebrity Tournament. It was really the first celebrity event in the region. Pete Farley, the old sports editor at the Enterprise, was the tournament director, and with the help of the late and great Frank Saba at Thorny Lea Golf Club, the tournament was a huge success. Back in the day, Red Sox, Patriots, Celtics and Bruins players didn't have to be enticed to play in this celebrity event. It was the biggest party of the season and players would come up to Farley during the year to make sure they would get their invite. Thorny Lea had another September tournament that was the highlight of the year, the PGA Pro Assistants Championship. Some of the best players in the nation would coverage upon Brockton for the championship. Among the winners were Loren Roberts and Frank Funk, who went on the successful professional careers.

5. Speaking of Thorny Lea, kudos to John Hadges, who won the club championship and followed it up by winning the 14th annual Richard Tarlow Invitational last week at his home course. Hadges, a two-time State Amateur champion, didn't just win the club championship at Thorny Lea, he ran away with it. He won by 18 strokes over a very strong field. But Hadges was hot. He tied the competitive course record, fashioning a 7-under-par 63 en route to a 12-under 198 aggregate. But he needed to go into a playoff to win the Tarlow over Bill Drohen of Easton. Hadges birdied the first playoff hole for the victory, his second Tarlow championship. The two had faced each other before. Drohen ousted Hadges two years ago in the State Amateur when Hadges was the defending champion. Drohen beat him up, 6 and 5, in the quarterfinals, and went on to win the championship.

6. September is the start of the high school golf season and Braintree High School coach Bob Crook will have a difficult time paring down his squad before the season opener Sept. 7 at Walpole. "We had 68 players sign-up for tryouts," reports Crook. That's almost as many as football, which had around 70 candidates. The Wamps home course is Braintree Municipal and the high school team gets enough tee times for 20 players every day except Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Because of all the Hurricane Irene weather-related problems, Crook won't see all his candidates play until sometime next week. But that's OK. Golf isn't like coaching basketball or football. It's probably the best coaching assignment in high school. This fall athletic director Gary Graziano takes over as golf coach at Rockland High School, leaving his position as assistant football coach and he is loving it.

7. Nobody has had a summer like Meghan Khang. The kid just started her freshman year at Rockland High School last week and she already has won just about everything possible on the local scene. She's been all over the country playing in national junior events and doing quite well and last week, she won the women's title at the aforementioned Tarlow Invitational. Khang carded a final round 3-under-par 71 for a seven-stroke victory over her nearest competitor. Khang was tied for the first-round lead at two-over 76. In the second day she fashioned five birdies around two bogeys and took the title. The last juniors in these parts to play this week were Kevin Johnson and James Driscoll, both making money on the pro circuits.

8. One of my biggest regrets growing up is not becoming a caddie at Wollaston Golf Club. It was the early 1960s, I was a kid in Dorchester and a good friend suggested we hike over to the Quincy course and apply. I told him I'd rather play sports than watch some old fuddies play a silly game and I went merrily on my own way. Boy was I stupid. All sports gave me was a broken body, two knee replacements, arthritic hands, worn out shoulders and a temperamental bad back that goes out more than a Hollywood starlet. Wollaston's caddyshack, back in the day, was a breeding ground for so many of today's leaders. Among the ranks were the future publisher of Sports Illustrated and an executive editor of a once great Boston newspaper. Yes, sports taught me that preparation, hard work and sacrifice are what get you ahead in this world. However, as a caddie, I feel I would have learned more about people, watching how great men handled adversity on the golf course and how they interacted together. It would have been an even bigger asset when I became an adult.

9. Finally, as I'm turning up the final fairway now that I'm into my 60s, I realize Walter Hagan was right. You have to take time to smell the roses. I'm glad I did. Over the last 30 years I've been fortunate to play too much golf, (but I could never get that eighth day in a week to play). We played from the time snow cleared in March through November and sometimes beyond. I've played some great courses I've had no business playing and with some unforgettable people I would never have met if I didn't play this "silly" game. I've played every course in New England worth playing and just about every course in the region a handful of times and I have good memories at each venue. My body won't let me play every day anymore and my handicap is embarrassing, more than twice than it normally was. It hurts to swing and every round feels like the Baatan Death March. Yet, there is no place I'd rather be than on the golf course. It's worth it.

"I was fortunate enough to be honored at a Red Sox game," Daye said. "The Red Sox had us on the field during the pregame. I got to meet some of the guys and hold the trophy at home plate. We had a nice reception from the fans. The trophy was down by the wall and we had people coming over and taking pictures.

"We were also honored by the Patriots. The reception we got at the Patriots was great. The crowd went nuts. Kids were running over to take pictures. They were familiar with the Cannons. That says a lot about where the team has gone."

As the coach of a championship team in Boston, Daye joins the ranks of Terry Francona, Bill Belichick, Claude Julien and Doc Rivers.

"That's a great question," Daye said about the feeling of joining those illustrious ranks. "Winning the Super Bowl of the sport is humbling. It's a unique feeling, especially in a sports town like Boston."

For Daye, his staff and players, lacrosse isn't about a paycheck.

"We don't make a whole lot of money," he said. "We do it because we love the sport. Coaching is a part-time job with full time hours."

Players and coaches have jobs outside the team, some in the sport, some not in the game.

Daye realized people were taking notice a few days after winning the title, and of course at the Red Sox and Patriots games.

"It really hit home when I was outside putting training wheels on my youngest daughter's bike," he said. "A random mom turned around, pulled into the driveway and said she's not a really big lacrosse fan, but watched the game. It was pretty cool. It's good to see the sport get to that level. There's still a long way to go."

Daye said his team was focused on the prize from the very beginning of the season.

"From training camp our goal was to win this thing," he said. "The media put it on us. They said this was the year for the Cannons. We felt we had to do it.

"Winning was a feeling of relief and elation. You see the commercials with the NHL players and how they're speechless. The players put so much into it. To have it come together and happen is an indescribable feeling. You're on top of the world."

The season opened with a four-game homestand, followed by a four-game road trip.

"We got off to a good start," Daye said. "That was a good thing being home. It gave us a chance to be together a little longer. Usually we're only together the night before a game. It was an important reason we got off to a good start."

While many local sports stars move to the area during playing or coaching days, Daye has an even deeper connection.

After playing on the 1991 North Carolina team that played in three Final Fours and won a National Championship , the Long Island native played for Cannons as a goalie in 2001-2002, was the team's MVP in 2001 and a league All-Star.

He coached at Boston College and met his wife in Newton when they were introduced by mutual friends.

Alison is a Hingham native. The family lives in her childhood home, and Daye is active in the Hingham Youth Lacrosse program.

"She watched the sport but was never a big enthusiast," Daye said of Alison. "She followed my playing career with the Cannons."

Boston Cannons head coach Bill Daye takes a moment to pose with the Steinfeld Trophy (the Stanley Cup of Major League Lacrosse) at his Hingham home last Wednesday. The Cannons won the MLL championship last weekend.

Daye said Alison is athletic, having run track and cross country.

He thinks his kids, Adison and Ollie have the athletic genes, but will let that come naturally.

"Adison tried youth lacrosse at an introductory level," Daye said. "But I won't push them. I want them to want to play."

The family does cheer him on.

"Every home game they're right there on the 50 yard line," Daye said of his family. "Right in the front row."

As for his own youth, Daye played baseball when he was growing up and didn't play lacrosse until eighth grade.

"I played Little League baseball when I was six and seven years old," he said. "I was pretty good. Then at 13 the field size increased and my skills disappeared. A friend, Mark Miller, convinced me to play lacrosse and the rest is history."

both will have a chance to win it when the games start.

A strength this year should be defense.

The Skippers return nine starters from what was a very good unit last year.

Chris Murphy and Sean McKenna are the starting linebackers. Kimani Hale-Sadm and Kyrel Jaundoo will be on the defensive line, while Dean McNary and Drew Nahill are the corners.

Shane Haggerty will handle the call at safety and Alex Evans will be all over as a rover, taking a hybrid linebacker/defensive line role.

Conor Dooley and Derek Froio are both new to the defense.

Froio will be the nose guard and Dooley will play defensive end. Jack McElgunn will take the duty at defensive tackle.

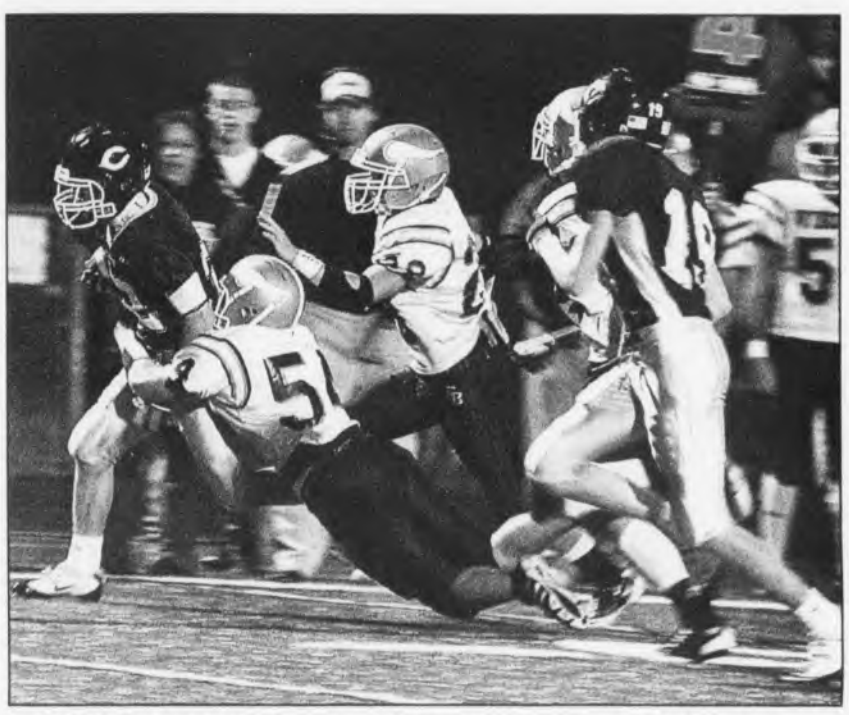
Froio is a decorated wrestler.

The season opener is scheduled for tonight at Quincy.

Afanasiw knows what needs to be done for his team to succeed.

"The offense has so many new faces that they just need to stay composed," he said. "Hopefully they'll feel comfortable with their assignments. If they do, there's enough athleticism to score points. Defensively they know they're good. They have confidence. They just need to play with discipline and stay in the team oriented system. If we do that, we won't give up big plays and lots of points. If we stick to the details the rest will take care of itself."

Afanasiw, his staff and the team are more than ready for kickoff.



"It's been a long preseason," he said. "Three weeks without a game is a long time. They're finally ready to turn loose on someone else. I think they're a little sick of hitting each other.

"For the coaches the preseason can be tedious and tiresome. There's a lot of teaching and reapeating of drills. When you're finally ready to start a game plan for a team and tweak assignments and make a plan, that's the best part of coaching. We love to come up with ways to attack and defend an opponent."

Cohasset opens at Quincy, then has a road trip to Hingham and a home date with Scituate before opening South Shore League play at home against Carver Sept. 30.

The first three teams on the schedule are all higher division teams.

"We've had success against them," Afanasiw said of the opening stretch. "I like the fact we're playing up. It challenges them to rise to the occasion. They're fun games. The Scituate kids have all played youth football together with our kids, and Hingham, the kids have taken it on their own. It's developed into something big. I don't have to say anything before that game. The kids have given it it's own life."

Cohasset's Kyle Livingstone played well last year while filling in for a missing Thomas Flibotte. Livingstone will be the cornerstone of the rushing attack this season.

Orner has been very strong in the preseason.

"Kayla looks amazing," Giuliano said. "She's gotten better every year. This year she's putting it all together. She can dodge people at slow speed. She and Sage reach so long that they don't need to move their feet. They neutralize the opposition. Kayla has a strong, elusive powerful drive. She's amazing."

In the back, Caitlin DeAngelis and Angela Cipolla return. Both have offensive touch from the back.

Giuliano said she has a very solid group of seniors, and has a group of young players making their way up.

"We have a few up and coming sophomores," she said. "The freshman team was very good last year. The sophomores look good, but they are unproven. Two girls, Mackenzie Axelson and Maddie Curley are both looking good. They show a lot of promise."

Giuliano knows not to expect the same team as last year.

"Someone said to me we'll have a different season this year," she said. "That's true. There will be some aspects that are the same, some will be better and some won't. We'll take it one game at a time, the way we did last year. We're looking forward to a great season. No matter what happens, we'll have fun."

confident and ready for games."

McCray went to San Marin High School in Novato, Calif. She played at Santa Clara University and for the U-17 and U-23 U.S. Women's National Teams before getting drafted by FC Gold Pride of Women's Professional Soccer in 2009. McCray, who also played one year for the Washington Freedom, talked about other keys to the high school game, and not just on the field.

"High school soccer is a special experience to build relationships and memories that will last forever, so it's important to also have fun with your teammates while also focusing on your personal success," she said. "A player should soak up team victories, learn and support their teammates through tough loses, and encourage the group to stay focused on team goals through the entire season."

More locally, Pembroke's Luke Vercullone, who now plays for the Rochester Kickers in United Soccer Leagues shared his thoughts for a successful high school season:

"It takes a good coach and a united, athletic group of players," Vercullone said. "In high school, it isn't all about playing the most skillful soccer. If you have a very athletic team with good tactics clearly communicated by the coach, you can go far no matter the skill level. If this group is committed to succeed, focused on that goal, and has good chemistry (fun together, enjoying each other on/off field), then they will succeed."

Thanks to Meagan McCray for taking time out to do the interview. McCray and her team, Valur, are playing in the UEFA Women's Champions League later this month.

Now, onto the first rankings of the 2011 season.

Boys

1. Hingham - Nine returning starters from a team that went 10-5-4 and won a share of the Patriot League Keenan title, well, that's not a bad problem for Head Coach Ken Carlin. James Rosso and Ryan King, last year's leading scorers, both return, and the defense is anchored by one of the best sweepers in the Patriot League – Jake Godfrey.

2. Weymouth - The loss of four Bay State Carey all-stars will sting the 2010 Division 1 South Sectional finalists, but not for too long. The Wildcats have depth. They also return their leading scorer from a year ago – T.J. Butler – as well as keeper Scott Greenwood, who posted 13 shutouts in 2010. Don't expect Weymouth to have a down year by any means despite the loss of immense talent.

3. Marshfield - The Rams lost five key players, but seven starters return from a team that qualified for the Division 1 postseason as the number 14 seed (10-6-2 record). This is Marshfield's deepest team in years, and the Rams will rely on forward Evan Jastremski to provide the offensive spark, while keeper Ryan Bertone holds down the fort in the defensive third.

4. Duxbury – The Dragons took a major hit, losing seven seniors to graduation, seven players who saw significant minutes throughout last season. But the team proved that it also could rely on its underclassmen, evidenced by a 6-1-1 run late last season, one in which keeper Justin Marino solidified with his play in goal. If the team can remain healthy, the Dragons should be fine. Midfielder Mitch Barrington and outside back Ben Schroeder lead the senior class.

5. Norwell - Coming off one of its best season's in the program's history, Norwell finds itself in decent position heading into the 2011 campaign. The 2010 South Shore League champions returned to the practice field ready to continue the success from last year's 14-2-3 season. With a dangerous mix of midfielders, a group that includes Peter Marchetti, James Arnold, Sean O'Sullivan, and Zach Wooten, the Clippers should do fine offensively. But they need to score goals to secure points. Their two keepers have very limited varsity experience.

6. Silver Lake - Graduation punished the Lakers, taking away three of its four starting defenders, keeper Andrew Hurley, and a handful of goalscorers. But Laker Land, don't hit the panic button yet. Zac Ventura's ability to outpace his opponents will see him hit the back of the net on a daily basis, while Jake Monroe could also regularly add to the score sheet.

On the bubble: Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover

Girls

1. Weymouth - Nine returning starters from a team that only lost two games during the regular season bodes extremely well for coach John MacIntyre. He has one of the nation's top recruits in midfielder Shannon Conneely. Weymouth has a strong backline, anchored by captain Devan Ratta, that will help protect keeper Michaela Stuart. The race for the state title begins now, and the Lady Wildcats may very well find themselves hoisting that trophy in November.

2. Marshfield - This is the year Head Coach Dominic Centorino has been waiting for. He has 18 returning players from last year's varsity roster, including two phenomenal goal scorers in Brooke Sweeney and Jill Clapp. The Lady Rams went 10-5-4 in a season slowed by a couple of key injuries. Marshfield has the entire field covered this season, with strength up top and in the middle, an impenetrable backline, and a pair of keepers capable of racking up one clean sheet after another.

3. Duxbury - The loss of current Division 1 college players Melissa Gavin (Yale) and Emily Gallagher (Holy Cross) in addition to the 15 other seniors from last year's team definitely puts a damper on Duxbury ... on paper. This team continuously churns out new talent and has a number of players who earned significant playing time last year, including midfielder Lily Peterson and forwards Laura Nee and Emily Weimer. The rock of this team is junior sweeper Madi Lawson, arguably the strongest backline player in the league.

4. Silver Lake - The Lady Lakers lost a ton of talent in the offseason, particularly in the middle with captain Haley Stack, but the attacking personalities on this squad make for a dangerous threat up top. On the other end of the field, goalkeeper Taylor Grifa impressed as a junior last season. She's expected to do more of the same this fall. Silver Lake looks to be one of three teams battling for the Patriot League title.

5. Scituate - A young, but very talented squad is what Head Coach Ross Maki will field this season. The Lady Sailors certainly made a statement last year, earning a spot in the postseason, where they lost to a Duxbury squad that advanced all the way to the South Sectional finals. Seniors Molly Peters and Kate Lemire are the leaders of this group this fall, and the junior class is also very dangerous.

6. Norwell - This is a whole new era for Norwell High School soccer as longtime coach, the man who started the girls' soccer program at Norwell High, Bruce Emerson handed off the reigns to Kara Connerty. No stranger to success, having built the Pembroke High girls' program from the ground up and into legitimate contenders, Connerty has a solid group of players to work with at Norwell. That crew includes Providence College bound forward Darci Vierra and senior forward Allie DeBenedictis. In goal, the Lady Clippers have one of the state's top keepers on the club level, Birdget Conway, who has had an exceptional career with Scorpions Soccer Club.

On the bubble: Hingham, Rockland, Plymouth North

2010 Final Rankings:

Boys: 1. Weymouth, 2. Duxbury, 3. Braintree, 4. Cohasset, 5. Silver Lake, 6. Norwell

Girls: 1. Duxbury, 2. Plymouth South, 3. Pembroke, 4. Norwell, 5. Silver Lake, 6. Weymouth

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. SOCCER

"We let them play about 30 minutes in our end in that second half," said Abington coach John McGuinness, "and what saved us was simply that our goalie played out of his head. I think in conditions like this the offense tends to be more effective, because you get more sloppiness. But we're a small team, with just 16 players, so we're not able to sub out as often as others; these kids have to dig deep."

Last year talent and experience on the backline was a major strength for Cohasset, but with graduation taking away a senior goalkeeper and two starting fullbacks, the Skippers have had to retool. Freshman goalie Pat Federle has a fellow freshman, a sophomore, and a junior starting in front of him, and that young quartet may have been a bit flummoxed by their first moments in the varsity spotlight.

Abington took a quick lead just four minutes into the game when Mark Gambon converted a McLaffferty lead pass. The Green Wave continued to press, and a Charlie Gagne feed resulted in a great header chance from Gambon in the 10th minute, denied only by a solid Federle save.

Cohasset began to establish some control after about 15 minutes, but a quick counter attack from the home team extended the lead. After an out of bounds deep on the left sideline, Gagne made a long throw-in into the box, where Eddie Neary headed it forward. As Federle came out to reach for that looping ball, McLafferty got there first and headed it over the netminder for a 2-0 advantage at 18:26.

"When we gave up those two scores early, I really think it was a case of coming out nervous and tentative," said Cohasset coach Jim Willis. "The young kids we have starting on defense and in net are very talented, but it was obvious their nerves were playing a role early, and we got off to a very slow start as a result. Once we got to settle down, and get into our game, we really played well."

Cohasset's new lineup got an added wrinkle thrown at it Tuesday, when defender Anthony Nahill suffered a quadriceps pull in the first half. Midfielder Brendan Kearney shifted back and played the rest of the day as a fullback.

"Having to pull Brendan back to fullback made things a little more difficult, but he really did a fine job," said Willis. "I was glad to see this kind of a comeback, because we were in a pretty big hole early. Sometimes you do get more offense on days like this, because there are more crazy bounces."

Cohasset drew within one later in the half when Jamie Timothy's long lead pass was headed precisely into the net by a diving Nick Brown at 22:46.

Cohasset tied it up at 67:31 as MacCormack chased down a long lead pass on the right side, waited for the defense to come out at him, and then blasted it into the back of the net.

MacCormack also had a golden opportunity on a header in the 74th minute, and Jonah Adkins unleashed a 25-yard laser shot in the 78th minute, but Williams was able to make superb saves on both to preserve the tie.

According to CNN, the old color-coded terror threat advisory system was raised to red once and orange five times in nine years. The green and blue levels were never used.

'Our lives changed forever'

Christie Coombs reflects on 9/11 and the 10 years since

By Seth Jacobson
sjacobson@wickedlocal.com

Abington resident and 9/11 widow Christie Coombs returned from New York City on Wednesday, Aug. 31 with a piece of steel 31 inches in length, weighing 206 pounds. It is a piece of what was left of the World Trade Center after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

"The steel is our gift to the town in light of all the support the town has shown us," Coombs said, adding the steel will eventually be on display outside the Abington Police Station on Central Street.

"It's a piece of history," she said. "And it will serve as a reminder that 9/11 affected us all."

Coombs said the steel is not a memorial to her late husband, Jeffrey, but rather a memorial commemorating the events of 9/11 and a memorial to this country.

Christie said she was able to get the piece of steel by applying for it through the New York City Port Authority Police.

Jeffrey Coombs was killed during the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. He was a passenger on American Airlines Flight 11, the first plane to hit the World Trade Center on that infamous day.

She said it's hard to believe it's been almost 10 years since the terrorist attacks that took her husband along with thousands of others and changed the face of the world.

"It's hard to describe the last 10 years," she said. "Sometimes it seems like the attacks were just yesterday. Sometimes it seems they were a lifetime ago. You'll hear lots of other 9/11 families saying the same thing.

"There's been a lot of misery, some joy, some surprise and some wonderment. Overall, we're like any other family that's had to deal with the death of a loving husband and father."

Christie has three children, Matt and Meaghan, who are in college, and Julia, a senior in high school.

"My kids have hit all these milestones and their dad hasn't been there to see them," Christie said. "It's hard."

Christie said almost 10 years later her family still has to relive the events of 9/11, as there is always something on the news that brings it back, the most recent event being the killing of Osama bin Laden.

"I checked on Julia around midnight on the day bin Laden was killed," Christie said. "She was in her room. She just looked at me and said, 'This doesn't really change anything does it?' It was great to know that bin Laden wouldn't be able to hurt people anymore but it didn't mean the end of terrorism. And it certainly didn't mean Jeff was going to walk in the front door.

"Whatever it may be, there's always something on TV that throws the events of 9/11 back in our faces. You can't get away from it."

Christie added she was recently informed that there are new methods of testing unidentified human remains from Ground Zero.

"So we could get a call any day regarding Jeff's remains," Christie said. "It's like reliving the whole thing."

For the past 10 years, Christie has dealt with Jeff's death by helping others through the Jeffrey Coombs Memorial Foundation, which she said "assists Massachusetts families who face financial and emotional challenges due to death or illness. It also helps fund enrichment programs within Abington's schools and offers scholarships to local students.

"Two months after Jeff was killed, me and the kids were sitting around the house talking," Christie said. "We were seeing all the wonderful things people were doing for us. We all figured we could sit around and feel sorry for ourselves or we could turn our horrible loss into something positive."

The family chose the latter and the foundation was created. Shortly after that, family friend Donna Cherry started a road race in Jeff's memory, a race that has become very popular.

On Sunday, Sept. 18, the foundation will sponsor the 10th annual Jeff Coombs Memorial Road Race and family day. The 5K race will begin at the Woodsdale Elementary School at 128 Chestnut St., Abington.

Much more than just a local road race, the event has become a large regional event, attracting more than 1,000 people annually from all over Massachusetts and beyond. Occurring just one week after the 10th anniversary of Sept. 11, this year's event will honor the nearly 3,000 victims killed in the attacks, and more specifically the 206 with ties to Massachusetts.

The event will feature a variety of children's activities, including face painting, balloons, clowns, caricature artists and a children's run at 8:30 a.m. There will also be an assortment of complimentary food ranging from hotdogs, to chili, pizza, ice cream and snacks. It will also feature a disc jockey, demonstrations, Crazzy Critters (reptiles), more than 100 raffle prizes and more. The top three runners will receive medals in a number of categories, including a stroller division.

"It has become quite a big event over the years," Christie said. "We were thinking of ending it after this year but so many people have told me we should keep it going."

Aside from the foundation, Christie is always looking for ways to help others.

Over the past year, she has made an effort to spread the word about Sept. 11 being "a day of service." The federal government passed the legislation last year to make 9/11 a National Day of Service and Remembrance.

In March of 2010, Christie got a chance to speak to other women at a conference on terrorism in Vienna, Austria. She called it "one of the most enlightening and inspiring journeys of my life."

Christie said the conference was comprised of 14 other women from countries ranging from Somalia, Pakistan, Palestine, Northern Ireland, Yemen, Indonesia and the UK.

The conference, sponsored by Women Without Borders, marked the third annual Sisters Against Violent Extremism (SAVE) event, a campaign launched in 2008 by Women Without Borders.

All the women at the conference had been touched by terrorism in some way, shape or form. Christie had the opportunity to share her story while she was there.

In her speech, she stated, "My family and I were living the life of a typical young American family…There were five of us – my husband Jeff of nearly 17 years, our three children and me. We were happy and content in our Boston suburb, seemingly a world away from the harsh realities of hatred and violence.

"But one Tuesday morning, my husband got up and went to work, which that day meant flying to LA for a conference. I kissed him goodbye at the train station, not realizing that it would be the last time I'd ever see him or touch him.

A 31-inch, 203-pound section of the World Trade Center will eventually serve as the centerpiece for a 9/11 memorial in Abington. The piece of steel was brought back from New York City this week by 9/11 widow and town resident Christie Coombs. COURTESY PHOTO

"That Tuesday was Sept. 11, 2001. The flight Jeff boarded was American Flight 11; the first plane to be hijacked and deliberately flown into the World Trade Center in New York City like a deadly missile, killing all on board and numerous others in the building.

"At that moment, our lives changed forever, and we were thrown into a world we knew nothing of except at a distance. The world of terrorism became our world."

Over the past 10 years, Christie has also been one of the most quoted of all the 9/11 widows.

"It was kind of something I fell into," she said. "The day after Jeff died, I found myself in my living room talking to a reporter. I needed to tell people that Jeff was dead. After that, the media caught on that I could do an interview and a lot of reporters put me on speed dial. I don't consider myself a spokesperson. I just found myself in this position."

These days, Christie still communicates with other families who lost loved ones on 9/11.

"We call ourselves 'one big family that none of us wanted to be a part of,'" she said.

This year, Christie will see many of those 9/11 families she has come to know, as she will be spending Sept. 11 in Boston at various ceremonies.

"It'll be a hard day for all of us," she said.

She added as time goes on, she will continue her efforts in helping others in conjunction with the foundation.

"I think Jeff would be proud of what we've done over the years," Christie said. "I really do. I've always liked the saying, 'Be the change you want to see in the world.' It's a great saying for everyone to live by."

Those coming to the road race are encouraged to bring a non-perishable food item for the Abington/St. Vincent de Paul Food Pantry. Anyone who does will receive a raffle ticket for a special prize. For more information, call Christie Coombs at 781-982-1608 or go to www.jeffcoombsfund.org or www.coolrunning.com.

9/11 NATIONAL DAY OF SERVICE AND REMEMBRANCE

Making Sept. 11 mean something positive

By Erika Enigk
GateHouse News Service

Even 10 years after the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, it's hard to imagine that date on the calendar being associated with anything positive.

David Paine plans to change that.

The co-founder of the 9/11 National Day of Service and Remembrance is working toward making the anniversary not just a day of thoughtful reflection, but one in which all Americans unite in the way they did in 2001.

A way to help

In the aftermath of the attacks, many Americans found themselves recovering from the initial shock only to discover how helpless they felt. Those who didn't live in or near New York, Washington, D.C., or Shanksville, Pa., didn't necessarily have a way to help.

According to Paine, many still feel that way.

"Even though it's been 10 years, 9/11 is still unfinished business," he said.

There are still people out there who want to pay tribute somehow, and the Day of Service and Remembrance gives them a way to do that, he said.

People can help in any way they choose. They can volunteer for a local nonprofit organization, or they can do a favor for an elderly neighbor. The point is simply to remember we're all a part of a larger community.

"It's about each of us stopping our lives for a moment to help someone else," he said.

The origins

Like many Americans, Paine found himself wanting to help in some way after the attacks. A California resident for several years, Paine had been born and raised in New York and felt especially connected to the tragedy. He worked in public relations and marketing and decided to use his professional skills to make the anniversary a positive day.

Doing good on the anniversary of the attacks not only pays tribute to those who responded in the aftermath, but Paine hopes it will remind people of the solidarity of all Americans.

"It captures the spirit of unity and rekindles it to some degree," Paine said. "This is not just about what happened on 9/11. It's about what happened on 9/12."

Happy anniversary

Jay Winuk, Paine's cofounder, lost his brother, a volunteer EMT, in the collapse of the World Trade Center, and several other people who suffered personal loss participate in the Day of Service and Remembrance as well. Paine said they embrace the idea as a way to have the date Sept. 11 mean something good.

"They want to see something positive come from the events of 9/11," he said. "This type of service and tribute can be everlasting."

Long-term

Interest in the Day of Service and Remembrance has picked up quite a bit this year with the 10th anniversary approaching, Paine said. Corporate sponsors have donated millions of dollars, and people are already laying out their plans for September.

Organizations in every part of the country are participating, Paine said. Some standouts include New York Cares, the USO, AARP and Tuesday's Children, a nonprofit organization dedicated to helping the children affected by 9/11.

In the long-term, Paine hopes to make the Day of Service a part of the American culture, ensuring that future generations won't forget the significance of the day. He has lesson plans on his website for teachers and mentors to use with elementary, middle and high school students.

911 THE DAY AMERICA CHANGED

ANDREW CARD

Former Bush chief of staff remembers 9/11

By Bill Fonda
bfonda@wickedlocal.com

For Holbrook native Andrew Card, it doesn't seem like 10 years since he whispered, "America is under attack" to President George W. Bush at Emma E. Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Fla., the morning of Sept. 11, 2001.

"Time has flown by so quickly, but the memories of 9/11 are seared in my mind," Card said.

Card, Bush's chief of staff from 2001 to 2006, said he would never forget either the day of the terrorist attacks or visiting Ground Zero at the World Trade Center site three days later to meet the police and firefighters.

"I hope I never forget," he said. "I'm proud to talk about it because I want to pay tribute to people who were innocent victims and the police and firefighters who answered the call to be first-responders and who they themselves were killed."

As Bush and his entourage arrived at Booker the morning of Sept. 11, Card said it was a beautiful day, and he thought it would be an easy one.

"There wasn't a cloud in the sky anywhere in the lower 48," he said.

Before the event started, Card heard from the White House Situation Room staffer on the scene that a small, twin-engine prop plane hit one of the World Trade Center towers.

"Our reaction was 'a horrible accident. The pilot must have had a heart attack or something,'" he said.

It was only after the event began that Card learned the plane was actually a commercial jet, and that a second one had hit the World Trade Center, as well.

"That's when I knew it was a terrorist attack," he said.

After telling Bush the news, Card said he stepped away so the president wouldn't respond, and then went to the command center set up in the school to make arrangements.

"I was kind of all business," he said. "I wanted (Bush) to be comfortable enough to make very tough decisions. It was not a message I ever expected to have to deliver to a president, and it's one I don't think President Bush ever expected to receive."

Making it stranger, Card said, is that he had to deliver the message in a classroom of second-graders, not the private place where that information would usually be conveyed.

The decisions made right after the attack included not going back to the White House right away, which Card said he, the Secret Service and the pilot of Air Force One agreed on, even though he said Bush wanted to. Instead, they flew first to Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana and then U.S. Strategic Command in Nebraska before returning to Washington, D.C. later.

Card didn't get home until after 11 p.m. that night.

"It ended up being a very long night for me," he said.

Card said he had no regrets about how he handled the situation.

"I think I did the job that had to be done," he said. "I tried to offer very clear counsel to the president."

Shortly after the attacks, Bush called Russian President Vladimir Putin to reassure him, but Card said he wished there had been better communication from Air Force One, even though it has the best communication of any plane in the world. In particular, Card said they had trouble reaching Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, although that may have been because the Pentagon had been hit, as well.

"I hope I never forget. I'm proud to talk about it because I want to pay tribute to people who were innocent victims and the police and firefighters who answered the call to be first-responders and who they themselves were killed."
Andrew Card

In the days right after Sept. 11, Card said the country was unified.

"We were all chanting 'USA, USA,' and we were rallying to support our fallen citizens," he said, adding that such unity has given way to "political give and take."

Card also said the attacks led to a feeling of paranoia.

"We saw threats in places we didn't expect to see them," he said.

According to Card, the attacks led to changes in government: the FBI changing its mission to preventing the next attack, the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security and changes to airport security. But security has also extended to the population, as Card said most attempted attacks since 9/11 have been thwarted by citizens.

"We are still very vigilant as a people," he said.

According to Card, he knew right away that Osama bin Laden was behind the attack, and he was in Ford's Theatre in Washington on May 1 when he learned U.S. forces had killed bin Laden in Pakistan. Card was watching a reading of "Empires Fall," a play by former President George H.W. Bush press secretary Marlin Fitzwater and Robert Lawson about the relationship between Bush and former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, when his BlackBerry kept going off, mostly with messages from reporters.

After making a few calls, Card said he learned about the raid and bin Laden's death. He said it was a "very exciting time," but just "the closing of a chapter," and not the end of the War on Terror.

Card said he talks to the first President Bush — who he served as deputy chief of staff and transportation secretary — more often than the second President Bush, although he and George W. Bush communicate regularly be email.

One of the bigger pieces of recent political news is the release for former Vice President Dick Cheney's book "In My Time." Card said he had not read the book and therefore could not comment on it, but that he has great respect for Cheney and that while the vice president had strong opinions, he recognized that Bush was the president.

"He had great empathy for me, because he was chief of staff to a president," said Card, referring to Cheney's days in former President Gerald Ford's administration.

Card is currently acting dean of the George H. W. Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas, a post he was named to after Ryan Crocker was confirmed by the U.S. Senate as ambassador to Afghanistan and took an extended leave of absence from the Texas A&M position.

"The campus has a great tradition and community to it," Card said.

However, Card said he and his wife, fellow Holbrook native the Rev. Kathleene Card, miss New England.

"It's culture shock for us, and it's 100 degrees every day," he said.

Card owns the house in Holbrook where his father was born, and his father-in-law and sister-in-law live there now. He said he tries to get to Holbrook every six weeks, although he's not as good with that schedule as he would like.

"It is my home," he said.

HOMELAND SECURITY

As dollars dry up, is Massachusetts safer?

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

Massachusetts has spent hundreds of millions of federal Homeland Security dollars on everything from communication upgrades to disaster training since the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, but that money is dwindling.

The Homeland Security Grant Program, the main federal funding source for local and regional disaster planning, peaked for the Bay State in the 2005 federal budget at $55.8 million, according to the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security.

Funding has dropped steadily since then, with the state expecting $27.8 million this year, the public safety office said - less than half the 2005 level.

Altogether, Massachusetts has received or is lined up to get more than $350 million in Homeland Security grants since the terrorist attacks. State and regional public safety leaders said the money has gone a long way toward making Bay State towns and cities safer than a decade ago, strengthening disaster plans, improving emergency responder radio systems and better equipping police and firefighters.

"We are better able to prevent terrorism, and better able to respond to, recover from and mitigate the consequences of any type of incident or disaster," Mary Elizabeth Heffernan, state secretary for Public Safety and Security, said in a written statement. "This is about building capabilities and preparing for the worst-case scenarios."

Yet challenges remain and ongoing projects continue as funding grows tighter.

In Worcester County, work continues to upgrade emergency radio systems. In a recent Homeland Security plan, officials on the South Shore and Cape said some towns and cities still need more equipment, ranging from emergency generators to vehicles equipped to deal with hazardous materials. Emergency officials west and north of Boston recently began a new emergency planning project with local hospitals.

"Everybody's got a need and everybody can testify to the expenditures, but I think the pie is getting smaller," said Jim Machado, executive director of the Mass. Police Association.

The state has sought a more targeted approach to Homeland Security spending in recent years and will continue to focus its priorities, Heffernan said.

"Responding to natural disasters and being adequately prepared in times of emergency, including the threat of a terrorist attack, gets increasingly more difficult with fewer dollars," she said.

The spending to date has not been without critics. Civil libertarians have questioned money used in some areas for expanded surveillance or information-gathering programs that they believe infringe on the rights of law-abiding citizens.

"As the government is gathering more and more information about us ... we know less and less about what they're doing with that information, how it's used, how it's stored," said Kade Crockford, privacy rights coordinator for the American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts.

Costs of War, a recent study by Brown University's Watson Institute for International Studies, argued that the rapid expansion of Homeland Security spending nationwide after Sept. 11 sometimes led to waste, particularly in the early days. The report also said old-fashioned policing has more often foiled terrorist plots than expensive technology.

"I think the problem was that a lot of money was spent on addressing low priority, low-risk events," said Anita Dancs, an assistant economics professor at Western New England University who authored the Homeland Security part of the Brown study.

Evolving priorities

Prompted by sometimes flawed planning and communication weaknesses seen in the response to the Sept. 11 attacks, the federal government began funneling security grants to states in 2003.

To manage the money, the state is divided into five homeland security regions. Most are led by a council of area police, fire, health, public works and other officials who draw up annual plans for equipment, training and planning at the regional and local levels.

A 2008 state Homeland Security report said federal funding is shifting away from general regional grants and toward more specific concerns, such as port security and transportation.

As a result, the state said it has focused grants on preparing to deal with chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear and explosive devices; mass evacuation and sheltering; protecting key infrastructure; better information sharing and communication; and training.

Until 2008, the state and regions spent grant money on at least twice as many priority areas, sometimes spreading resources too thin, the state report said. The regions must abide by the state's overarching Homeland Security strategy.

"Now they're trying to focus it more, direct it so that it goes really to areas that promote regionalization," said Wayne Sampson, executive director of the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association.

Council representatives stress their preparations are for disasters both man-made and natural, whether terrorism or a tornado.

Southeastern Mass.

The Southeast Homeland Security Region covers more than 90 towns and cities stretching from Wellesley and Bellingham in the west to the South Shore, Cape and islands.

The region has secured roughly $30 million since Homeland Security grants first became available, the state Public Safety and Security office said. Funding peaked the first year at about $7.8 million and is slated to drop to about $1.4 million this year, the office said.

The regional council in its first plan to the state in 2004 outlined risks to the region, noting that a number of small rural towns in the area have limited resources for dealing with major emergencies.

The council found that emergency responders in some towns, such as Easton and Rehoboth, had radio systems that were unable to communicate with some neighboring communities, said Mattapoisett Police Chief Mary Lyons, chairwoman of the Southeast council.

"If you can't talk to your neighbors, it's a problem," she said. "If the only method to talk to them is on the phone and you're at a major scene, that's not going to work."

Getting emergency responders and other agencies able to work together and communicate with each other was a major priority in the council's first plan, which set aside roughly $2 million for this purpose.

The council's latest plan for federal fiscal year 2010 cited progress on these fronts, including a regionwide training and exercise plan in the works and more than $10 million spent on interoperability projects. But the report said work is still ongoing to improve communication systems.

Lyons said part of the work includes setting up more reliable radio towers and upgrading to modern infrastructure.

The council cited progress on other fronts: equipping towns and cities with solar-powered message boards and portable lighting systems, setting up new specialized rescue teams in Norfolk and Bristol counties, placing 11 trailers that contain foam used for firefighting throughout the region and reimbursing municipalities for training programs, among other things.

Law enforcement councils in the region also are setting up computer systems allowing them to more easily share information, Lyons said.

Other highlights of the council's 2010 plan include:

- $250,000 for a multi-county training exercise for specialized rescue teams, as well as $300,000 for emergency exercises at the region's hospitals;
- $325,000 for an additional armored vehicle for responding to incidents involving chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear and explosive devices. The council previously bought such a vehicle for the Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council and said they also are needed on the Cape and in the lower southeastern part of the region;
- $230,000 for further hazmat training;
- More than $300,000 for further communication interoperability work;
- $100,000 for ballistic shields and hazmat suits for the region's law enforcement councils.

Looking forward

At the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association, Sampson said the decline in Homeland Security money comes amid a wider drop-off of federal support for emergency responders.

"Most of those grants are going away or are drastically reduced," he said.

That could make it difficult to keep up with maintenance or routine upgrades of equipment purchased through the grants, said Machado, of the Mass. Police Association.

"It puts a little bit more of an onus on municipalities to backfill some of that," he said.

However, at the Central Mass. Regional Planning Commission, Dunne said the federal grants limit how much regional councils can offer for routine maintenance.

"The idea is basically once we turn the equipment over to the community, it basically bcomes their responsibility," he said.

While some Homeland Security regions expressed worry, others said the dip in funding has come as communities have narrowed their focus for security projects anyway. Lyons, chairwoman of the Southeast council, said realistically, there is never enough money to meet every need.

"We've been focusing on immediate needs," Lyons said. "We've been very conscious of the money we have."

"I don't think it's going to affect the region that much," Dunne said of the Central Mass. area. "We've already accomplished a lot of things."

911 THE DAY AMERICA CHANGED

NUCLEAR PLANT SECURITY

Numerous changes made since 9/11

By Frank Mand
fmand@wickedlocal.com

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission maintains that for more than 30 years, as part of its mission, it has "maintained effective nuclear security, emergency preparedness and incident response programs" at the country's nuclear facilities.

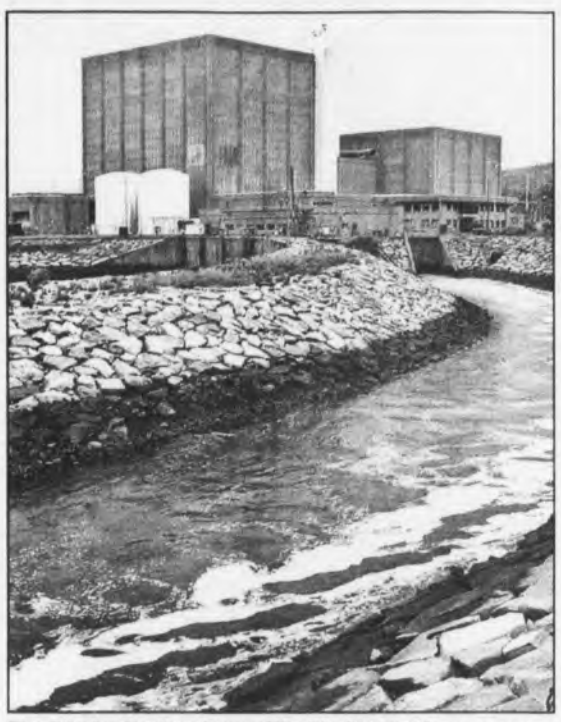
The NRC compares its security approach to its "defense in depth" strategy for maintaining the safety of plant operations.

Nuclear power plants are, the NRC says, "secure, robust structures that are designed and built to withstand hurricanes, tornadoes and earthquakes." And security systems for the plants also include multiple layers, such as "well-trained and armed security guards, physical barriers, access control and intrusion detection and surveillance systems."

Nevertheless, following the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, the NRC revisited all of those programs, policies and procedures and has made, according to spokesman Neil Sheehan, numerous changes to its security requirements for U.S. Nuclear plants.

Here are some examples:

• The NRC created an Office on Nuclear Security and Incident Response (NSIR), which focuses its resources and expertise on plant security.



• The threat that each plant must be capable of defending against – called the Design Basis Threat (or DBT) – was expanded. Specifics of the DBT are not publicly available in order to protect sensitive security information but, in general, the changes to the DBT include substantial physical modifications, featuring additional barriers, more security observation posts and fortified and improved checkpoints. And vehicles entering plants are subjected to more detailed searches at greater standoff distances. Security forces have been given enhanced weapon systems and communication equipment. And there are increased site-access controls for personnel, and more in-depth employee background checks.

• The NRC implemented the National Source Tracking System (NSTS) database, meant to improve accountability for radioactive materials and require licensees to report "the manufacture, transfer, receipt, disassembly and disposal of radioactive sources."

• Since 9/11 it has improved the realism of the force-on-force mock attack exercises, in which intruders test the defenses of each plant.

• Coordination has been increased between federal agencies regarding nuclear plant security: The NRC and NORAD now share information on potential aviation threats to plants.

It is interesting to note that The NRC conducted its own studies and determined that – in their opinion – an aircraft impact is unlikely to result in core damage or a radiological release. However, in its Post 9/11 revised requirements for nuclear power reactors, the NRC also required its licensees to take steps to "mitigate the effects of large fires or explosions from any type of initiating event."

"Sept. 11, 2001, was a significant day for all Americans," NRC Chairman Jaczko writes in the preface to the NRC report titled Protecting Our Nation.

"Those who were working for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission also remember the faces of their coworkers as they assembled in the Headquarters Operations Center and the regional incident Response Centers. They remember the long hours they worked and the actions they took to set in motion a response that continues to this day. Those changes have contributed to the robust defensive strategy now employed by licensees of the NRC."

'It's a more nervous world'

Sense of security altered after 9/11

By Rebecca Hyman
rhyman@wickedlocal.com

"People are more conscious of possible dangers and that makes them want to stay closer to home."
BSU psychology professor Elizabeth Englander

Bridgewater State University psychology professor Elizabeth Englander said the events of Sept. 11, 2001 altered the "psychological backdrop" in America and the effects are still being felt.

"I think anybody who's alive today in the United States is existing in a very different world than existed on Sept. 10," Englander said.

For those not directly affected — by the loss of a loved one or other close link to the terrorist attacks — the psychological impact is less a result of trauma caused by the event itself and more a result of the "ripple effects" on society, she said.

"Security is much more palpable than it used to be," Englander said.

"It's a more nervous world."

"People are more conscious of possible dangers and that makes them want to stay closer to home."

The change in the psychological backdrop is significant but not dramatic, as it would be if we suddenly found ourselves living in a police state or other radically altered landscape. The change is subtle but palpable, Englander said.

Kids today are growing up in a different world than kids grew up in as recently as the 1990s — even if they are too young to remember any other way, she said.

Englander said, in particular, 9/11 altered American attitudes toward terrorism.

"I think that prior to Sept. 11, terrorism was something that happened to other countries, but that day really made it an American issue. I recall traveling in Europe in the 1990s and noticing how much attention they paid to terrorism and contrasting that with the U.S.," Englander said.

"I think we learned that it can happen to us, too," she said.

Englander said 10 years may seem like a long time, but it is not long enough for the events of Sept. 11, 2001 to have receded into history yet.

That day still feels more like a news event than a chapter from a schoolbook, she said.

"If we have no more terrorist attacks, in 50 years adults may start to grow complacent again," she said.

But that day has not yet come, Englander said.

Public safety on track at MBTA

Increased police presence, passenger vigilance helps keep transit system secure

By Teresa Franco
tfranco@wickedlocal.com

Ten years after the Sept. 11, terrorist attacks on the country security at the nation's airports has increased exponentially. Restrictions on what travelers can bring on a plane — including even the amount of liquid they can transport — have been ramped up, and all bags, checked or carried on to a plane are inspected. Passengers have to remove jackets and their shoes before passing through security and the new full body scanners airports have installed.

Traveling by train is a different story. In Massachusetts, 1.3 million passengers get on board an MBTA bus, subway or commuter train each year without so much as passing through a metal detector.

MBTA Deputy Chief Joseph O'Connor said the department is aware public transportation can be a target for terrorism too. While there has never been a serious incident, he said they take the matter seriously as rail systems have fallen victim to terrorism in Europe in London, Spain and Russia.

O'Connor said the MBTA police began training for the threat of terrorism in 1997, but the 9/11 attacks forever changed the system and how it operates. Training has intensified and police patrols have increased greatly – both uniformed officers and those in plain clothes. Camera security has also been expanded and random bag checks are performed at all MBTA rail stations.

"We have to protect against this ongoing threat in transit systems in our country," he said.

The MBTA also turns to the public to help keep public transit safe. O'Connor said T riders are encouraged to always be on the look out for suspicious activity and report it immediately.

"Our passengers know their environment. They travel with the same commuters everyday, the same people at the same time," he said. "Our passengers know when something is suspicious or see someone acting suspiciously."

O'Connor said they MBTA police does receive calls about suspicious activity on a regular basis. Fortunately most reports turn out to be nothing serious, but the department investigates every one.

O'Connor said the department is constantly finding ways to improve security.

"We'll never be satisfied doing the same things all the time," he said.

Passengers on MBTA transit may report suspicious activity by calling 617-222-1212.

Passengers board an MBTA commuter rail train bound for Boston early in the morning.

'On the Job' program at New North Church

Jack Manning, an experienced employment recruiter, will share job hunting secrets with those attending the weekly On the Job program at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham, on Monday, Sept. 19.

Manning is a professional recruiter whose seminar on "Job Hunting Secrets of a Professional Recruiter" was a success last fall. He will make a new presentation titled "How to Take Your Job Search to the Next Level," on the 19th from 8:30 to 10 a.m. in the New North parlor, located at the back of the church building. All are welcome to attend this free event.

"Some people water their search down by focusing on unimportant aspects of the job search. There are some critical areas that people need to keep in mind in their search, and Jack Manning knows what those areas are," said Marie Harris, one of the leaders of On the Job. "Even the most astute candidates can lose focus."

Manning will lead a workshop on how to work with a professional recruiter and how to position yourself to get a company interested in you even when between jobs. He will offer tips on how to keep a search fresh and focused. There will also be a chance to quiz him about his insight into evaluating job candidates that he has utilized over his career.

Manning will lead a workshop on how to work with a professional recruiter and how to position yourself to get a company interested in you even when between jobs.

"Jack has the background and the insights to help anyone in this tough job market – plus he is has established a search business that is concerned with building relationships that matter," said Harris. "He is a resource for the media on trends in hiring and employment and has been featured on MSNBC, Boston's Channel 5, US News and Careerbuilder.com."

Manning is a graduate of Villanova University and is a certified public accountant. He was a financial manager for the Gillette Co. and later became a controller for Ortho Instruments Inc., a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson. He moved on to a recruiting career at KPMG, where he was manager of the Boston-based Search Practice and later started his own company Manning Personnel Group Inc., which is based in Boston.

He and his wife live in Hingham, where they have raised five children. Currently, he serves as vice chairman for the Hingham Advisory Committee.

On the Job meets every Monday from 8:30 to 10 a.m. in the parlor at New North Church in downtown Hingham. The program is free and open to anyone looking to network and improve their job search skills as they seek their next position. Sue Wetzel, Marie Harris, Shirley Rydell and the Rev. Bill Turpie, pastor of New North Church, lead the program.

THE CLASS ACTS OF CLASSICAL

So if somebody told you that the Boston Symphony Orchestra was replacing music director James Levine with a vivacious blonde woman who prefers strapless dresses and isn't normally a conductor, what would you think?

Well, it's true, but only partly true. While the BSO meanders through an era with no official leader, a series of talented guests will conduct the orchestra – some not-so-subtly auditioning for the job. The first guest conductor, for the opening night concerts this fall, is in fact vivacious, blonde and will likely be strapless. She's not auditioning for the full-time job, but underestimate her credentials at your peril.

Violinist Anne-Sophie Mutter will not only conduct but perform all five Mozart concertos in two opening night concerts at Symphony Hall Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. It's an unusual arrangement – at least in modern times – for the soloist to also conduct. But Mozart himself might have done it, and Mutter's charisma and brilliant playing should make this a real event.

It's a fall season full of starry events, and the breadth of the Boston classical music scene is not in doubt, even as the BSO hunts for its next leader. Here's a taste.

SEPTEMBER

September often gets off to a slow start, with newly arrived students still looking for the Starbucks and the ATMs. But this year, music opens with a rush – and also a pause to reflect. On Sept. 11 the Tufts music department, developing into a major concert presenter, stages "Ten Years Later" at the Granoff Music Center, with musical responses to 9/11 including a world premiere by Diane Dabby.

The Longy SeptemberFest, traditionally packing Pickman Hall in Cambridge (and still free), runs on weekends Sept. 14-24, culminating with a concert that examines the dynamic changes in music (Schoenberg, Debussy, etc.) during the WWI years.

Guerilla Opera at Boston Conservatory has begun each of the past few seasons with topical, challenging and rewarding productions, and this year with Nicholas Vines' "Loose, Wet, and Perforated" (Sept. 16–25), the talented troupe promises more of the same. Equally adventurous on the chamber music side, the Chiara String Quartet continues its residency at Harvard with two concerts this fall, beginning Sept. 30 at Sanders Theatre, including music of Richard Beaudoin, Ives and Brahms.

Early music, one of the things that Boston music lovers brag about to their friends all over the world, starts with a bang. Handel & Haydn Society, revitalized under its ambitious new director Harry Christophers, surveys "Mozart and the Haydns" (Sept. 23, 25) with keyboard soloist Kristian Bezuidenhout. Emmanuel Music, led by Ryan Turner, presents Bach's "B Minor Mass" on the 24th. On the new music side, eternally young Boston Musica Viva examines the past and the present with four premieres in "Time Cycles" Sept. 30 at Tsai Performance Center, in Boston.

OCTOBER

She hasn't been spotted on the Swan Boats, or at a Red Sox game, just yet, but Audra McDonald is everywhere else in town. The sexy singer, currently starring in the A.R.T.'s controversial "Porgy and Bess," claims more local turf on Oct. 2 at Symphony Hall, kicking off the Celebrity Series season.

Rafael Fruhbeck de Burgos conducts the BSO, Oct. 27-Nov. 1.

Star power is evident all month, with Yo-Yo Ma also gracing the Symphony Hall stage with the BSO (Oct 13–18), chanteuse extraordinaire Dawn Upshaw singing at Tufts on the 20th, and the Chinese heartthrob, Lang Lang, banging the keys at Symphony Hall on the 30th.

Boston Baroque opens its season with Haydn's "Creation" (Oct. 21, 22). Peter Hill begins Boston Conservatory's notable monthly Piano Masters series on Oct. 11, and international soloists Yefim Bronfman (with Kurt Masur conducting, Oct. 20-22) and Gidon Kremer (with Rafael Fruhbeck de Burgos, Oct. 27–Nov. 1) join the BSO for engagements.

The Boston Early Music Festival opens its season Oct. 21 with Dame Emma Kirkby, and also co-presents (with the Celebrity Series) the famed English Concert, Harry Bicket conducting, on Oct. 23 at Jordan Hall, in Boston. Opera Boston continues to look past the standard repertory for rarely performed works, this time staging Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" (Oct. 21–25), at the Cutler Majestic, in Boston.

NOVEMBER

Pianists of broad intellectual curiosity and great technical ability highlight November's musical presentations: Andrew Rangell, in a recital of Nielsen, Mozart, William Tisdale and Beethoven at Tufts Nov. 6, and Garrick Olssohn, performing the Barber concerto with the BSO (Nov. 10-12). A younger pianist, also making a mark with her strong playing, performs the Bartok second concerto with the Boston Philharmonic Nov. 17–20: Croatian-born Martina Filjak, winner of the 2009 Cleveland piano competition.

The Newton Symphony Orchestra celebrates the 100th birthday of a native son whose heart was in Armenia: composer Alan Hovhaness, performing his second symphony on Nov. 14 in a program that also includes the Khachaturian violin concerto (Joseph Scheer, soloist). The outstanding early music ensemble Apollo's Fire makes a rare Boston appearance Nov. 5 at Emmanuel Church, with countertenor guest Philippe Jaroussky. Pianist Richard Goode and flutist Elizabeth Rowe jointly solo with the BSO (Nov. 19-22), with a program that includes Rowe performing Elliott Carter's flute concerto. And the Boston Lyric Opera opens its season with a much-anticipated look at Verdi's "Macbeth" (Nov. 4–13) at the Shubert Theatre, in Boston.

FALL PREVIEW: FAMILY | JODY FEINBERG

Make fall a family affair

A multi-media production of "Peter Pan" plays Oct. 18 – Nov. 27, City Hall Plaza, Boston.

Families can look forward to such a bounty of exciting performances, festivals and events in Greater Boston this fall that they may welcome the change of season. Some are newcomers like the multi-media production of "Peter Pan" on the Boston City Hall Plaza, while others are repeat events like the Life is Good Festival at Prowse Farm in Canton. There are free community celebrations, two circuses, Renaissance and country fairs, concerts, a book festival and an exhibit of ancient Roman artifacts. Listed below by date, they're what makes living here so entertaining.

SEPTEMBER

"King Richard's Faire" is a Renaissance fair featuring knights jousting on horseback, fire eaters, stage performances, costumed minstrels, dancers, jugglers, a zoo, rides and showcase of Renaissance crafts and clothing. It runs now through Oct. 30, in Carver.

A girl escapes into a world of imagination filled with acrobats, musicians and singers in Cirque du Soliel's theatrical circus "Quidam," through Sept. 11, at the Agganis Arena, in Boston.

Finalists from the 2011 television show "So You Think You Can Dance?" perform hip-hop, contemporary, ballroom, tango, Broadway and salsa, Sept. 27, Agganis Arena, in Boston.

"The King & I" is a classic The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical set in 1862 Siam, featuring the songs "Shall We Dance" and "I Whistle a Happy Tune." It plays Sept. 27 - Oct. 9, at the North Shore Music Theater, in Beverly.

Nearly 200 years old, the Topsfield Fair has the usual animals and agricultural exhibits, games, rides and music, plus pig and duck races, Bengal Tiger encounters, and blacksmith, beekeeping and furniture making demonstrations. It runs Sept. 30 - Oct. 10, in Topsfield.

OCTOBER

If you think Hurricane Irene was something, check out "A Day in Pompei," an exhibit of ancient daily life revealed in more than 250 artifacts and body casts of people and animals, buried after the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 79 A.D. Interactive stations and multi-media presentation recreate the city's buildings, sight and sounds, as the exhibit runs Oct. 2 - Feb. 12, at the Museum of Science, in Boston.

It's time to dance – "Yo Gabba Gabba!" is a live music and dance stage show featuring characters from the pre-school television show, performed Oct. 2, at Agganis Arena, in Boston.

Celebrate fall on a working farm operated by Mass Audubon Society, at the Farm Festival, Oct. 4-5, in Lincoln. Visit barnyard animals, pick local produce, hear live music, watch artisans and ride in a hay wagon.

Every major cultural organization in The Fenway hosts indoor and outdoor celebrations and performances in music, dance, theatre, and art at Open Our Doors Day, a free event, Oct. 10, Huntington and Massachusetts Avenues, Boston.

You want an old-school circus? It's got to be Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus, a classic three-ring circus featuring elephants, trapeze artists and other performers, Oct. 12 - 16, at TD Garden, Boston.

The Boston Book Festival is a celebration of books where kids can meet picture book and fiction authors, see favorite story characters, and hear stories. It's Oct. 15, at various locations in Copley Square. Free.

This "Peter Pan" is a unique multi-media stage production from London where hi-resolution video inside a 360-degree tent gives the audience the feel of flying over 1904 London to Neverland. It plays Oct. 18 – Nov. 27, City Hall Plaza, Boston.

Or check out Tony Award-nominee Cathy Rigby in her "Peter Pan," as she stars in this theatrical production of the classic story, Oct. 28-30, Hanover Theatre, Worcester.

NOVEMBER

The story of "Peter and the Wolf" set to music by Prokoviev is a highlight of classical musical, performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with pre-concert family activities on Nov. 12, at Symphony Hall, in Boston.

The Pumpernickel Puppets bring alive the stories of Sir George and the Dragon and Three Billy Goats Gruff, on Nov. 19, at TCAN, in Natick.

FALL PREVIEW: DANCE | IRIS FANGER

Dance companies step up this fall

Boston Ballet performs "Romeo and Juliet," Nov. 3-13 at the Boston Opera House.

There are some big birthdays this fall in the dance world. Mikko Nissinen is celebrating his 10th anniversary as artistic director of the Boston Ballet. And the Dance Complex, in Cambridge, headquarters for many local performers and choreographers, celebrates its 20th anniversary.

Notable dance treats this fall: A trio of contemporary choreographers (Trisha Brown, Aszure Barton and Martha Clarke) who seldom travel north of New York are scheduled to dance on Boston stages this fall.

Some other highlights:

SEPTEMBER

"Left" is a dance version of the 1973 coup d'etat in Chile, choreographed by Callie Chapman Korn, original music by Rachel Arnold and Ivan Korn, video presentation by Greg Shea, Sept. 9-11, Zoe Dance at Dance Complex, in Cambridge.

"Raising the Barre" presents big-screen productions of classic ballets, at the Coolidge Corner Theatre in Brookline. "Coppelia," about a dancing doll and her real-life rival is performed by the Bolshoi Ballet, Sept. 24. "Esmeralda," a tale of love and loyalty triumphing over corruption, also from the Bolshoi Ballet, Nov. 5.

"Broken Shadows," an eerie program of dances featuring the work of Cambridge choreographer Jose Mateo, including "Isle of the Dead" (1993), plus a world premiere. The program, performed Sept. 30-Oct. 30, provides a nice run-up to Halloween, at The Sanctuary Theatre, in Harvard Square.

OCTOBER

Young choreographers, based in Greater Boston, are chosen by a panel of experts-mentors to perform new works in the "Shared Choreographers Concert," Oct. 21-22 at Dance Complex, in Cambridge.

Founded by Andrea Miller, former dancer with Batsheva Ensemble of Israel, Gallim Dance investigates themes of "intimacy, instability and the desire of the heart and body to feel strongly," in their Oct. 21-22 performance at the ICA/Boston.

Boston Ballet brings back it highly popular "Night of Stars," a kickoff to their season, Oct. 29 at the Boston Opera House. The well-loved annual evening of bits and snatches of the coming season which allow the company members to show off for their fans.

NOVEMBER

Created by the late Brit choreographer John Cranko and danced to Prokofiev's ravishing score, this Boston Ballet version of "Romeo and Juliet" is anchored by a memorable balcony scene. It plays Nov. 3-13 at the Boston Opera House.

"Dance - Fast Forward" is presented, Nov. 3-6, by Boston Conservatory Dance Department at The Boston Conservatory Theater. Included: works by Trey McIntyre, Israeli, Ohad Naharin, Paul Taylor, faculty member, Tommy Neblett and Danielle Agami.

The Canadian-born choreographer Aszure Barton, who is now based in New York, has been singled out for her innovative works, resulting in commissions for a number of ballet companies. This is the Boston area premiere of her company, Aszure Barton and Artists, Nov. 4-5, at Tsai Performance Center, Boston University.

"Cedric Andrieux," features a solo by Jerome Bel, a memoir of a dancer's life, based on Bel's early training in Paris to his eight years as a performer with Merce Cunningham Dance Company. It plays Nov. 4-5 at the ICA/Boston.

Check out Trisha Brown Dance Company, Nov. 11-13, at the ICA/Boston. Brown has been making startling works for decades, starting with her rooftop dances in lower Manhattan nearly 40 years ago. The program includes a survey of her choreography from 1978 to 2011.

Choreographer-dancer, Trajall Harrell and sculptor, Sarah Sze collaborate in this world premiere of The Untitled Still Life Collection, at the ICA/Boston, Nov. 18-20. The collaboration, which began a year ago in a residency at the ICA promises an unusual integration of "object and body, space and movement, time and timelessness." Free with museum admission.

MacArthur "genius" choreographer-director, Martha Clarke, teams up with Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright, Alfred Uhrey ("Driving Miss Daisy") to tell the story of Mother Ann, founder of the Shaker religion, through dance, visual narrative, and traditional Shaker hymns. It's called "Angel Reapers," and it plays at the Cutler Majestic Theater, Nov. 15-20.

FALL PREVIEW: THEATER | ALEXANDER STEVENS

Local theaters stage impressive lineup

In case you haven't noticed, the fall theater season is already off to a fast and promising start. The American Repertory Theater's production of "Porgy and Bess" (playing through Oct. 2 at the Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge) seems sure to be one of the biggest theater events of the year. But that's just the beginning of shows that deserve your attention. Take a look.

SEPTEMBER

Broadway Across America/Boston offers up a production of "South Pacific" that's based on the 2008 Lincoln Center Theater production that raked in the Tony Awards in 2008. The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, which follows two couples on a tropical island during World War II, plays at the Boston Opera House, Sept. 27-Oct. 2.

The New Repertory Theatre in Watertown snapped up the rights to "Rent" (now through Sept. 25), presenting their version of Jonathan Larson's indestructible musical about a handful of young 1990s East Village artists dealing with poverty, AIDs and really screwed-up relationships. It will be interesting to see if they're faithful to the beloved Broadway musical, or whether they do their own thing with it at the Arsenal Center for the Arts, in Watertown.

"The Infernal Comedy: Confessions of a Serial Killer," starring John Malkovich, plays Sept. 29 and 30, at the Cutler Majestic Theatre in Boston.

Local music legend Leonard Bernstein provided the music to "Candide," the Huntington Theatre Company's season opener at the B. U. Theatre in Boston (Sept. 10 to Oct. 16). We see the tough life lessons learned by the naïve Candide.

Writing plays about the Greatest Playwright Who Ever Lived — that takes guts. Robert Brustein continues his trilogy of plays about William Shakespeare with "Mortal Terror," playing Sept. 15 to Oct. 2, at the Modern Theatre at Suffolk University. This time he captures the Bard as he struggles to balance his art with his need to placate King James.

Faith is a challenging subject, but playwright Geoffrey Nauffts tackles it head-on in "Next Fall." Luke (a Christian) and Adam (a non-believer) are partners whose differing faiths continue to be disruptive, and then something happens that changes everything. The SpeakEasy Stage Company stages the play Sept. 16 to Oct. 15 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Many people consider it the great American novel, so why shouldn't it make a great musical? "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" morphs into "Big River," Roger Miller's musical version of the classic tale. We watch two runaways, Huck and Jim, deal with issues big and small as they float down the Mississippi River. The Lyric Stage Company of Boston stages the play now through Oct. 8.

Performance artist Laurie Anderson visits the Paramount Mainstage (Sept. 27-Oct. 2) to perform "Delusions," her thoughts on life, language, memory and identity. It's a unique opportunity to witness one of the foremost performance artists.

"Twelfth Night" might be my favorite Shakespeare comedy. It features Viola, one of Shakespeare's many strong women, washed up on a remote island and slowly pulling her life back together. It's the fall offering of Actors' Shakespeare Project, playing Sept. 27 to Oct. 2, at the Boston Center for the Arts.

It's not often that Hollywood stars take to the stage, even less so in Boston. But thanks to ArtsEmerson: The World On Stage, we get John Malkovich playing a real life serial killer in "The Infernal Comedy: Confessions of a Serial Killer." Sounds like a role he was born to play. (I mean that as a compliment.) It plays Sept. 29 and 30 at the Cutler Majestic Theatre in Boston.

OCTOBER

The Wheelock Family Theatre celebrates the 50th anniversary of "The Phantom Tollbooth" with a musical version of the story, running Oct. 21 to Nov. 21. A classic that doesn't talk down to kids, it tells the story of Milo's magical quest to restore the Princesses of Rhyme and Reason to the Kingdom of Wisdom.

Company One launches their season on an ambitious note, offering up Tarell Alvin McCraney trilogy of "Brother/Sister" plays, modern-day stories of kinship, love and coming-of-age. They run in repertory Oct. 28 to Dec. 3 at the Boston Center for the Arts' Plaza Theatre.

The SpeakEasy Stage Company stages "Next Fall," Sept. 16 to Oct. 15, at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Aphra Behn's new career in show biz rests on her ability to finish her first play, lure Nell Gwyne to be the star, and keep King Charles II as her patron. The Lyric Stage Company of Boston stages the sexy comic hijinx of "Or," Oct. 14 to Nov. 6.

Harvard Square moves across the river when the Huntington stages "Before I Leave You" (Oct. 14 to Nov. 13, at the Boston Center for the Arts), a Cambridge-set comedy about four friends trying to figure it all out.

A student and a teacher square off in "Collected Stories," a literary drama playing Oct. 9-30 at New Rep's home at the Arsenal Center for the Arts in Watertown.

"The Divine Sister" is a product of the unique and renowned imagination of Charles Busch, creator of "Vampire Lesbians of Sodom." In "Divine Sister," Mother Superior must deal with a postulant experiencing "visions," a mysterious nun from Berlin, and – believe me – much more. SpeakEasy stages the twisted tale Oct. 21 to Nov. 19, at the Boston Center for the Arts.

When four actors interviewed their sardonic and candid parents, the results turned into a play. In "You Better Sit Down" (Oct. 25-30, at the Paramount Mainstage), the actors play their own parents, relating tales that are – no doubt – funny, embarrassing and insightful.

NOVEMBER

The comic and musical soul of 1930s Harlem lives on in Fats Waller's "Ain't Misbehavin'," staged by the Lyric Stage Company of Boston, Nov. 17 to Dec. 17. The rollicking, rowdy, raunchy evening includes songs such as "The Joint is Jumping" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love."

In "Mabou Mines Dollhouse," experimental director Mabou Mines offers up a quirky idea – in his production of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," the male characters are all less than 4 ½ feet tall, while the women are 6 feet tall. They're promising insights into the notion of power, Nov. 1-6 at the Majestic Theatre.

In the mood for a thriller? The Huntington has something even better — a thriller based on a true story. In "Captors" (Nov. 11 to Dec. 11, at the B.U. Theatre), war criminal Adolf Eichmann squares off against his captors in a battle of wills.

FALL PREVIEW: VISUAL ARTS | CHRIS BERGERON

Fall art, frame by frame

With few exceptions, art won't be imitating real life in area museums this fall.

As Americans commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and live amid economic uncertainty, only Fruitlands Museum has devoted its major fall exhibition to the geopolitical conflicts that have shaped Americans' lives over the last decade.

At most other arts and cultural venues, it will be business as usual with major exhibitions either showcasing past masters or the creative narcissism of contemporary artists who elevate "process" beyond stirring visitors' feelings.

SEPTEMBER

On the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, Fruitlands Museum in Harvard will open "Witness to Global Conflict: 9/11 and Beyond," photographs of U.S. troops battling terrorists in Iraq and Afghanistan while trying to build bridges with locals. Curator Michael Volmar says the exhibit "attempts to change the images we associate with war and raise awareness of the lives of U.S. combat soldiers serving overseas."

On the same day, the Danforth Museum of Art in Framingham will open "New England Photography Biennial 2011," a celebration of contemporary photography by artists living and working in New England. In a separate show at the Danforth, Wayland photographer Willard Traub will document his 18-month battle with myelodysplastic syndrome through 13 austerely beautiful images in an exhibit titled "Recovery."

Providing a remarkable window into England's past, the McMullen Museum of Art at Boston College just opened "Making History: Antiquaries in Britain." It showcases 98 rare treasures from London's three-centuries-old Society of Antiquaries including manuscripts of the Magna Carta, the Domesday Book and royal portraits.

On Sept. 18, the deCordova Sculpture Park and Museum in Lincoln will open "Temporary Structures: Performing Architecture in Contemporary Art," a collaborative exhibit featuring 13 artists and groups whose works and activities explore the changing nature of the buildings we live and work in.

In mid-September, the Museum of Fine Arts will open its new Linde Family Wing for Contemporary Art.

OCTOBER

The Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston will celebrate its 75th anniversary with "Dance/Draw" (opening Oct. 7) which traces the evolution of the line from drawings in the 1960s to multi-dimensional art and dance.

The MFA will show a pair of tantalizing exhibits about naked women and the original divine hottie. Opening Oct. 9, "Degas and the Nude" will break new ground exploring the French Impressionist's lifelong fascination with the female figure. And "Aphrodite and the Gods of Love" (opens Oct. 26) will feature 150 Greek and Roman works of art to showcase the seductress and sexual dynamo who has inspired artists from the Old Masters to Lady Gaga.

Isaac Julien's "Ten Thousand Waves" (opens Oct. 27 at the ICA) will use an immersive nine-screen video installation to interweave three stories fusing ancient and modern Chinese history.

After a protracted legal battle to keep Brandeis University from selling works from its collection, the Rose Art Museum will celebrate its 50th anniversary with three exhibits about its origins and some of its most notable works and a third show about a groundbreaking film. Opening Oct. 27, the exhibits are "Art at the Origin: The Early Sixties," "Collecting Stories" and "Bruce Conner: EVE-RAY FOREVER."

"Art at the Origin" will showcase works by major artists such as Roy Lichtenstein, Ellsworth Kelly, Willem de Kooning and Andy Warhol acquired by the Rose during its formative period. Opening the same day, "Collecting Stories" will comprise 50 varied artworks that reveal the Rose collection's growth over the decades including work by Juan Gris, Louise Nevelson, Nam June Paik, Richard Prince and others. The exhibit will also include Connor's 2006 recreation of his 1965/2005 three screen film triptych that incorporated pre-existing material projected at high speed with rapid fire editing.

"Degas and the Nude," opens Oct. 9, at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

Starting mid-month, Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum will host "Chrysanthemums in the Courtyard," providing a last chance to enjoy the museum, which will close for nine weeks of renovations.

NOVEMBER

Opening on Nov. 5, the Peabody Essex Museum in Salem will exhibit 40 rare artifacts, including a leaf from the Guttenberg Bible, the earliest Western currency and Civil War sketchbooks.

From Nov. 11 to 13 at the ICA, in conjunction with the exhibit "Dance/Draw," the Trisha Brown Dance Company will perform a survey of works spanning their 40 year history.

WINDOWS & INSTALLATION[1]

Offer expires Sept. 18, 2011

The windows you've always wanted for monthly payments as low as $104[1].

Never before have we offered financing this great! In our current economy, some folks have put off replacing their windows, but with monthly payments as low as $104, you can't afford to put it off any longer. This will be the winter that your home will be warmer, and your heating bills will be lower.

For a strong window that will last, look to the company that has lasted.

Renewal by Andersen is the exclusive start-to-finish replacement window subsidiary of Andersen Windows —a company with a 108 year reputation for quality. Our replacement windows are held to Andersen's same high standard, while some other less reliable windows have been reported to leak and fail after just a few years.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR WEEK OF SEPT. 19, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) After much traveling this year, you're due for some settled time with family and friends. Use this period to check out situations that soon will require a lot of serious decision-making.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep that keen Bovine mind focused on your financial situation as it begins to undergo some changes. Consider your money moves carefully. Avoid impulsive investments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll need to adjust some of your financial plans now that things are changing more quickly than you expected. All the facts you need haven't yet emerged, so move cautiously.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Personal and professional relationships dominate this period. Try to keep things uncomplicated to avoid misunderstandings that can cause problems down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) That elusive goal you'd been hoping to claim is still just out of reach. But something else has come along that could prove just as desirable, if only you would take the time to check it out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to get away for some much-needed rest and relaxation. You'll return refreshed and ready to take on the workplace challenge that awaits you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Confidence grows as you work your way through some knotty situations. Watch out for distractions from well-meaning supporters that could slow things down.

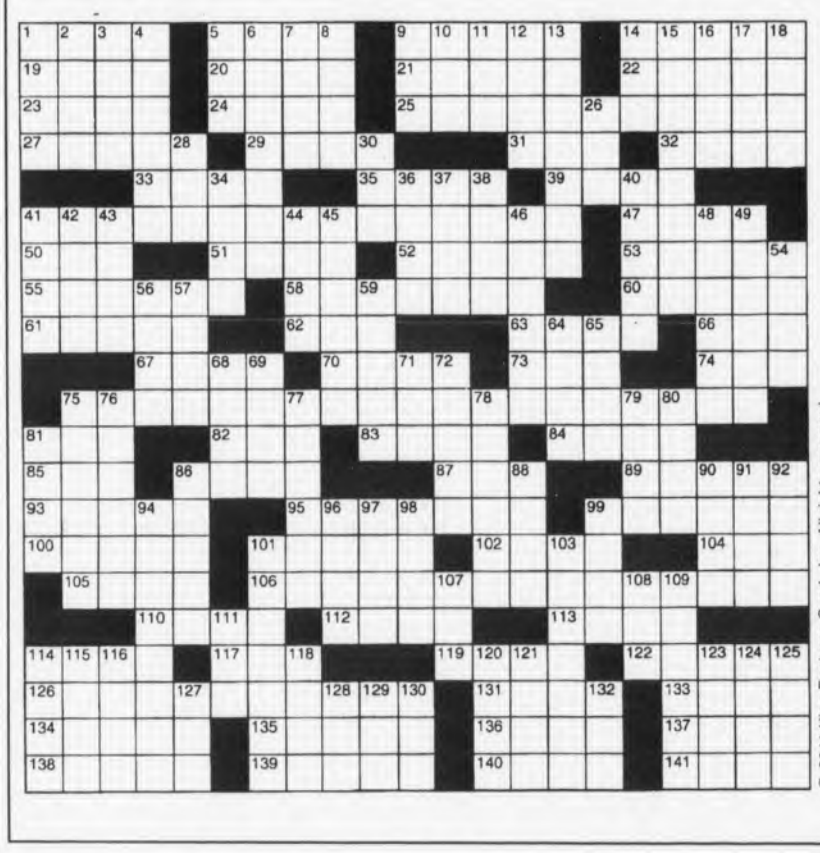
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Consider spending more time contemplating the possibilities of an offer before opting to accept or reject it. But once you make a decision, act on it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You're in a very strong position this week to tie up loose ends in as many areas as possible. Someone close to you has advice you might want to heed.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Congratulations. This is the week you've been waiting for: After a period of sudden stops and fitful starts, your plans can now move ahead with no significant disruptions.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're in an exceptionally strong position this week to make decisions on many still-unresolved matters, especially those involving close personal relationships.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The new moon starts this week off with some positive movement in several areas. A special person becomes a partner in at least one of the major plans you'll be working on.



(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You work hard and get things done. You also inspire others to do their best. You would do well heading up a major corporation.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

First Parish religious ed. registration Sept. 11

First Parish in Cohasset Unitarian Universalist (UU) Church will be registering children for this year's Religious Education programs on Sunday, Sept. 11, before and after 10 a.m. worship. Classes will begin on Sunday, Sept. 18.

First Parish offers religious education programs on Sunday mornings for children aged 3 to 12 years. This year's classes will be exploring our Unitarian Universalist Principles through age- and developmentally-appropriate stories, activities and experiences. Our UU Principles uphold the inherent worth and dignity of all human beings; justice, equity and compassion in human relations; acceptance of one other and encouragement to spiritual growth in our congregations; a free and responsible search for truth and meaning; the right of conscience and the use of the democratic process within our congregations and in society at large; the goal of world community with peace, liberty and justice for all; and respect for the interdependent web of all existence of which we are a part.

Pre-kindergarten/kindergarten aged children will use the Chalice Children curriculum to learn about Unitarian Universalism through songs, stories, finger-plays, craft activities, a tour of the church buildings and planting spring-flowering bulbs on the church grounds.

Grades one to three will learn the Seven Principles and find examples of how to live them in the words and actions of notable men and women from UU history.

Grades four – six, using The Questing Year program, will make both outward and inward inquiries, exploring the principles' meaning in their own lives, and how they can be lived right now, today, by defining and carrying out a community service project.

Sunday evening programs are offered for students in grades seven to 12, including a Youth Group jointly sponsored by First Parish UU Scituate.

Nursery care is offered on Sunday mornings during the 10 a.m. worship service for babies and toddlers. On the first and third Sundays of each month children attend the first 20 minutes of the worship service in church before going to their classes. On the other Sundays, children begin the morning with classes, then join together for a children's worship service.

For more information about Religious Education programs, contact Jill M. Hall, the director of Religious Education, at 781-383-1100 ext 3, or by email at justjill@comcast.net

Isabel C. Kelley

COHASSET – Isabel Cavanagh Kelley, of Cohasset, died Aug. 31, 2011, at age 85. Isabel passed away peacefully after a courageous battle with Parkinson's Disease.

She was the devoted mother to six children, Bill, David, Peter, Donald, Karin (Kelley) McKelvey, Paul; 14 grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. Isabel is survived by brothers, Paul and Robert; sisters, Celia and Mary. She was the sister of the late Grace Curran.

Isabel was an inspiration to all who met her. She was an extraordinary sailor, tennis player, skier, gardener, sister, mother and most importantly a positive example for all who met her.

A memorial service Saturday, Sept. 10, at 2 p.m. St. Stephen's Parish, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Mass General/MIND (MassGeneral Institute for Neurodegenerative Disease) at give.massgeneral.org/mind or to MGH/MIND MGH Development Office, Attn: Shawn Fitzgibbons, 165 Cambridge St., Suite 600, Boston, MA 02114.

October may not be on everyone's mind just yet, but it's not too early to get people thinking about Breast Cancer Awareness Month and the third annual GateHouse Media campaign.

A big part of last year's successful coverage was the inspiring and compelling stories readers shared in their own words. Breast cancer survivors and those touched by the disease through family and friends provided insight and personal stories that truly took our coverage beyond the statistics and the technology associated with the disease.

TOWN MANAGER

Coughlin's "11 for '11"

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Town Manager Mike Coughlin is a fan of sports analogies.

Staying true to character, Coughlin presented selectmen with what he refers to as "the game plan," his goals and objectives for Cohasset for the end of the year. During the selectmen's meeting Sept. 13, Coughlin laid out an 11-point plan he called his "11 for '11."

"I know it's a lot, but I'm thinking bold. This is to begin the dialogue," he said. "I will be in the trenches with the department heads. We might not be able to get it all done, but we can at least volley ideas around a common table."

"I know it's a lot, but I'm thinking bold. This is to begin the dialogue."
Mike Coughlin

Selectman Ted Carr called Coughlin's plan "a great place to start."

Coughin's points are as follows:

• Improving the financial department — "Our goal is to have financial stability," Coughlin said. This will involve a restructuring of the town's financial department, so that "quarterback" John Stanbrook does not have to do the work of both a financial director and town accountant.

DEP pays a visit to site

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It was a cold, gray and misty afternoon on Thursday, Sept. 8, but that didn't stop a crowd of around 30 people from forming around Cat Dam.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) sent Greg DeCesare, a representative from its Southeast regional office, to conduct a walkabout at Cat Dam on Nichols Road. Town Manager Mike Coughlin, Town Counsel Rich Hucksam, several selectmen, several members of the conservation commission and a large group of citizens who either supported or opposed the Notice of Intent (NOI) ordering a new schedule for flushing for inner Little Harbor all turned out to share their views and hear what the DEP's representative had to say.

The most-recent NOI was approved by the conservation commission and subsequently appealed by approximately 21 petitioners last month. The petitioners asked the DEP for a superseding order of conditions for the operation and maintenance of the dam.

"The scope of my review is strictly with the Wetlands Protection Act (WPA)," DeCesare said. "I know Cohasset has their own bylaws and wetlands regulations, so we'll have to separate those issues."

The site visit quickly turned into a public hearing, and at times a debate. Supporters from each side of the issue were given time to say their piece. Hucksam was the first to speak.

"We're asserting that the order of conditions that was issued by the conservation commission should be affirmed by DEP," Hucksam said. "There was a lot of conflicting expert evidence that

COHASSET DAY

Food and family fun

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Food, fashion and family friendly festivities all converge at the fourth annual Cohasset Day.

The event will take over downtown Cohasset Sunday, Sept. 18, from 1 to 6 p.m. People will have the opportunity to stroll through shops, sample food, learn about local non-profits and play games.

Cohasset Day kicks off with a parade featuring the "Decorated Bicycle Parade," Daughters of the American Revolution and the sounds of the Rusty Skippers. The parade will be followed by "Classic Cars Concours" at 2 p.m. There will be children's games on the Common, including a potato sack race and dunk tank.

"There are plenty of things for kids to do," said Matt Cunningham, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Children will also have the chance to meet Erik, the police department's new K-9. Erik, a German shepherd from Slovakia, has already made the rounds at the

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

Flu shot 101

Flu season is nearly upon us. While the season doesn't peak until winter, there's no harm in preparing early. Cohasset Public Health nurse Mary Goodwin said that the flu vaccine helps keep people healthy throughout the fall, winter and spring. This year's vaccine is a three-in-one and includes the H1N1 (swine flu) vaccine.

"The best way to prevent the flu is to get the flu shot," said Goodwin. She also reminded people to cover their coughs and wash hands frequently. Goodwin urges people to plan ahead and start preventing the flu now.

"The vaccine will carry you right through flu season," which lasts from roughly December to March, Goodwin explained.

Get vaccinated in town for free

The vaccine is available in Town Hall. Before people arrive, they should be sure to bring your insurance cards. The flu clinic is, as always, free of charge, and is run by volunteer nurses and a professional clinical staff.

When and where:

Cohasset's first flu clinic of the year is scheduled for Sept. 27 from 10 a.m. to noon in the Town Hall Auditorium. Stay tuned for dates of future clinics.

For information on the clinic, call Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210 or send email to mgoodwin@townofcohasset.org. Any resident who is unable to attend a clinic can call Goodwin to schedule a home visit.

What is the flu vaccine?

There are two types of flu vaccines —the shot (given with a needle injection), and nasal spray.

The vaccine is not a live strain. Getting the vaccine will not give people the flu or any other type of illness. Getting vaccinated is the best way to protect against the flu.

Who should get the flu shot?

The following people should get the flu shot: children ages six months to 18 years and those on long-term aspirin therapy, people age 50 and older, pregnant and postpartum women, people of any age with chronic medical conditions, including asthma, diabetes, heart disease, kidney disease and weakened immune systems; people with muscle and nerve disorders that make it difficult to breathe or swallow; people living in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities and anyone who might transmit the flu to someone at risk such as health care workers (including those in training); emergency response workers; direct care staff; people who live with or care for anyone on this list; and people who live with or care for infants under six months of age

Exceptions are people with a severe allergy to eggs or to something else in the vaccine

Sharon Bellao

Name: Sharon Bellao

Occupation: Principal of Joseph Osgood School

Best day of your life: I have four of them because I have four children, so the days when each of them was born.

Best vacation: I went to Hawaii a few years back; it's probably the best vacation I ever had.

Favorite season: The fall – I love the start of a new school year. I get very excited.

Favorite holiday: The 4th of July. I live on the beach and had such a good time this summer.

Favorite food: Chicken, prepared any way. I could eat chicken every night.

Best book: I read "The Help" this summer and saw the movie this weekend.

Best movie: "Gone with the Wind."

Best TV show: I don't watch TV a lot, but when I do, it's HGTV.

Best music, group, or artist: I listen to a lot of Enya in the office. When I'm home, I'm very often listening to Bob Marley or Dave Matthews.

Pet peeve: I'm a pretty tolerant person, but I guess it would be when parents are not being very attentive to their kids.

Dumbest thing you've ever done: Not bringing an umbrella on the rainy first day of school.

Fun fact: I'm a licensed cosmetologist.

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

This week the Mariner caught up with the new Osgood School principal Sharon Bellao. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Goal: To get to know as many kids (in the school) by name as possible—I really want to get to know them here.

Person you'd most like to meet: The President of the United States.

Biggest worry: Our country's future right now, with the politics and what's going on in the world. I have a son in the military who just got back from Iraq.

Best part of Cohasset: Definitely the people I've met; there are such wonderful parents and kids. It's a very positive place.

Help the Food Pantry

Do you have a garden? Fresh vegetables may be left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m.

Other needs include coffee, juice, clam chowder, corned beef hash, mayonnaise, jelly/jam, canned fruit , spaghetti sauce, applesauce, maple syrup, cereal, dish and laundry detergent, toothpaste/toothbrushes and bar soap.

Donations can be dropped off at the rear e%ntrance of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays, at Stop & Shop or at local churches on Sundays. Donations may also be left at the St. Anthony Parish Center, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3.m.

To give a monetary donation, the food pantry mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Clothing collection

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation has placed a clothing donation drop-off box in the Aubuchon Hardware parking lot at 823 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation collects donations of lightly used clothing of all types for men, women and children, shoes, sneakers, accessories, handbags and jeans. They turn donations into funds for the mentoring programs, by selling them in bulk to local thrift stores. Fundraising projects like the clothing collection program are crucial in helping Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies match more children with adult mentors.

October veterans' agent visiting hours

Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at Paul Pratt Library, Room 2B, as follows: Saturday, Oct. 1, 10 a.m. to noon; and Monday, Oct. 3, 6 to 7:45 p.m.; and Wednesday, Oct. 5, 10 a.m. to noon.

People can drop in, or call ahead of time. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents – veterans/spouses – as well as for general advice. If the aforementioned schedule does not meet one's needs, the veterans' agent will meet people at a convenient location and time.

Cohasset's veterans' agent is Joe McElroy and he can be contacted by calling 781-383-0505 or by email at cohjoe@aol.com.

Step out for a good cause

Focus Gallery, 16 Depot Court, Cohasset Village will hold a benefit at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 13, to support STEP, a non-profit organization which provides short, organized informational tours of area companies for inner city high school students. The event will feature creative food, drink, and entertainment in an art gallery setting. Tickets are $50 per person and can be purchased by visiting http://stepparty.eventbrite.com. POLICE BEAT

Border collie bites jogger

On Saturday, Sept. 10, an officer was dispatched to the Whitney Woods parking lot for a reported dog bite. On arrival, the officer spoke to a 48-year-old Cohasset man who reported that while he was on a run in Whitney Woods a tan-colored Border collie bit him. The dog was on a leash and being walked by his owner. An ambulance was called for the victim, who sustained several puncture wounds to his calf. The officer then located the dog and his owner. The owner, a 64-year-old Cohasset man, reported that the jogger startled the dog and the dog snapped at the jogger. The dog is licensed and up to date on his shots. The victim was treated on scene by Cohasset fire department paramedics and refused transport to the hospital. The Animal Control Officer will further investigate the case.

Custom sign

On Monday, Sept. 8, a 53-year-old Cohasset female living on Pond Street reported that someone stole her custom house number sign, which was located adjacent to her mailbox. The sign is valued at $100. There are no suspects at this time, but police are checking into the incident.

Car accident

On Tuesday, Sept. 6, Cohasset police responded to a reported motor vehicle crash at the intersection of Beechwood Street and South Main Street. On arrival, officers found that an 18-year-old male from Cohasset, who was heading south South Main Street in his 2004 Jeep Grand Cherokee, slid into a 2006 Subaru that was attempting to make a left turn onto South Main Street from Beechwood Street. The driver of the Subaru was an 85 year-old Cohasset man. The cause of the accident was determined to be poor road conditions due to rain. No citations were issued, the cars were not towed, and neither party complained of injury.

B&E

On Thursday, Sept. 8, a 27-year-old Cohasset man called police to report that someone entered his Mill Lane home and stole his personal belongings. Detectives responded to the house and processed the scene. They discovered that entry was gained into the home via cutting a screen to an open window. Once inside the home, it appears that someone stole jewelry and several video games valued at over $700. Physical evidence was recovered on scene and detectives continue to investigate.

Harassment

On Thursday, Sept. 8, a 26-year-old Cohasset female came to the police station stating that a local man who owns an insurance company is harassing her. The woman is alleging that there is a dispute over private vs. public parking spots next to her business. She states that the male "ran a listing" on her license plate via his insurance company computer system and obtained her personal information illegally, and he has been leaving notes on her vehicle if he does not approve of her parking spot. The female has contacted regulatory authorities in the insurance industry and asked for police to log these alleged incidents.

Protective custody

Police officers were called to the intersection of King Street and Pond Street for a reported intoxicated male running down the street screaming on Sunday, Sept. 11. On arrival, they met two males who reported they had picked up a friend in Hull who had been drinking all day and night. As they were bringing him home, at about 1:35 a.m., the male became agitated, jumped out of their car and began to run down King Street screaming. The officers caught up with the male on King Street in a resident's back yard. They found him crying and displaying the signs and symptoms of heavy intoxication. He was placed into protective custody. He was released at approximately 11 a.m. on Sunday once he was sober.

Dead bird

On Sunday, Sept. 11, at about 4:30 p.m., a 43-year-old female from Red Gate Lane reported someone put a dead bird on the passenger side floor of her 2005 Honda. The vehicle owner removed the bird and she was advised to keep her car doors locked. Officers will be conducting extra patrols in this area.

POLICE K-9

K-9 Officer Patrick Reardon introduces the newest member of the police department, K-9 Erik, to the Board of Selectmen and Town Manager. From left, Selectmen Paul Carlson, Diane Kennedy, Ted Carr, Leland Jenkins, Fred Koed; Town Manager Mike Coughlin; Erik the K-9 and Officer Reardon.

Meet and greet

Police dog introduced to selectmen

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The most vocal attendant at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting was a Slovakian named Erik, the newest addition to the Cohasset police team.

Erik, Cohasset's new police K-9, was introduced to the Board by his handler, Officer Patrick Reardon, during Tuesday's meeting.

After a few excited barks in the hallway, Erik was brought into the meeting room, where he sat calmly as Reardon addressed the Board.

"Erik is 13-months-old and came over about a month ago from Slovakia," Reardon said.

Selectman Ted Carr called the dog "a handsome animal" and thanked Reardon for taking on his new role, and for taking the dog into his home. He also mentioned that Erik has been a welcome sight out in the community. The dog made his unofficial public debut during last Thursday's farmers market.

Carr also recommended Reardon bring the dog around to the schools. Reardon said he would do so in order to "let everyone see Erik before he's fully trained." So far, Reardon has attended training sessions with Erik all over the South Shore, including Plymouth and Bridgewater.

One member of the large crowd in the meeting room asked Reardon if he plans to teach the dog commands in English.

"He's going to learn Czech," Reardon said.

Carr congratulated Reardon on receiving the dog and said, "Thank you for doing this."

"I'm happy to do it," said Reardon. "It's an awesome opportunity."

Costs of K-9

Earlier in the meeting, Selectman Leland Jenkins asked Town Manager Mike Coughlin if he'd discussed sharing a K-9 unit with Hingham before approving the Cohasset police dog.

Coughlin responded that he discussed regionalization options with Scituate and Hull beforehand, but learned that Scituate's dog died and that Hull's was being retired. Jenkins asked if any of these communities might consider regionalizing the program with Cohasset, "in other words, chipping in."

"I think they'd say we owe them for the last 20 years," Police Chief Mark DeLuca said. His response elicited laughter from the crowd.

Coughlin told the Board that he still plans to look into the regionalization concept, but that "Cohasset is first priority for deployment" of the K-9. He added that, "The concept of regionalization has been made easier between the four towns (Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Hull) now that we're talking regularly on public safety issues."

Cohasset, along with several area towns, will all rely upon the new South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC), which is opening this October.

Jenkins pressed his case, stating that the K-9 program, like any other town program, should be evaluated by the Advisory Committee to learn what the long-term cost will be.

Coughlin, along with the police department, has made the case for K-9 over the past several weeks, reiterated that the dog was obtained without any cost to the town. The purchase of the dog, along with food for life and several other necessary supplies, was paid for by donations and the Cohasset Police Association.

While he projects no future cost to the town, Coughlin agreed to "put that to the test."

Jenkins asked for a five-year report on the K-9, and Coughlin said he would "go through the process."

"The chief understands, and we look forward to making the case," Coughlin said.

K-9 Erik to meet community on Cohasset Day

People are invited to come to the park next to the Post Office at the corner of Ripley Road and Depot Court on Cohasset Day, Sunday, Sept. 18, for an opportunity to meet K-9 Erik, Cohasset's first police dog. Get an up-close look at the specially outfitted K-9 police cruiser, learn about Erik and the K-9 Special Operations Unit and have a picture take with Erik and his handler. Photos will be taken periodically through the day. Limited Edition Cohasset K-9 T-shirts and bumper stickers will be available to supporters.

DANCE CLASSES

Social dancing returns to Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

People in Cohasset may be able to remember a time when boys wore dinner jackets and girls wore white gloves, and together they learned proper dance steps and rules of etiquette.

Now, Cohasset fifth- and sixth-graders will have a chance to learn formal dances to modern music, thanks to the return of the social dancing program.

Renate Devin, owner of the Boston School of Etiquette, is helping bring social dancing back to Cohasset. After people interested in her etiquette classes kept asking her about dance, Devin sought out Susan Cole, owner and operator of the social dance and etiquette program Boston Assemblies. Cole will be teaching the classes alongside her dance partner Douglas Trudeau.

"The program used to be in Cohasset all the time," said Devin. "For some reason, it just fell off. But we are bringing it back."

The new classes, to be held at the Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham, will start in November and run through February, taking place on the second and third Tuesdays of each month for a total of eight classes. Glastonbury Abbey was chosen for its convenient location and as an easy drop-off and pickup point for local parents. Hingham schools also host their social dance classes there. The classes cost $190 for the season, and full and partial scholarships are available.

"Social dance has a long history in Cohasset," said Cole, who has been teaching these types of classes for 25 years.

Cole said social dance was taught in Cohasset, usually at St. Stephen's, for more than a century before it tapered off several years ago.

"I'm very excited to be going back into Cohasset," she said. "It's a beautiful community, and I'm sure that we'll have a lot of success and a lot of fun."

In an email, Barbara Donahue of Cohasset stated that she took lessons as a child and also put four of her children — three daughters and a son — through the program.

"It was a rite of passage," she stated. "Fourteen or 15 years ago, I also had some grandchildren involved in it. It was held at St. Stephen's. I honestly don't know why it stopped."

Cohasset resident Stacy Sturdy took social dance in 1985, and is enrolling her fifth-grader Diana this fall. Sturdy wrote in an email that she remembers the class "being so much fun."

"It was a really fun opportunity to dress to the nines, put on white gloves and learn how to dance," she stated, adding that her daughter "is really excited to try it as well."

Social dance seems to be back by popular demand among parents, but what about their children who may be less than thrilled with the idea of dressing up and acting like little adults, let alone dancing with their peers?

Devin has already anticipated children's reactions and has encountered similar attitudes in her etiquette program.

"Initially, the boys and girls will be reluctant," she said. "But once they go and see that it's fun, and their friends are there, they come to love it."

Cole said children are slightly apprehensive when they first come to the class, not knowing what to expect.

"By the end of the first class, they're relaxed and having fun," she said. "None of it is really hard; it's just a little bit new."

Devin said students learn not only dancing, but also "essential social skills."

"They learn things that make them more confident," she said. "It's empowering for kids. They (will) know how to handle themselves in formal and informal situations."

The social dance students, who are required to wear formal attire — jackets and ties for the boys, dresses and white gloves for the girls — during class, learn dance hall etiquette such as standing as a sign of respect, offering an arm and escorting and seating a partner.

These "are seldom-used behaviors" these days, Devin stated in an email, "but very important when the appropriate occasion presents itself."

Devin believes that the skills social dance students learn at a young age will carry them throughout their lives.

"Learning and practicing social etiquette instills confidence, sensitivity, grace and poise in social situations, now and in the future," she stated. "In a competitive world, those with social skills have a competitive advantage."

Cole echoed this sentiment, sharing that she occasionally teaches wedding dance lessons in the greater Boston area. Cole said children she taught years ago, now in their late 20s and early 30s, recall their social dance training when preparing for the first dance at their weddings.

"I still remember the foxtrot and waltz and was happy to have learned those dances when I was younger," stated Sturdy. "I could actually waltz at my own wedding without having to take adult dance classes!"

As important as these social skills are to Devin, she also placed emphasis on the fact that students will learn how to "actually dance." She explained that the Cohasset Recreation Department stopped offering dances at the Rec. Center — which also offers Devin's etiquette classes — because children do not understand the decorum.

"The only point of reference our children have is what they see on music videos and television programs," Devin said.

Recreation Director Ted Carroll said he would love to see a dance class to improve etiquette.

"We're going to try to have dances again, but do need more parental involvement and supervision," he said. "I applaud the efforts of Renate teaching social etiquette."

Devin is in the process of sending out invitations to Cohasset fifth- and sixth-graders.

"All of the fifth graders will be invited," she said.

Devin said many local parents are already onboard with the idea; in fact, she currently has 12 to 14 parents who are acting as ambassadors of the program, spreading news about it.

"As a mom, I believe these lessons are a nice balance to all the sports programs we sign our kids up for," said Devin, adding that fifth grade is the perfect age to enroll in social dance classes. "It's a fun age. They are ready to learn this and ready to be mature. We want them to be excited about this. It's a fun way to develop another aspect of their social lives."

As vital as Cole believes these social skills are, she emphasized that the dance teachers "want kids to enjoy themselves, and not be uptight" about the etiquette portion.

"First of all, dancing is fun," said Cole. "It is one of our primary goals that children have fun."

MR. DOOLEYS

Live music

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The luck of the Irish is about to rub off on the village. Soon, Gaelic songs and sounds will fill the brand new Mr. Dooley's Olde Irish Village Pub, located on 9 Depot Court.

The pub is set to open sometime this weekend, said manager Michael Carlyle during Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting.

The tentative opening day was Thursday, but Carlyle told the Board that he is aiming to definitely be open in time for Cohasset Day on Sunday.

The pub plans to have both live and recorded music, sometimes amplified and sometimes acoustic.

Carlyle was at the Board meeting seeking approval of an entertainment license. The pub plans to have both live and recorded music, sometimes amplified and sometimes acoustic. Carlyle said that the music will not be amplified on Sundays, and that the whole building has been soundproofed.

"It will mainly be light, Irish entertainment," said Carlyle. This will include local Irish musician performances on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays and poetry readings and acoustic shows on Sundays.

Mr. Dooley's is part of the Somers Pub group, along with Hennessy's of Boston, the Green Dragon and Paddy O's. Cohasset's version is modeled after the Mr. Dooley's in Boston's financial district.

The Board voted to approve the pub's license, and wished Carlyle well in Mr. Dooley's grand opening.

"You've done a lot of work in a short period of time," said Selectman Ted Carr. "The place looks terrific."

Town of Cohasset acquires surplus military Humvee

The Town of Cohasset announced the acquisition of a 2004 Humvee.

The vehicle was procured at no cost to the town through the US Military's "1033 program," which allows public safety departments to request surplus equipment no longer in use by the military.

The Humvee has 24,000 miles on it and is in excellent mechanical shape. The vehicle will allow Cohasset's public safety personnel to respond to areas of town that their current vehicles may not have access to for medical emergencies and rescues.

"This heavy duty piece of equipment will provide quicker access to places such as Wheelwright Park, Whitney Woods, and Wompatuck State Park during critical incidents," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca added, "This will definitely allow public safety departments to reach areas of town that become inaccessible during hurricanes and heavy snow."

The Humvee will be accessible to all departments.

FORE RIVER BRIDGE

Selectmen weigh options

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen are pondering possibilities for the future Fore River Bridge design.

Last month, Weymouth Town Councilor Victor Pap III and Gary Peters of the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association presented selectmen with information on the bridge's construction. The bridge, located in Quincy, is a major gateway to the South Shore, and its design will impact Cohasset commuters.

According to the MassDOT website, massdot.state.ma.us, based on 2009 traffic counts, 30,000 vehicles cross the bridge each weekday. When the bridge is raised to allow ships to pass, traffic screeches to a halt.

MassDOT's website details two potential designs — a 270-foot-tall vertical-lift bridge or a bascule (drawbridge) structure. The U.S. Coast Guard favors a vertical-lift bridge, which will allow for a wider channel so larger ships can pass through. The river's current 175-foot channel width would be increased to up to 250 feet.

However, Peters and Pap asked the board to sign on to support a bascule design that would be smaller than the vertical lift bridge. A bascule bridge would be 72 feet high and cost approximately $200 million, as opposed to $300 million for the vertical-lift bridge.

The current bridge is a $60 million temporary moveable span bridge built in 2004. The permanent structure is expected to be complete by 2016 or 2020.

Thirteen towns are members of the South Shore Coalition, a subdivision of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council representing the geographic area of the Fore River: Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

During their Sept. 13 meeting, selectmen discussed whether or not to sign on with the Fore River Bridge Neighborhood Association's request.

"My perspective as a commuter to Boston is that the vertical-lift bridge would take forever to close," said Selectman Fred Koed. "The cost of having a wider channel there would be astronomical. The (neighborhood association) made good points. Every community in the South Shore Coalition agrees with them."

"My perspective as a commuter to Boston is that the vertical-lift bridge would take forever to close. The cost of having a wider channel there would be astronomical."
Selectman Fred Koed

"The bridge is an important bottleneck to Boston," said Selectman Paul Carlson, adding that Cohasset residents will care if they have a difficult time trying to access Boston and any points north.

Selectman Diane Kennedy volunteered to go over the letter the board was given to sign and try to "Cohassetize" it more. She plans to have a new draft by next week.

Selectman Leland Jenkins said his one problem with the letter is that it was one-sided.

"We've only heard one side of the argument," he said. "We haven't heard from the Coast Guard and Army Corps of Engineers. We don't have sufficient evidence. The issue is strictly visual, as far as I'm concerned."

Kennedy agreed, but added, "Aesthetics are important, too.

"It changes the character of the road and neighboring businesses," she said, explaining that the bridge will impact local economic development.

Koed said the bridge is "the gateway to the South Shore, what people will see on their way into Cohasset," and that he would be open to hearing from the Coast Guard. He also explained that the South Shore Coalition, of which he is an active participant, hasn't heard much yet, aside from "some national security" matter, though Koed said he is not sure why that's an issue.

The area "is no longer a shipyard," Koed added.

"It seems to me the era of shipbuilding has gone by. It seems to me someone (from the Coast Guard) should come forward," he said.

Selectman Ted Carr said the board would try to get in touch with the Coast Guard to learn more. Selectmen did not vote on whether to approve the letter, as Kennedy plans to work on a revision.

Strong showing for young Davis

The inaugural USEF National Pony Rider Championships may have been a small division at the 2011 Collecting Gaits Farm/USEF Festival of Champions in Gladstone, New Jersey, but for Cohasset native Barbara "Bebe" Davis it was a big experience and one she will remember the rest of her life. Competing on her pony Bohdjan, Davis captured the Reserve Championship in the new National Pony division, but also experienced the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat in one single weekend.

Riders in the USEF Pony Rider Championship are the future of dressage riders for our country, and Davis said she would use her experience at Gladstone to grow and as a stepping-stone for future national competitions. Davis grew up in Cohasset and her family bought a home in New Jersey to be close to their trainer, Dr. Cesar Parra and his Piaffe Performance Farm.

"Bohdjan did really well the first day. We came in second with a score of 63.611 percent while Allison Cyprus came in first with a 63.944 percent, so I felt confident with such a close race," Davis said. "During the awards ceremony my pony got scared and he never settled down the rest of the weekend and was certainly nervous during our second test and didn't perform well. I was disappointed, to say the least, because I didn't want to let my trainer, Dr. Cesar Parra down."

Parra, who trains Davis out of his Piaffe-Performance farm in New Jersey, praised the 13-year-old rider and said disappointment was the furthest thing from his mind.

"I was really proud of Bebe. It's very special to ride at Gladstone and coming up the hill to the arena, knowing there is a crowd of people on both sides can be intimidating," Parra said. "Bebe handled it really well and it was a great and growing experience for her. A show like the Festival of Champions makes you a better and stronger rider mentally and no one can ever take the experience, and what you gain from it, away from you."

Despite her pony's unsettled nerves, Davis not only rode like a champion but mastered taking part in two press conferences before taking home the coveted Reserve National Championship cooler. "I really did learn a lot at Gladstone and it was an experience I will never forget," Davis said. "The best part is when I return next year on my new pony, I will have had this experience under my belt and will have so much more confidence. And as I hope to ride on the U.S. Dressage team someday, I plan on many return trips to Gladstone."

The new National Pony Rider division at Gladstone had the pony riders up bright and early to compete at 8 a.m. and Davis said she was surprised that fans were there to cheer the ponies on that early in the morning. "It was really nice that so many people came out to watch," Davis said. "Even though I was disappointed, I know that it is part of life and part of our sport. I have to remember that I still qualified and competed at Gladstone, which was a really big deal."

Davis said her weekend at the Festival of Champions had plenty of highlights, including the fact that her trainer competed on Grandioso, a horse owned by her family, and earned a spot on the 2011 Pan Am Games team that will compete in Mexico. "That was very exciting and Dr. Parra has certainly showed me that hard work and dedication can pay off," she said. "I am so happy that he made the team and I can't wait to see them compete in Mexico."

For more information on Davis, Parra or Piaffe-Performance, visit their website at www.piaffe-performance.com.

AROUND TOWN

Yogathon will Open Doors for autism

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset, I hope that everyone had a great week and are gearing up for a fun week to come. The weekend has a number of things going on Around Town so let's get right to the news.

Here is a wonderful way to find that special "something" at a great price while helping a local Club here in town. On Saturday, Sept. 17 the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) will be holding an estate sale from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the clubhouse and grounds on Government Island. All proceeds will go to the building fund for the new clubhouse. Items available are furniture, decorative home goods, accessories, and sporting equipment. Make sure to stop by and find some hidden treasures!

Here is the news about an event that is happening to support Autism Research, something that we all are aware of and a disorder that is affecting so many. On Sunday, Sept. 18 at Open Doors Studios in North Scituate, Kim Carvette and Gina McClellan will be hosting a Yogathon at 1 p.m. All donations can be given at the door, cash or check and proceeds go directly to Autism Speaks. Participants are welcome in an all-level warm yoga practice from 1 -2:15. After practice there will be refreshments served. Open Doors is donating the studio space and the instructor. Please join them for the all levels class! Any questions contact Kim at kcarvette@gmail.com.

Cohasset Day

On Sunday, Sept. 18, the fourth annual Cohasset Day will begin at 1 p.m. in Cohasset Village and continue throughout the afternoon. Music, food vendors, stores and shops as well as games for all ages will all be taking place and more information on this fantastic day can be found at www.cohassetday.com. Grab your family, your friends and neighbors, it will be a great day for all!

Meet at the Café

As summer comes to a close, the Friends of the Cohasset Elder Affairs welcomes the colorful season of fall and all are welcome to join at the Lightkeepers Residence for the awesome Cohasset Cafe. Beginning on Monday, Sept. 19 from 9 a.m. to 11a.m. they will be serving coffee, tea and home baked goods. Everyone looks forward to seeing familiar faces as well as meeting new friends.

BC High awards

William J. Kemeza, president of Boston College High School, is pleased to announce and wanted to share that the following students from Cohasset recently received special awards at an assembly to honor BC High undergraduates.

Congratulations to Jay Salerno '12 who received an Ignatian Key Society award, Michael Fegreus '13 won an Excellence award in English II, Trevor S. Schramm '13 won an Excellence award in US History, Zachary Strecker '13 won an Upper Level Certamen Team award and Luke Johnston '14 won Excellence awards in three subjects: Biology I, Christian Thought, and Algebra I. Your families and friends are so proud of you all and look forward to what the upcoming year brings. Keep up the great work!

ASP trip

Planning its 25th mission trip, the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (ASP) will hold an information meeting this Sunday, Sept. 18 at 8 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall. Parents of interested teens and any adults interested in joining them on the trip should attend, as well. Forms are on-line at cohassetasp.org. Registering by Oct. 1 will save volunteers $75!

Book these dates

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will host a book group on Wednesday, Sept. 28 at 10 a.m. Join others for coffee and a discussion of "The Other Wes Moore" by Wes Moore. All are welcome.

Another workshop being held is "Learn how to download free ebooks and audiobooks from the library using the Overdrive catalog." This is also free to all and is being held on Thursday, Sept. 29 at 6:30 p.m.

Here is a chance to meet author William Powers at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Sunday, Oct. 21 at 4 p.m. A wine and cheese reception and book signing will follow his talk on his bestselling book Hamlet's Blackberry. This is a limited seating event. Tickets are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Cohasset Historical Society, and the South Shore Art Center. For further information call the library at 781-383-1348. This is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Last, enjoy a free movie on Friday, Oct. 7 at 11 a.m. This month's feature is "The Bucket List." Free admission and light refreshments will be served courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. For more information on any of the events or workshops being held, call the library at 781-383-1348.

Sunrise of Cohasset acknowledges local fire and police with barbecue

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset has begun a new annual tradition for local firefighters, police officers and EMS workers by hosting a two-day barbecue on Sept. 7 and 8. James Barber, director of community relations at Sunrise and the son of a 33-year retired firefighter from Pittsburgh said "knowing all the good deeds my dad did over his career, the lifesaving awards he received by the governor and taking his battalion for two weeks to Ground Zero after the terrorist attacks, I think hosting an annual event is the least we could do for the brave men and women who protect our communities and service our seniors regularly.

"This was the first year that we had the event and unfortunately it rained, however, we accommodated all the local fire and police in our private dining room and served baby back ribs, burgers, hot dogs along with cold sodas, Barber said.

Chris Mele, executive director at Sunrise of Cohasset said, "We also delivered quite a bit of food to the Scituate Fire Department and were able to feed their entire shift this past week as a token of our appreciation for their acts of kindness and dedication."

"Firefighters definitely have large appetites."I come from a firefighting family, said Barber. "My grandfather served 42 years and my dad and two of his brothers all served 33 years for the city and they were some of the best times I could remember growing up.

"The MDA telethons, the brotherhood and lifelong friendships that were formed between these men and women and the courage they displayed in emergency situations are like no other occupation except for the U.S military."

"Sunrise of Cohasset is proud of our local firefighters, police and EMS workers and we will support them in any way that we can, said Barber. "Sunrise is appreciative of the care they give to our seniors and the seniors in the surrounding communities. I remember I used to ask my dad when I was young if he was scared to go into burning buildings and he always responded back 'it's not brave if you're not scared.' After I got older and understood what he meant, I don't think there will ever be a statement that is more valid.

"Sunrise of Cohasset urges our local citizens to show appreciation to the men and women in uniform. A simple handshake and a thank you is the sincerest way to show your appreciation for these brave souls who risk their own safety to protect you and me," said Barber.

CUB SCOUTS

Registration will take place Sept. 19 at Deer Hill

Cub Scout registration will take place from 7 to 8 p.m., on Monday, Sept. 19, in the cafeteria at Deer Hill School. Any boy interested in joining Cub Scouts this year is encouraged to register at this time. All boys from first through fifth grade can join the Scouting program. Parents interested in helping with the program can also register at this time.

The first Pack meeting will take place from 7 to 8 p.m., on Monday, Sept. 26, at Deer Hill School.

OUR VIEW

Providing a Pink perspective

October may not be on everyone's mind just yet, but it's not too early to get people thinking about Breast Cancer Awareness Month and the third annual GateHouse Media campaign.

A big part of last year's successful coverage was the inspiring and compelling stories readers shared in their own words. Breast cancer survivors and those touched by the disease through family and friends provided insight and personal stories that truly took our coverage beyond the statistics and the technology associated with the disease.

We're looking for your personal stories once again. You'll soon see a reader callout in the Cohasset Mariner, as well as on the Wicked Local Cohasset website, asking readers to share their stories.

We know for many breast cancer survivors and their families these are private matters. We also know that many of your stories will inspire others facing similar struggles and give those people strength, faith and determination in their time of need.

Although this disease still carries with it pain and suffering — and heartbreak for some families — great strides are being made in the detection and treatment of breast cancer. And while there still is no cure, more and more people are beating breast cancer and living to tell the tale.

Those are the types of stories we'd like to highlight during the month of October in our newspapers and on our websites — your stories.

You can submit your stories online, or send them by email to cohasset@wickedlocal.com.

COHASSET CULTURAL COUNCIL

Proposals due Oct. 15 for next round of grants

Proposals for community-oriented arts, humanities, and science programs are due Oct. 15.

The Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to Council spokesperson Sarah Wood Torrey, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset — including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,800 in grants. Previously funded projects include the South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common, enrichment programs for students at the Deer Hill

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Selectmen endorse proposed Cohasset Senior Center

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen has unanimously endorsed the proposed public/private partnership plan to build a much-needed Senior Center. The Social Service League of Cohasset has proposed to build the Senior Center on land to be conveyed by the town to the league. The league will fund the building from trust funds under its care and with donations and grants. The town will then lease the building from the league on a long term and operate the facility. Acknowledging that many important issues need to be worked out, we have created the Senior Center Planning Group (SCPG). The SCPG includes members from the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee, the Council on Elder Affairs, the Social Service League, the Friends of the Elders and four citizens at large.

Throughout this process, we must protect the interests of the town. We will also need firm revenue and cost forecasts as well as an operating plan to assure that we have a viable project. Legal issues also must be resolved.

This proposal represents an innovative, exciting approach to funding an important municipal facility with the potential to honor and serve our large and growing senior population. We look forward to working with Cohasset residents and the Senior Center Planning Group and recognize that we must 'get this right' in order for this important initiative to work for the town and its citizens.

Ignoring stormwater can be costly

DEBBIE COOK

As we see the images of raging streams cascading through towns and undermining bridges and roads caused by Hurricane Irene, we see the immense power of rainwater. However, normally when people see water running down the street after a rain storm and swirling into storm drains, we don't give it a second thought. But perhaps we should!

People in Pembroke have learned the hard way that stormwater does matter, because their favorite place for swimming and boating – Oldham Pond – has been closed for most of the summer, due to a bloom of toxic blue-green algae. Fueled by pollutants, including fertilizers and lawn chemicals, the algae took over their pond, keeping it closed for six precious summer weeks. Just a few days ago, the pond was finally reopened after a very expensive chemical treatment.

So, what exactly is stormwater, which has become a major threat to our water quality? Stormwater runoff is simply rain or snow that "runs" across land. As it travels, every pollutant it comes in contact with is eventually carried to our ponds, rivers and lakes. Fertilizers, dog waste, car oils, even trash all find their way down ubiquitous street drains, which can lead directly to our swimming holes or water supply. There is little to no pollutant removal or water treatment in a storm drain – a storm drain can be a direct conduit to the nearest stream or pond.

The problem has become increasingly urgent as more and more land is covered with paved surfaces. In the past water would fall on the land and seep into the soil. The earth would act as a cleanser, and most pollutants would be filtered out as the water traveled underground.

All of these impervious surfaces are directly contributing to the degradation of our water. This is becoming increasingly clear close to home at the North and South Rivers. The North and South River Watershed Association estimates that many areas in our watershed are between 12-16 percent paved, putting them in the "threatened" category. Research shows that once a drainage area becomes between 12 percent and 20 percent paved, its rivers and streams become substantially degraded.

To combat this problem, South Shore towns and even homeowners are using a series of strategies, known as Low Impact Development (LID) techniques to try to restore as much of the natural hydrology as possible. For example, the town of Cohasset has constructed 60 rain gardens around almost every storm drain that feeds into Lily Pond – the town's water supply. These gardens, which are basically a basin filled first with gravel and then a special soil mix, have intercepted and filtered polluted street water, cutting pollutants entering the pond by an estimated 60 percent.

The North and South Rivers Watershed Association (NSRWA), with funding from state and federal grants, has constructed demonstration rain gardens throughout the South Shore. Most of the rain gardens are at town halls or schools, designed to intercept the runoff from parking lots. For a list please visit nsrwa.org.

Other strategies include installing porous asphalt and porous pavers, which allow water to percolate into the soil, unlike their conventional counterparts. These have been installed on the boat ramp at Oldham Pond, as part of a project developed by the NSRWA and the Town of Pembroke, with funding from an EPA grant.

Towns, like Scituate and Cohasset, have even begun enacting regulations to control stormwater runoff. For example, Scituate has a by-law that specifies that any project disturbing over 15,000 square feet or adding 25 percent impervious surface, needs to use LID techniques to keep stormwater from running off the site.

The basic premise of LID techniques is to let nature do the work of intercepting the rainwater and cleansing it, rather than using the traditional engineered solutions of drains and pipes. Granite curbs give way to natural road edges; development is clustered, leaving large areas of open space; porous pavement allows water to trickle through to a natural reservoir lying beneath.

"You'll be hearing a lot more about stormwater regulation and management in the future," said Samantha Woods, NSRWA Executive Director. "Under the Clean Water Act, the EPA issues permits to each of our communities that requires them to assess, fix and maintain stormwater pipes and drains to remove pollutants from our waterbodies. As you can imagine our communities are wondering how to deal with these new regulations."

She added, "Stormwater is often called the forgotten utility, because unlike our water and sewage, we generate it, but we forget about it and don't treat it, and our streams, ponds and water supplies pay the price."

But dealing with it may not be as costly as towns and developers think. A 2007 US EPA report reviewed the costs of using Low Impact Development approaches and found, with one exception, using LID techniques saved 15 – 76 percent over traditional stormwater pipes and ponds.

"As our communities get more and more built up, we can no longer ignore the effects of untreated polluted rain water pouring into our streams and ponds if we want healthy fish runs and clean drinking water. Stormwater can no longer be pushed to the bottom of a town's priority list. Good, cost-saving solutions are available, and we need to use them."

MAKING TRACKS

Pictures don't always tell story

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

More organizational news—As best we can recall, this article sets a precedent. This is the first article we have authored that has not included at least one photo. We do believe that pictures truly tell a story, but this week our story will be told only with words. Last week we talked about organizational changes that are taking place in Town Hall. This week we will delve into the details on a bit of a deeper level. Those of you who have been employed in corporations are very used to the experience of departmental and personal goal setting and being measured against those goals. It is interesting to note that in the nearly seven years (It really doesn't seem that long!) that we have been working at Town Hall in our supporting role, there has been no such thing as goal setting and specific performance measurement against those objectives in a formal way. Projects were undertaken with an intended outcome and fortunately, in most cases, overseen to a conclusion. The process of project management itself was rarely examined to see whether it could be improved.

We just chalked that up as a public sector phenomenon. However, that has now changed. The new Town Manager looks at the town through an entirely different prism than past managers. Departments in the past were generally islands unto themselves. Today, cross-pollination and cooperative management are the bywords. So is management by objective.

This coming Tuesday at the regularly scheduled Selectmen's meeting the Goals and Objectives of each department will be presented to the Selectmen, truly a first. Let's have a brief quiz. How many departments do you think are included in the Goals and Objectives package? Presto, the magic number is 14. These departments are as follows: Finance, Police, Fire, Emergency Management, Operations, Harbormaster, Building, Board of Health, Elder Affairs, Veterans' Service, Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Town Clerk, Assessor and Recreation Commission.

The newest department in the group is Operations. We touched briefly on this last week, but let's explain. Operations is the department that our office, the Greenbush Office, has morphed into. To put this transition into proper perspective let's step back in history. The Greenbush Office was formed officially in January 2005 as the sole point of contact to handle the Town communications with the then new Greenbush Rail Project. The role was to provide Town input to the project, as well as to handle all resident input and communicate issues back to the project. We developed this column, at that time, as a way to let everyone know what was going on, and what residents could expect to see happening. This method of communication seemed to have been well received and continues to this date.

While the Greenbush project was underway, the Selectmen asked us to see if we could get the then stalled Revitalization Project underway. We managed to have the engineering firm redo the specifications so the project could be bid. We then saw that project to completion, including getting an additional grant to fill in a funding shortfall. Other projects followed like gangbusters. There was the reconstruction of Forest Avenue along with the addition of a new sidewalk It is interesting that the addition of the sidewalk seemed to actually change the Forest Avenue area from a group of isolated side neighborhoods into a more cohesive neighborhood with easy passage for our children via the sidewalk. There were sections of new sidewalk added on Beechwood Street, and Rocky Lane over the new bridge so that the children in this neighborhood would have safe passage to the school bus stop on North Main St. The new Jacobs Meadow outfall project took about five years from the initial ideas to completion this year. Another large project was the paving to put the roads disturbed by the Little Harbor Water, Sewer and Drainage Project back into serviceable condition. There are other projects where we have become a troubleshooter, such as the Bound Brook Dam. All of these projects and others have been detailed in more than 360 articles in this paper.

In all of this work, we have interfaced with just about every department in Cohasset, but especially with the DPW. We have developed an excellent relationship with this vital but sometimes unappreciated group. We really understand how important their function is and the fact that they are unsung heroes doing a sometimes impossible job under very difficult circumstances. As a result of this relationship, the town manager has asked us to become the nucleus of an Operations Department. His vision is that Operations will include the entirety of the DPW including Highway, Tree and Park, Cemetery, and the Transfer Station operations. Once these are included it also makes sense to combine the Facilities Department into the group. Thus, there is now one pool of resources that can be cross deployed to handle normal operations as well as emergencies.

Since the Town Manager is the chief procurement officer of the town he literally is responsible for every nickel spent by the town including the water and sewer departments. Interface with these two operating departments will also fall to the Operations Department. Let's get back to where we started this discussion of Goals and Objectives, with a brief example from the new Operations Department. The overall stated objective of this new department is: "to Manage the Operations of Cohasset and its Personnel and Physical Assets in a Team Oriented, Efficient and Professional Manner." Components of this organization will include the functions of Engineering Support, Administrative Support, DPW (including Highway, Tree & Parks, Transfer Station, & Cemetery) Facilities, Water and Sewer. Each of these groups also has a specific set of Goals and Objectives. All other town departments, likewise, have their own pertinent Goals and Objectives. In future articles we will share some key objectives of these Departments a bit more. Until then, we leave you with the thought that things, they are a changin'.

FOR THE RECORD

Summer interns get 'A' for effort

GREGORY MATHIS

School is back in session, so that means our college summer interns have packed up and resumed classes.

It's probably a relief for some as I can tell you these folks didn't get much of a break this summer working with us. For those three months they were integrated into our newsroom and wrote feature stories, attended town government meetings, contributed to special sections and posted stories and photos to our websites.

This was by far the biggest group of interns we've worked with at one time. We had six interns working out of our Marshfield office, three in the Raynham office and one in Plymouth. Office space and computers tend to limit how many people we can actually add to each office, but this summer we were bursting at the seams.

While the level of their writing was impressive, the manner in which each of them carried themselves was probably more impressive. For those concerned about young people these days and the future of our workforce, there is nothing to worry about with this group.

They showed up on time, followed direction real well, made deadlines, and were very polite and respectful as they were immersed in the newsroom setting. That can intimidating even for young reporters, so it was even more impressive how they were able to fit in during a relatively short time frame.

This summer we had the pleasure of working with the following students:

Julia Campbell, a Marshfield resident who is majoring in English at Rollins College in Winter Park, Fla.

Sara Hollingshead, a Hull resident who is majoring in Writing & Rhetoric, Media & Society, at William Smith College in Geneva, N.Y.

Mary Polleys, a Pembroke resident who is majoring in English at Bridgewater State University.

Amanda Salvucci, a Hanover resident who is majoring in English and journalism at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y.

David DiBiase, a Weymouth resident who is studying journalism, photography and graphic design at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Gabriella Gatz, a Duxbury resident who is majoring in communications at the University of Delaware.

Maura Phares, a broadcast journalism major at Marquette University, contributed to the Stoughton Journal, Randolph Herald and Canton Journal.

Stacy Kravitz, from Stoughton, is attending the University of Rochester and contributed to the Stoughton Journal and Randolph Herald.

Chelsea Bengier, an Easton resident who is majoring in magazine journalism with a minor in business at the University of Missouri.

Chris Anderson, a BC High grad from Plymouth, studies journalism at Quinnipiac University in Connecticut.

If you're a student looking for an internship this fall or next semester, or know a student who might be interested in one, please send an email to gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Over the past several years our internship program has given us a chance to get to meet some hard working individuals who live in the towns we cover and have an interest in writing and journalism. There have been a couple of cases where we've hired former interns for reporting positions or they've ended up doing some substantial freelance work for us.

I wouldn't be surprised if we see some of our Summer 2011 contingent again in the not too distant future.

HEALTH NOTES

A positive approach is a healthy approach

STEVE BOBO

This column regularly discusses the current thinking about various illnesses, the latest threats to health, and hopefully, what to do about them. In addition, we cover issues of local importance which may contribute or detract from the general health of those in town. For example, the general condition of certain elements of our environment can affect us, such as pollution in our swimming places and methods of protecting ourselves from transmission of germs and harmful pathogens. Some apparently unrelated issues such as lawn care and storm water management are discussed because we know these can, over time, affect the general health. But there are other things which affect our general well being.

Medicine, along with other branches of science, has increased the pace of progress to the point that there are too many factors for the layman to consider without help if he or she has a symptom believed to be potentially harmful. For this reason, we have repeatedly said to get advice from those who have experience with many people who are apt to have similar symptoms. There is a corollary to this recommendation. Since many complaints are from conditions in the local environment, it would be wise to seek help from those with knowledge of the local situation. True, many commute to Boston and elsewhere, and many travel, but the fact of broader exposure only requires more vigilance.

Still other things can affect to our health. Frequently one reads surveys that say things like optimists or those with positive attitudes live longer than those with sour attitudes. There are literally hundreds of such studies. For example, researchers at UCLA studied a group under extreme stress: first-year law students. No difference existed in the immune systems of the optimists and pessimists before the school year began. However, by midterms, the optimists' immune systems were stronger in two areas important for fighting disease (more helper T cells and higher natural killer cell cytotox-icity). Researchers believe optimists have tougher immune systems because they experience less anxiety and depression, and they experience events as less stressful than their pessimistic counterparts. Indeed there is sufficient evidence that management of stress, control of anger, and general overall self-control plays a part in mediating some physiological factors which trigger disease.

So, are there a few things we can just do or think that will help our general health? Can we learn, for example, to adopt a mental attitude, which will allow us to develop a healthy response to an anxiety attack? Are there any such things as self-taught methods for reducing stress? The answers to these questions lie very much with the individual; but still, a qualified yes. The problem is that for each of us the right approach may be different. Nevertheless, there are a few things which many people do which seem to help.

1. Stay busy. This causes one to think less about one's self.

2. Find something you like to do and do it every day without fail.

3. The 'fight or flee' reaction is a natural response to many surprise situations. With practice, it can be controlled and replaced by calm reason.

Don't say anything until you've thought about it.

Do for others; it keeps you from worrying about yourself.

Surely, there are quantities of books about such platitudes. It's disingenuous to say these are health tips. Nevertheless, it seems that people who learn how to control themselves early on seem to live longer.

I'm sure that there are many other such rules for living which you may have; if you'd like to share them with Health Notes readers, please let me know, and we'll put them in a future column.

HUMOR TALKS

Finding a 'new normal' after 9/11

ANN AND JOHN MURPHY

Ten years have passed since that horrible day – Sept. 11, 2001. How do people heal after such a tragedy? How do we talk to children about this disaster?

None of us will ever forget where we were or how we felt on that day. Psychologists tell us that the passage of time has a way to soften the hurt feelings. Probably time does help, but how do you get your smile back? How do you get back to "normal" once again?

Many call it the "new normal." Some folks smile even if they are pretending to be happy. They smile as if in a play, just like make-believe. They say that after a while, the smiles to others are part of the healing. And, they tell their children that smiling to others brings us together, makes us stronger and helps the hurt of 9/11.

Other people go out of their way to say kind words to family and friends. "I like your new shirt!" "I love your blue eyes!" "Your school work is wonderful!" "Congratulations on getting that new job!" There are lots of kind words out there and when people use them with one another, we are telling the enemy that we remain strong and we are a great country.

There are folks who heal through hugs and kisses. When we give a hug to one who cries, we can help the tears to stop and the sun can shine again. After 9/11 there were many tears and thank God there were many hugs and kisses, too, for those who needed support.

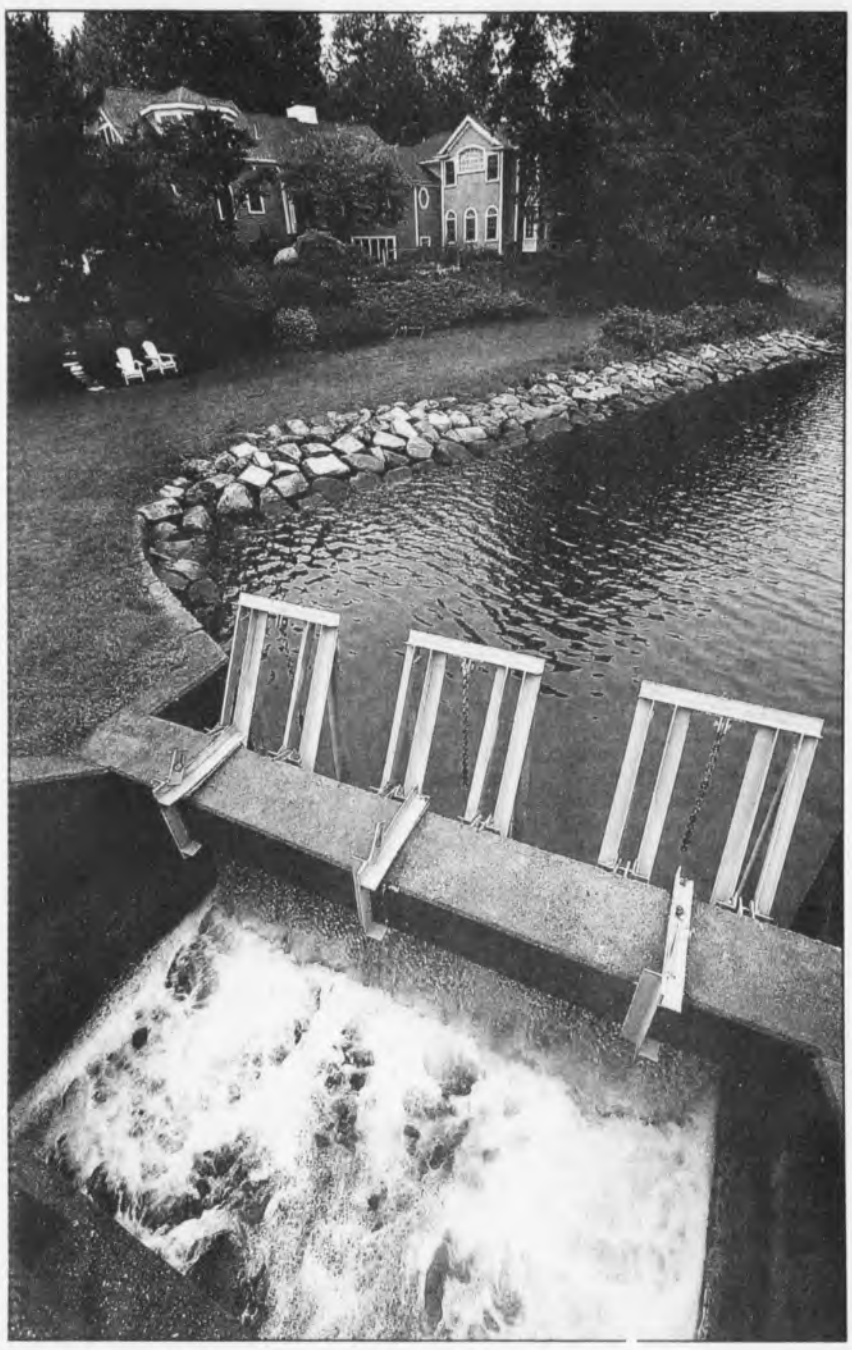
Our Humor Talks help folks who need to reduce stress through fun, laughter and humor. It was only one day after 9/11 and we were scheduled to give our program to a group in western Massachusetts. We thought maybe the president of this group would call to cancel our presentation. Instead, she called and said, "Please come. We have been watching the horrors of planes crashing into buildings and into the Pennsylvania field on the television over and over again and we need your help!"

So, we traveled to our talk destination, wondering about our audience and ourselves. Gratefully, they were prepared to be distracted for a short time and learn to smile and even laugh a bit. They needed the break from the pain.

While there, a woman in the audience told us her story. When she was quite young, she often visited her grandfather who lived in the country. She lived in the city. When she had a bad "country experience," like a bug bite or a fall from the hayloft, she would run to her grandfather and say, "Get the tin box down! I need help!"

He would find the tin box, filled with tiny chocolate chip cookies and say, "Is this a one cookie bad day, a two cookie bad day or a three cookie bad day?" Many times she would say, "It's a three cookie bad day!"

The pain from 9/11 lives on. Like the little city girl in the story, it is often a three cookie bad day. But as we help one another with smiles, kind words, hug and kisses – and even cookies, we will all survive and be strong for the days ahead.



Ann and John Murphy of Hingham, Mass. present Humor Talks throughout the United States. Their next presentation is at the Miramar Retreat Center, Duxbury, Mass. on Oct. 16. For more information email: humortalks @aol.com.

Sunrise Assisted Living Dementia Support Groups

Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset will host monthly support groups for family members who are coping with a loved one afflicted by dementia. James Barber, director of community relations, said "these support groups are being implemented at our community to educate families on techniques and approaches that will greatly assist with caring for a loved one who is suffering from dementia."

Dementia affects many of senior residents on the South Shore. Through the support of trained professionals in the field and with the sharing of best practices from families currently dealing with the care giving of a loved one affected by the disease, this support group's main objective will be to give the proper tools and approaches to family members to help alleviate some of the emotions of frustration and sadness that comes with the job of caregiver.

The first meeting will take place at 6 p.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 21, and then a regular monthly meeting will take place on the first Wednesday of every month beginning in October. Bonnie Haley, a licensed social worker, will conduct the meetings and educate family members on Alzheimer's disease and related types of dementias and how they impact individuals with memory loss as well as their caregivers. This monthly support group is open to the public and will take place at Sunrise of Cohasset, 125 King St., Route 3A. For more information, call 781-383-6300.

was submitted during the public hearing process. Our position is that the order that was issued in the schedule for the gate openings and closings is a prudent response to the situation involving conflicting evidence, and it will result in an increase in the number of days the gates will be all open by 52 days a year, which will increase flushing in Little Harbor. That's the basic reason why we feel that this order of conditions should be affirmed."

Hucksam also defended the conservation commission's decision to approve the NOI.

"I'd just like to affirm that the vote by the commission resulting in the order was a completely proper vote; it was a unanimous 4-0 vote by members who had all attended the public hearing," he said. "There were some changes in the commission membership that had just occurred, but none of the new members participated in the vote. All four commissioners who voted had attended the entire public hearing."

Jack Creighton spoke on behalf of the conservation commission.

"I was a participant throughout (the NOI process)," he said. "It was very long, and there were lots of hearings. I'm among the four who was a commissioner throughout the process, and I want to echo what the board of selectmen have indicated was a very open process. There was no participation by the new commissioners in the discussion."

Creighton concluded by saying that he supports any decision made in the scientific realm, saying that he hopes DeCesare's visit will "take out" the "warring neighbors" and put the issue back into the "basis of science and under the jurisdiction of the conservation commission, which is were we believe it belongs."

Dick Karoff of the conservation commission agreed.

"There's only one process" in place to protect "the environment and the wetlands and the storm water initiatives," he said. "This is not a political event; it is something that is dictated to by the Town of Cohasset regulations and the state DEP. Nothing more, nothing less."

"I can assure you now that this has been appealed and it's in the hands of the DEP. It's a fresh review and all politics are out the window," DeCesare said.

"I'm happy to hear that, as I think are the majority of the people here," Karoff said.

Steve Brown then spoke on behalf of the petitioner's group.

"These waters are owned by the commonwealth, not the abutters, and therefore the Wetlands Protection Act applies in this area," he said. "All of the scientists and engineers from EPA and sister agencies with experience managing tidal wetlands who reviewed the current NOI did not support it."

Brown's presentation to DeCesare drew complaints from the crowd when he and DeCesare turned their backs to look at the water as Brown explained various flushing options.

"This is supposed to be a public hearing, and it's very difficult for the rest of the people to follow what's going on here," one member of the crowd spoke up. "Is there some way you could make it more open?"

Brown explained that he was focusing on DeCesare "because he's the individual not familiar with this area."

DeCesare apologized for turning away, saying that he was not trying to turn his back on anyone, and that everyone would have a chance to speak.

Adele Janssens of Nichols Road asked DeCesare if she would be allowed to rebut Brown's statements. Brown asked Janssens if he could finish first, and Janssens replied that she was merely asking about protocol.

"The dam resides on my property here, so I'm very interested in the safe operation of the dam and the environment, too," Janssens said. "So that's why we very much like what's in the NOI with the enhanced flushing. It's a safe alternative to flushing, and we don't support the solution in the appeal with the single gate open because that would create a faster current in the channel, and the channel is already thin. And that could create a safety hazard for residents, citizens, children, pets. I hope that the DEP sees that we do have a healthy body of water here and we do have significant flushing even now at low tide."

Edward Woods, who helped start the conservation commission in 1960 and was the first secretary for 10 years, gave his opinion on the issue.

"We just live around the corner; we're not right on the water but we're very interested," he said. "I just think we should leave things more and more up to Mother Nature."

After hearing from both the NOI's supporters and opponents, DeCesare said the appeal had triggered the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act threshold and that he would be issuing a compliance letter and would be required to file an Environmental Notification Form (ENF).

"It's required in the ENF to submit alternative analysis," DeCesare said. "The current proposal is viable, but other alternatives will be reviewed."

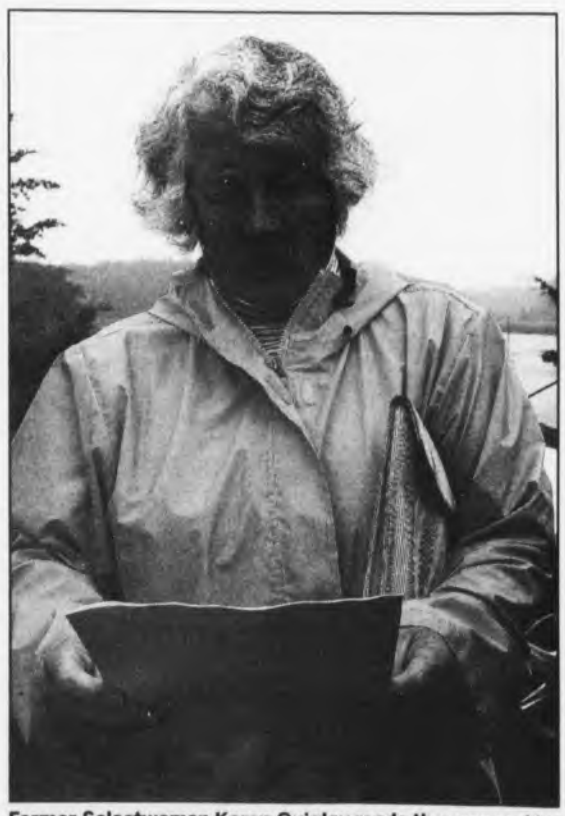
The next step in the process will not be fulfilled until the ENF is filed, DeCesare said. He added that any party present would have a chance to appeal the DEP's decision within 10 business days.

Karen Quigley, a former selectwoman and one of the petitioners, said after the site visit that she is "just pleased this is moving in the direction to be considered under science, fact and law, rather than politics and friendship."

"That was my position when I was a selectman, during the NOI, and is still my position now," she said.

The conservation commission will await the DEP's next step and determine what their decision will cost the town.

Adele Janssens, who lives next to the dam, talks about the dam with Selectman Lee Jenkins.



Jack Creighton, one of the four conservation commission members who approved the selectmen's Notice of Intent, presents his case at the dam.

Stephen Brown, who is appealing the conservation commission Notice of Intent, makes his case to Greg DeCesare of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection that the dam will not meet Massachusetts Wetlands Protection Act standards.

Rich Hucksam of the town counsel's office presents the town's case to interested Cohasset residents.

Former Selectwoman Karen Quigley reads the proposal by the town that indicates the town supports the suspension of the build so town officials can study it.

GIMME SHELTER

Jimmy will make a good companion

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will feature Jimmy. Jimmy is a two-year-old gray and white Tabby. He is an extremely good natured and gentle cat. He's friendly and happy and gets along well with humans as well as with other cats. He's likely to jump up on your lap and is so ready for a new home. Jimmy will make a good companion to anyone who is willing to share his or her home with him. Yes of course, he's litter trained and will be glad to use the scratching post provided form him.

The shelter is filled with adoptable felines so check out www.hsar.org to view some of our available cats and kittens.

We're offering a $50 reduction of the adoption fee for every cat and kitten in the shelter for the entire month of September in order to find suitable homes for the current residents and free up space for other homeless cats and kittens.

The shelter is open every Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, leave a message for Judy, adoption coordinator at 781-925-3121.

The shelter is located at 50 L St. in Hull, the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045, email, hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out the website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

The shelter is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, call Nancy at 781-925-3638. The cats and kittens are delightful.

Thanks to the many people who generously donate to our cause. We couldn't do it without you.

Accord Pond Reservoir shut down for intruder alert

Police checking for item discarded in pond

On Wednesday, Sept. 14 at 8:09 a.m., Hingham Police received a report from a resident who observed an unidentified man walk to the Accord Pond and throw something in the water. This occurred on Accord Lane. They were concerned about the integrity of the water supply and called the Hingham Police.

Accord Pond is a reservoir that serves the towns of Hingham, Hull and a portion of Cohasset. An officer responded and Aquarian Water Company was informed and also sent their staff to the area.

Aquarion Water Company elected, as a precaution, to shut down Accord Pond. However, water service has not been affected.

"We acted immediately upon receiving the alert," stated Harry Hibbard, Aquarion's Vice President of Operations in Massachusetts. "We shut down the water supply and we began taking samples for analysis. We will notify the public as soon as we have results from those samples."

In a statement issued Wednesday after, Hibbard said he also notified all state and local authorities of the incident, and he stated that Aquarion is working closely with all emergency agencies.

Hibbard also stated that Aquarion has ample water supply, using its other resources, to meet all demands regularly put on the system. Hibbard went on to state in the release that "the safety and purity of the Aquarion water is not an issue. It continues to meet all federal and state guidelines. The water is safe to drink"

According to Hingham Police, papers were located near the water that were not written in English.

The Hingham Police contacted the FBI and State Police for assistance. The State Police dive team responded to the area, checked the water, and did not locate any items.

All police personnel have cleared the scene. This matter remains under investigation by the Hingham Police Department.

Disposal of unused prescription drugs

Cohasset Police Department has a new drug take-back container, and residents who have prescription drugs that are no longer needed are invited to use it.

"Prescription drugs, particularly opiate-based pain pills left over from dental work or surgery, look harmless sitting in your medicine chest, but we are finding that the opposite is true," said Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey. "We are hearing from addiction experts that over half, and perhaps three quarters, of young people are having their first experiences with addictive opiates that were taken directly from the medicine cabinets of family or friends."

Morrissey and Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca agree that getting unused prescription drugs out of residents' medicine cabinets is an important tool in keeping them out of circulation – and thereby preventing addictions and the crime and misery that often accompany them.

Police refer to them as "diverted drugs," and they are a significant problem, according to DeLuca. "The concern has to extend beyond your own children," he said. "If they ever have visitors, when those friends close the door to the restroom behind themselves, they are alone with whatever OxyContin, Percocet or other drugs are in that cabinet."

Parents of teens often monitor liquor in their home, but DeLuca and Morrissey said that few parents keep track of how many unused pills are in the house. "That is proving to be a mistake for many good families," Morrissey said.

In May, Morrissey wrote to Norfolk County police chiefs to ask them to consider hosting a drug collection container.

Morrissey worked out an arrangement with Bay State Community Services' Impact Quincy program that provided a two-thirds subsidy for police to acquire the $900 containers. Morrissey awarded Cohasset a $300 grant from the DA's office, drawn from drug profits forfeited in narcotics prosecutions, and a $300 grant from anti-drug funds that Impact Quincy had through the Department of Public Health. Thirteen communities applied and all were awarded grants. Cohasset is the sixth town to take delivery of the collection box.

DeLuca worked with Joseph R. Godzik and the Cohasset Board of Health and arranged for the board to finance the remaining $295 of the net price.

With the Food and Drug Administration recommending against flushing unused medicine down the toilet or disposing of it in household trash, for environmental and other reasons, these containers provide a safe method, Morrissey and DeLuca said. Morrissey has contacted Covanta Energy and arranged for Norfolk County departments to be able to have drugs collected in the bins incinerated by that company at no cost to the town. "We are thankful to Covanta for their good corporate citizenship here," Morrissey said.

"It is in the lobby of the police station and ready for use," DeLuca said. "A few minutes of your time today could save someone else a lifetime of consequences."

SCHOOL COMMITTEE BRIEFS

Wireless coming to Cohasset schools

One of Superintendent Barbara Cataldo's plans to implement new technology in the school district is coming to fruition. During the Sept. 14 school committee meeting, Cataldo and the committee confirmed that wireless Internet would be up and running in all the schools within the next four weeks.

The district received $31,088 to pay for the wireless network installation in the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools, school committee member Dr. Paul Schubert announced.

The funds were "generously donated by the Cohasset Education Foundation," Cataldo stated in an email. Schubert is a member of the foundation.

During the meeting, Schubert thanked Cataldo for "whittling down" the price. Committee members took a vote to accept these funds, and all were in favor.

Cohasset ranked No. 13

In Boston magazine's annual list of best public schools in the state, Cohasset was placed in the No. 13 spot. This is a move up from No. 17 last year, according to school committee members.

The magazine compared test scores from elementary, middle and high schools in 135 districts, and looked within the districts to see how schools were improving. Criteria for the rankings included student-to-teacher ratio, per-pupil spending, graduation rates, number of AP classes and whether or not the district offered half- or full-day pre-K.

"This year, they were looking at district-wide as opposed to just high schools," school committee member Dr. Paul Schubert said during the Sept. 14 school committee meeting. "With this broader view, we do very well."

A Complete Body Transformation Experience!

By Brian Cook

At Get in Shape for Women (GISFW), it's all about body transformation. Designed specifically for women, it's a game changer in the fitness industry – a different, yet very successful approach that enables women to achieve individual fitness goals in small groups working with a personal trainer. All 77 fitness studios, in 17 states, are designed to meet a woman's specific weight loss needs and overall health goals. At GISFW it's all about body transformation.

GISFW trainers target the areas of 1) weight training, 2) interval cardiovascular exercise, and 3) nutrition – all in proper balance. The 4th key component is ACCOUNTABILITY through appointment-based workouts.

"The smaller setting is ideal for specialized training, motivation and supportive one-on-one nutrition," says Brian Cook, President of GISFW. "However, we do not accept everyone into our program. We require a measurable goal with a high level of commitment. You must also be coachable and truly ready to transform your body and your life. If you are willing to do that, then we guarantee results!"

Cost effective health benefits

While individual personal training may cost as much as $60 to $80, or more an hour elsewhere, GISFW offers small group sessions that are affordable for as little as $19 a session. Women train under the supervision of a personal trainer who has an understanding of what women want and what they need. Tone, sculpt and restore your body today with top trainers at Get In Shape for Women.

Current client Cathy Phillips fully supports the GISFW model. "I have been going to GISFW for 13 weeks and I have lost 25 pounds. I am incredibly happy with my results so far, and it has truly changed my life," says Cathy. Her advice to other women? "Make a 100% commitment, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Listen to everything your trainer tells you. If you have doubts about what you are going to eat, you probably shouldn't eat it. Push yourself hard at each GISFW session. Did I mention 100%, unrelenting commitment?"

COHASSET DAY

farmers' market once, but Cohasset Day will be his official public debut.

There will also be a special Sunday farmers' market on the Common. The market and the Fine Foods Galore event are two of Cohasset Day's biggest attractions, giving attendees the chance to try local Cohasset foods.

Fine Foods Galore is always one of the biggest draws, said Tim Chamberlain, chairman of the Cohasset Economic Development Committee, which started Cohasset Day four years ago. Sixteen restaurants will participate in this event, which takes place from 4 to 6 p.m. on South Main Street. Those who purchase tickets will get to sample foods from all of the participating restaurants. There are categories set up for judging, including "creative, comfort, seafood and ice cream," said Chamberlain.

Fine Foods Galore costs $10 for an individual pass and $25 for families. This is the only Cohasset Day event that has a fee, and the money helps to defray the sampling costs. Proceeds will also benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry and Cohasset Elder Affairs. Tickets may be purchased during the event.

People can also enjoy a fashion show featuring clothes from village boutiques, including Port's, Pink Tulip and Wendy's Closet. Local artists will be doing paintings of the scene throughout the day.

Music will be provided by the Jackson Weatherbee Band, Aldous Collins, The Infractions, the Loco Locals and the Rusty Skippers.

Cohasset Day is a partnership between the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Net proceeds from the event will be donated to local Cohasset charities, including the Cohasset Food Pantry and Council on Elder Affairs.

- Improving public safety management — Coughlin hopes to establish deputy chiefs in both the police and fire departments.
- Improving public services — Coughlin discussed having Mark Brennan, town engineer and special assistant to the town manager, working to oversee both water and sewer needs under the umbrella of a single operations department.
- Improving Cohasset Harbor — Coughlin talked about obtaining state funds to dredge the harbor.
- Improving building, planning and community development — "Staffing has been a critical concern," Coughlin said. He believes Cohasset needs a professional town planner to oversee community and economic developments, particularly in the village and along Route 3A.
- Improving the health department — Coughlin seeks to "ensure success of the Septic Betterment Loan Program. We also need to encourage and promote additional educational and outreach programs by the Health Department."
- Improving the Cohasset Council on Aging/Senior Center — "We need to ensure that the public/private partnership between the town and Social Service League becomes a reality," Coughlin said.
- Improving veterans services — Coughlin explained that with the current veterans service agent leaving, there will soon be an opening. He hopes to not only fill that position by the end of the year, but integrate the veterans program within the context of the senior center.
- Improving the library — "We can no longer afford to have a library which each year has to petition the state for a waiver," Coughlin wrote in his plan. He believes the town needs to appropriate funds to "bring library spending up to minimum levels required for certification."
- Improving recreation — Coughlin wants to establish an initiative for the recreation department similar to the Friends program at the senior center and library.
- Improving public safety facilities — "We should prudently begin planning to improve the public safety facilities," Coughlin said. He explained how the public safety and emergency management teams had to meet in the conference room of the superintendent's office after losing telecommunications at the police and fire stations and town hall during Tropical Storm Irene, mainly because the CERT (Community Emergency Response Team) command center at the Deer Hill School has not yet been completed. Coughlin wants to see this project completed "before advent of the winter storm season."

"I truly believe that we can make significant progress on these 11 ideas in the 3 1/2 months that remain in 2011," Coughlin wrote in his plan.

SELECTMEN

ConComm petition not on the agenda

Those who signed the petition protesting last month's dismissal of three Conservation Committee members will have to wait one more week for the Board of Selectmen to address their concerns.

The petition, which asks the board to reinstate the ousted members and apologize for unseating them, was tabled to the public commentary portion during last month's Selectmen meeting on Aug. 16.

Petitioners were assured during the August meeting that the board would take their concerns into consideration, but it was left unclear whether or not the matter would appear on the next meeting's agenda. Folks got their answer Tuesday night, when the list of agenda items did not include the petition.

Selectman Ted Carr brought the ConComm petition up during the Selectmen's comment period, saying that the Board has scheduled a special meeting for next Tuesday, Sept. 20 to discuss the citizen's petition as well as budgetary issues.

Board appoints new Historical Commissioner

Todd Goff, owner and president of Beacon Street Home Inspection in Cohasset, was appointed to the Historical Commission during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

Goff is a licensed home inspector and professional architectural historian who studied architectural forensics for historic structures at George Washington University. In his application letter to the board, Goff wrote that his skill set "enhances my understanding of the built environment, both contemporary and historic."

During the meeting, Goff told the Board that he was born and raised in Mansfield, Mass., but was whisked off to Atlanta, Georgia as a young child.

"I wanted to get back to New England ever since," Goff said. "No one in this room is more excited to be here than me."

He added that he loves "the aesthetic of Cohasset buildings" and wants to assist in the stewardship and protection of these historic structures.

The board voted to approve Goff's appointment to the commission.

"Welcome home," Selectman Diane Kennedy said.

YOUTH LACROSSE

Fall Lacrosse Programs

Cohasset Club Lacrosse is once again running their Fall Liv2Lax Skills programs for area boys and girls grades 1- 8 starting this weekend and running through late October.

Laxers of all skill levels will get a chance to get the rust off, polish their skills for next Spring, get introduced to the game, or just have some fun playing a little "Fall Ball" before the leaves fall and the snow starts to fly.

Online registration, schedules, and program information by grade/group is available at our website at www.cohassetclublax.com or by calling 781/383-6074. Pre-registration for our Winter after-school sessions is also available. See you out on the fields

GIRLS HOCKEY

Fundraising car wash

The Cohasset/Hanover girls hockey team is moving up to the varsity this year and needs your help.

As a start-up team, Cohasset/Hanover relies on fundraising to finance the season.

The team will be holding a car wash on Saturday, Sept. 17 at the Second Congregational Church, at 43 Highland Avenue in Cohasset.

The event will be from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The cost is $5 or donation.

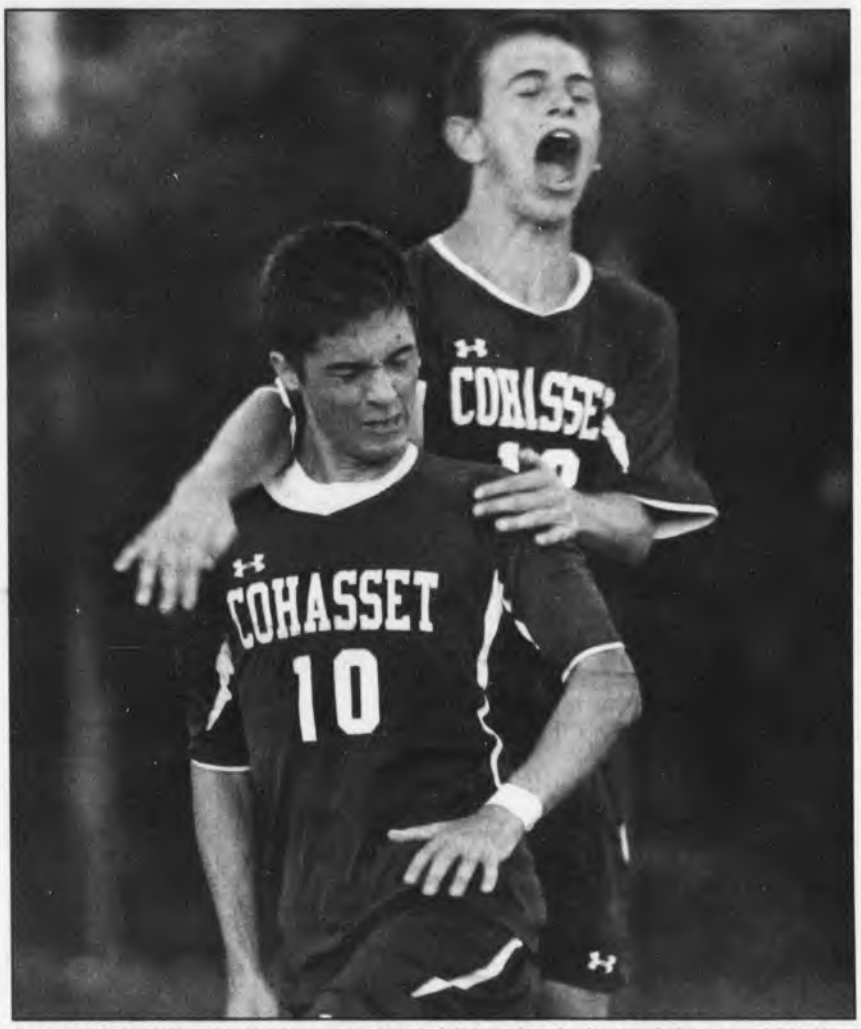
Rockland game a chance to get back to .500

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It has been a bit of a tough, but interesting start of the season for the Cohasset boys soccer team.

After their first five games, the Skippers are 1-2-2 and hoping to get back to the all-important .500 mark on Friday when they host Rockland at 4 p.m.

Cohasset opened the season with a seat-of-the-pants escape at Scituate on Friday night.



Jonah Adkins netted the tying goal in the 79th minute on a penalty kick with the scoreboard showing no time on the clock.

Adkins made the shot look easy and Cohasset picked up a point.

"They fought to the end," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "It was up and down the whole game. It seemed like one team would play well for 15 minutes, then the other team would play well for 15 minutes. It was a frustrating night for both coaches.

"It was very close, very even. Both teams scored on fouls and both teams blew good

Pete Afanasiw knows the value of a good start to a football season.

Afanasiw's Skippers of Cohasset High School had no trouble getting off to that good start that the coach had hoped for.

Cohasset knocked off host Quincy, 35-16, in the opening game for both teams Friday night.

Can the first game indeed set the tone for the rest of the season?

I think it goes a pretty good way in doing so, especially if you win," Afanasiw said. "For three weeks now, the kids have been hitting each other and getting kind of anxious with regards to taking out their frustrations on other people. It's a great opportunity for them to get off on a good note."

Taking out the most frustration was Cohasset senior running back Kyle Livingstone. The 5-9, 165-pounder led the way with 131 yards and two touchdowns on 19 carries.

His first touchdown was a 4-yard burst that gave Cohasset a 13-0 lead with 2:30 left in the first quarter of

Working on the bigger puzzle

Cohasset stopped by Norwell

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

One way that South Shore League coaches gauge how the rest of their conference schedule will shape up is to face Norwell early on. The Lady Clippers, who have consistently gone deep into the postseason and finish either first or second in the South Shore League each year, gave a young Cohasset squad more than it could handle Monday in Norwell.

That's certainly no fault of the Lady Skippers, who are starting several players that, coming into the season, had never started at the varsity level. Some of Cohasset's players saw little or no varsity time last year. The 6-0 loss to Norwell Monday gave Deb Beal an indication of what her team needs to work on in order to succeed this fall.

"It's just a matter of getting the kids to focus on what they're doing," Beal said. "We have skilled players. It's a matter of putting the pieces together."

Norwell took a 1-0 lead on a goal by Darci Vierra in the fifth minute. Allie DeBenedictis scored less than 10 minutes later, and in the 27th minute, Grace Gunning knocked in a corner kick that ping-ponged inside the box before she got a foot on it to beat Cohasset keeper Kristin Alexander. In the 42nd minute, DeBenedictis sent a cross to Bridget Conway, who then one-timed it past Alexander.

Three minutes after Conway's goal, DeBenedictis made it a 5-0 game, and the Lady Clippers capped the scoring in the 73rd minute on a goal by junior midfielder Maeve Dennigan. Twenty-five yards from goal, Dennigan collected the ball, turned quickly, and chipped a shot that managed to sneak just inside the goal.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Cohasset boys still on the bubble

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The first week of high school soccer has begun, and we already have our first moves of the season. The top four teams remain intact on the boys' side, with Hingham holding down the No. 1 spot. Scituate enters the ranks at No. 5 after an impressive opening week. The girls, meanwhile, already have a new No. 1 after Marshfield knocked off defending South Shore League champs Norwell and Patriot League co-champions Silver Lake. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 11.

Boys

1. Hingham - The Harbormen opened the season exactly as expected, with a victory. It came against a tough Atlantic Coast League opponent in Falmouth, a 2-1 decision in Hingham's favor.

2. Weymouth - The Bay State league is not going to be easy territory for any team to navigate, but the Wildcats opened up their schedule with a solid, 2-1 win over Bay State Herget division contenders Natick.

Cohasset/Hull runners battle East Bridgewater

The Cohasset/Hull boys and girls cross country teams opened their 2011 seasons Tuesday against a strong East Bridgewater squad on the local course at Wheelwright Park.

Although both the boys and girls came up short against their potent E. Brigewater foes, first year CHS head coach Ted Coyle said he saw some good signs in his charges' performance.

"East Bridgewater is one of the strongest teams in the league," said Coyle. "Considering that this was our first meet of the season, I was pleased with the effiorts of both the boys and girls."

Leading the way for the Lady Skipppers/Lady Pirates, was senior captain Christina Secatore, who crossed the line in sixth place overall with a fine time of 22:47 over the 2.8 mile Wheelwright course. Fellow CHS senior Olivia Franklin was next in eighth in 24:04. She was followed by captain Corin Postell, Ellie Tedeschi, and Emily Robbins to round out the Cohasset/Hull score sheet.

"Christina, Olivia, and Corin were our top three finishers and ran nice races for us," noted Coyle. "Ellie and Emily also did very well for their first outing of the year."

On the boys' side, Captain Harry Hellboch blazed to a finish in a time of 21:11, good for eighth place over-

GOLF NOTES

Now we find out, Nick is one of us

PAUL HARBER

Nick McLaughlin might live in New Hampshire and go to school on the North Shore, but he has roots here in Southeastern Massachusetts. COURTESY PHOTO

We write about local golf.

What Tiger Woods does or Jack Nicklaus says doesn't belong on this page because this is for golfers from southeastern Massachusetts.

So this year, we've ignored one Nick McLaughlin because he plays for St. John's Prep in Danvers and he lives in Newcastle, N.H.

Yes, the kid has had a great year and he has a bright future.

For the second time in three seasons, McLaughlin won the won the American Junior Golf Association event at White Manor Country Club in Williston Township, Penn., fashioning a three-round aggregate of 7-over 220.

In 2009, McLaughlin's victory came on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff.

This year he rallied from six strokes behind to win in regulation.

Both times he battled rain delays, gusty winds, and soggy turf.

McLaughlin is one of the top juniors you will find. He is ranked by AJGA as the 13th best player in the nation.

Over Labor Day, McLaughlin also led the New England contingent to victory over Team USA in the 36-hole John D. Mineck Junior Club in Hingham, crushing them, 63-17.

There was a strong South Shore influence on the team. On the final day of the rout, Milton's Patrick O'Leary teamed with McLaughlin beat Ryan Celano and Nick Celestino, 4-0; Rockland's Megan Khang and Nicole Scola beat Alexa Hammer and Brooke Henderson, 4-0; and Sharon's Isabel Southard and Quincy's Jacquelyn Eleey beat Bryce Schroeder and Quincy's Alison Eleey, 4-0.

McLaughlin was named the winner of the John D. Mineck Sportsmanship Award, presented annually to the tournament participant that best embodies the principles and spirit of the late John D. Mineck, co-founder of the tournament.

Earlier this year McLaughlin won the MIAA Div. 1 individual golf championship at Longmeadow CC and this summer he won the MGA State Junior championship at Haverhill for the second time.

Division 1college coaches have been knocking down his door with scholarship offers, but he's already made a verbal commitment to the University of Virginia.

That's where James Driscoll of Charles River CC matriculated. Driscoll plays on the Nationwide tour.

Yes, McLaughlin is a player.

And now we find out he has South Shore roots.

His father, Bill McLaughlin, grew up in Cohasset.

"I lived there until I was 40," he reports.

"My wife Wendy grew up in Hingham and she and I were members at Cohasset Golf Club until we move to New Hampshire in 1990."

Of all his laurels, his family is proud of the John D. Mineck Cup.

"The John D. Mineck Foundation Scholarship is presented to the golfer who displays great potential to be successful in life both on and off the golf course.

Texas bound

Chris Congdon of Foxborough CC strung together a round of 6-under par 66 to earn medalist honors at the 2011 U.S. Mid-Amateur qualifying which was held last week at the Country Club of Greenfield.

Congdon was one of three qualifiers to advance to Championship proper, which is scheduled for Sept. 17-22 at Shadow Hawk Golf Club in Richmond, Texas.

Kingston's Herbie Aikens, who plays out of Pinehills, also qualified for the national championship.

Congdon, 41 finished with five birdies, one eagle and one bogey. Following two straight pars, Congdon went on a tear where he made birdie on the third, fourth and sixth holes and then made eagle on the 455-yard, eighth hole.

Aikens will be making his third appearance at a USGA Championship this season. In addition to the U.S. Mid-Amateur Championship, he also qualified for the 2011 U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship and 2011 U.S. Amateur Championship. Aikens posted a score of 3-under par 69 at Greenfield.

Upcoming events

Tournament director Mike Prendergast reports that applications are now available for the 2011 Southeastern Amateur Championship, one of the top regional events that is included as part of the MGA's Player of the Year Point System.

This annual, three-day event will be held Oct. 7-9 at three courses - Easton Country Club, Marshfield Country Club and Cohasset Golf Club.

Entries are open to all amateurs with a verified handicap index of 7.0 or less who are members or permit holders at southeastern Massachusetts clubs. All entries are subject to approval of the Tournament Committee. Entries will be accepted on first-come basis. Past champions and those returning a 54-hole score in 2010 are guaranteed an entry so long as the entry form is received by the stated deadline.

One year ago, two-time Massachusetts Amateur Champion John Hadges of Thorny Lea GC, fired a final round 75 at his home course for a 215 total to win his eighth title. Entries can be found on the Internet for by contact Prendegast at P.O. Box 850842, Braintree, MA 02185 . . . The Beach Family Golf Tournament will be held Sept. 19, at Braintree Municipal Golf Course. This tournament will benefit the Jimmy Fund and was created to honor a family that has been affected by cancer. The registration fee is $125 and the shotgun start begins at 9 a.m. For more information contact Jimmy Fund Golf at 866-521-4653 or email them at jimmyfund_golf@dfci.harvard.edu

NE pro results

The team of Tom Rooney of LeBaron Hills CC and Rusty Gunnarson of Rochester CC tied for the championship at the NEPGA Senior-Junior Championship at Pleasant Valley CC. They shared honors with Ron Philo of Stowe Mountain Club and Jimmy Noris of Dedham Country and Polo. Both teams carded 8-under 64s. Steven Demmer of the Kittansett Club and Rick Karbowski of Auburn DR were a shot back. Richie Hasenfus of Needham and Dana Smith of Presidents were sixth at 6-under and the team of Peter Norton of Thorny Lea and Chip Johnson of Hatherly were 10th at 4-under. Mike McBroom of Furnace Brook and James Antonelli of Marshfield were 11th at 3-under as were Thomas Tobey and Mick Herron of Bay Pointe in Wareham. In an NEPGA Assistant's event at Presidents GC in North Quincy, Jeff Seavey of Samoset Resrt of Jeff Martin of Point Judith CC won by two strokes with an 8-under 62 . . . In a final note of NE PGA news, we wish good health to former commissioner Ed Carbone.

They are champs

It's been said at Hatherly Country Club in Scituate, that if a player can shoot 75 each day in the men's club championship, he'll win. Drew Thiel proved that theory true by firing 74-75-75 (224) in the three-day medal play event and cruised to a 4-stroke victory over one of Hatherly's young rising stars, Jeff Durkin, who tallied 73-78-77 (228). Michael Cooney was third at 230. Tom Money was fourth at 231. Tom Goode won the Class A title (for handicaps 10 and up) with a three-round 263 . . . Paul Palm won the men's club championship at Widow's Walk Golf Club in Scituate. Palm's two round total of 155 was eight strokes better than his nearest competitor. Save Stangl was second (163), John Snow was third (164), and Jim Ryan was fourth (165.) Chuck Wheeler won the net division title with a 133. . . Steve White celebrated his 40th birthday by winning the South Shore Country Club championship by winning his first club championship at the Hingham course. Nineteen years ago he won his first at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy. Maureen Cawley successfully defending the women's title at South Shore CC. It took her 18 holes of match play to beat former champion, Danuta Elzbieta Plata.

chances in the first half. Both goalies also made unbelievable saves."

Willis felt lucky to get the point under the circumstances.

"We had a minute left after the penalty kick," he said. "I felt lucky. Jonah finished the kick. That was excellent. Scituate is very strong. They're fast and physical. I like the way they play. They did a great job."

Adkins' goal was in the game plan.

"I called timeout and pushed everyone out," Willis said. "That was why we got a corner."

Cohasset followed the tie with a 3-1 loss to Norwell before beating Hull 3-0.

the non-league contest.

His second touchdown was a 3-yarder early in the fourth quarter that gave the Skippers a 27-8 lead.

Other Cohasset touchdowns came on a Jamie Faber 27-yard pass to Chris Carpenter with only 2:27 gone in the opening quarter; a 25-yard interception return by Kyrel Jaundoo in the second quarter; and a 9-yard run by Faber with 4:47 left in the game.

Cohasset will head next door to Hingham on Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m.

Hingham is coming off a 14-13 loss to Medway.

Cohasset beat Hingham 43-21 at home last year.

Thomas Flibotte had 127 yards rushing and Jeff Cavanaro threw three touchdown passes.

Flibotte is gone now and Livingstone is taking the carries. Cavanaro is also gone, leaving the passing to Faber.

Both sides have turned the game into something bigger than an early season non-league contest.

"The kids have taken it on their own," Afanasiw said about the rivalry game with Hingham. "It's developed into something big. I don't have to say anything before that game. The kids have given it it's own life."

It might be the proximity, or the fact that Hingham is a higher division school that has had a lot of success through the years, but if you watch one of these games you can see the intensity and desire from both sides.

It's always a fun game.

GIRLS SOCCER

The Lady Skippers did very well defending corner kicks after Norwell scored its first goal off a corner. In the second half, Cohasset didn't allow a shot on target off any one of the six Norwell corner kicks.

Late in the game, junior Charlotte Barszewski made the defensive play of the game, preventing a potential goal on a Norwell breakaway. Norwell's Maddie Eaves pushed a well-played through ball up to Devon Croke, who was a half step ahead of Barszewski when she received the ball. But Barszewski closed off Croke's angle and forced the play out of the box.

During the flurry of corner kicks in the second half, senior captains Anna Seraikas and Katie Brennan both cleared balls from the box.

Cohasset had some good looks on goal in the first half. In the 21st minute, Melinda Dignam forced Conway to make a diving stop, and then in the 32nd minute, Sarah Rawson put a free kick just over the net 25 yards from goal. In the defensive end for Cohasset in the first half, Alexander came up with a pair of huge saves in the first 12 minutes of the game.

In earlier action, Cohasset lost a 3-0 decision at Scituate on Friday night.

Scituate's Hannah Hoffman scored early in the first half and Scituate never looked back.

Cohasset goalie Kristin Alexander had a strong game, making a number of nice saves.

RANKINGS

3. Marshfield – If the Rams want to prove themselves as a legitimate Division 1 threat, well, they certainly opened the season with a quality win. They topped a dangerous Duxbury team, 1-0, at home.

4. Duxbury - It's tough to tell if the Dragons will be affected by the transfer of midfielder Mitch Barrington, but they did OK to start their 2011 campaign. Despite losing, 1-0, to Marshfield, a 0-0 tie against Canton.

5. Scituate - This mark's the 2011 debut for the Sailors, cracking the top six for the first time this season. Well-deserved. They topped defending South Shore League champs Norwell, 3-1, and tied a tough Cohasset squad, 1-1.

6. Silver Lake - It's tough to gauge how the rest of the season will go for the Lakers, seeing that they opened with a subpar Middleboro team. But, the Lake put 11 goals in net while conceding just one in their 2011 season opener.

On the bubble: Norwell, Carver, Cohasset

Preseason Rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Marshfield, 4. Duxbury, 5. Norwell, 6. Silver Lake

Girls

1. Marshfield - What a way to open the season and make an immediate statement. The Lady Rams blanked defending South Shore League champions Norwell, 1-0, before thrashing Silver Lake, 7-2.

2. Weymouth - The Lady Wildcats picked up two quality victories, but Marshfield's performance bumped Weymouth out of its No. 1 ranking. Weymouth topped Natick, 2-1, and Framingham, 4-1, to open the 2011 season.

3. Duxbury - A stinging 4-3 loss to Canton to open the season was eased with a 5-0 victory over New Bedford, a top Division 1 team.

4. Pembroke - Beating Whitman-Hanson, 2-1, was a huge accomplishment for the Lady Titans. Even though this isn't the Whitman-Hanson of old – an untouchable team over the past decade – a win over a quality program is a huge way to start the season for Pembroke.

5. Norwell - The Lady Clippers held their own against No. 1 ranked Marshfield. Despite losing, 1-0, they outplayed the Lady Rams for a majority of the second half.

6. Rockland - This marks the 2011 debut in the top six for the Lady Bulldogs, who opened the season with a 4-2 South Shore League win over Hull, a scrappy team that gives all of its opposition trouble.

On the bubble: Abington, Silver Lake, Scituate

Preseason Rankings: 1. Weymouth, 2. Marshfield, 3. Duxbury, 4. Silver Lake, 5. Scituate, 6. Norwell

The Inside the 6 Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. all. He was followed by teammates Tom Saide, Matthew Menice, Chris Daniels, and Jack Quigley to complete the Skipper/Pirate scoring, with Kristophe Suprenant the sixth CHS/HHS runner to complete the race.

"Our boys team is very young," said Coyle, noting that two are sophomores and four are freshmen, with only Hellboch returning from last year's team.

Both the boys and girls teams will be back in action next Tuesday at Harwich.

School hosts Picnic for Peace

With the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks this past weekend and International Peace Day at the end of September, Derby Academy in Hingham decided to open their school year last Friday with a Picnic for Peace. On Friday, Sept. 9, students and their families joined with the Derby faculty for an All School picnic, complete with musical performances and a special pinwheel project.

"We wanted to find a way to recognize 9/11 that was appropriate for students ages four to 14 that emphasized a positive message of peace and courage," said Derby Academy Head of School, Andrea Archer. "I wanted to share stories of courage from that day with the students and emphasize that having courage does mean you don't have fear. Rather, courage is pushing through your fears to do what you know is right."

Pinwheels for Peace, an art installation project started by two art teachers in 2005 seemed like the perfect way for the children to express their feelings about this major world event. Because pinwheels are a symbol of the simplicity and joy of childhood, it was a fun and comfortable medium for the kids to work with. All students in Pre-kindergarten through grade eight were given a blank piece of paper on which to write a message of peace. Each personalized message was then attached to a blue pinwheel and displayed on the fence along Burditt Avenue, creating Derby's " Wall of Peace." The pinwheels will remain there through International Peace Day on Sept. 21.

Amy Fish, a first grade teacher at Derby and head of the Lower School Library, pointed out that the younger children's messages were about peace in their families and their communities. "For them, peace is on a small, local scale. It's about being nice to your friends and classmates and if you're nice to each other, then you'll have peace."

The Middle and Upper School students, who had a broader knowledge of what happened 10 years ago on September 11, wrote messages that had a more global appeal. Several messages said simply, "World Peace" or "No More War" and one had a beautiful drawing of a white dove.

Will Johnson of Norwell, a seventh grader at Derby placed a particularly poignant message on his: "If you have peace, then you have love. If you have love, then you have life."

As the picnic wound down, Derby music teacher Mark Rabuck treated students and their families to a song about peace that he wrote shortly after the terrorist attacks. "It was a wonderful way to come together as a community to recognize a difficult day in our country's history, but also to emphasize that building good communities is the bedrock of empathy," says Archer. "We are united in our desire for positive, supportive relationships in all levels at Derby."

The wall of peace can be seen on Burditt Avenue, near the entrance to the Lower School across from Fearing Road.

LIFE AT CHS

School year in full swing

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Congratulations CHS, we've made it through our first real, full week of school! Now, there's only 171 days left in the year – well, for underclassmen at least. Everybody has started to settle into their daily routines of waking up early and going to school for six and half hours. The large quantities of homework everybody has received in the past two weeks have served as a major wakeup call that it's definitely time to get back to reality and focus on schoolwork!

But of course it's not all about studying! This year homecoming is especially early. Instead of being midway through October like it has been the past few years, the homecoming football game falls on Sept. 30. Consequently, that means Spirit Week is in a week and a half! Student Council had multiple meetings during lunch this week to begin planning the spirit days, the pep rally, and the Homecoming dance! Since there is less time to prepare this year, Student Council needs students' help brainstorming ideas – and fast! Any and all ideas regarding Spirit Week (and anything else you'd like to see Student Council do this year) are welcomed and appreciated – just talk to one of your class officers as soon as possible.

Thursday was a special Advisory day, with each class shortened to make room for a homeroom block midday. This monthly Advisory schedule was introduced two years ago and has been a success so far. Additionally, the Freshman Breakfast was on Friday morning, during which all of the new students at CHS gathered in the cafeteria for a welcoming meeting.

Now for an update on fall sports! There were a bunch of games and meets throughout the week, and the fall sports season is now in full swing. There have already been some intense and close games, for example, last Friday's boys' soccer tie against Scituate. The field hockey team dealt with postponements but has finally begun their season. Cross country lost to a very large East Bridgewater team on Tuesday, but they have an upcoming meet tomorrow.

On another note, back to school night is this coming Tuesday, Sept. 20. All parents are invited to go to the school and meet their children's teachers, sit in the kids' (slightly uncomfortable) desks, and hang around the halls of CHS chatting with fellow parents.

Well, that's it for this week Cohasset! See you next week.

PS. To the man on Pleasant Street who read about me in "Picture This!" last week and gave my friend a book about Teddy Roosevelt for me because he's the person I'd like to meet: thank you so much! That was so thoughtful and kind; I can't wait to read it!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

Season opens with 'Heroic Rhapsody'

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra is tuning up for its 15th season – blending large-scale classical concerts and smaller, more-intimate performances, and offering them in seven separate venues in South Shore communities.

The ASO's main orchestral halls again will be Duxbury's Performing Arts Center and Braintree's Center for the Arts at Thayer Academy, with one performance scheduled for Boston's Jordan Hall. ASO Music Director Jin Kim, himself beginning is 15th year with the orchestra, describes this season as "anchored with works that have revolutionized the world of music."

Opening Night on Saturday, Oct. 22, at 7:30 p.m., will resound through Duxbury's lovely hall, at 130 St. George St., just off Route 3A. And Maestro Kim has selected to begin our season with some of the world's most beloved music, in a program he has dubbed "Heroic Rhapsody."

What better way to initiate a concert – or an entire season – than Aaron Copland's stirring Fanfare for the Common Man, with its solemn timpani entrance introducing the majestic invocation for those the world's unsung heroes. Also on the program: Samuel Barber's heartrending Adagio for Strings and George Gershwin's jaunty-jet-majestic "Rhapsody in Blue," with that true ASO audience favorite, Konstantinos Papadakis, as piano soloist. The iconic works by these three American giants of musical composition will be followed with Tchaikovsky's triumphant "Symphony No. 5."

More than ever, this ASO season will feature opportunities for socializing and getting to know your fellow audiences members. Stay tuned for news of a series of concert-related parties to help turn many of our ASO performances into a part of a wonderful "evening out." (Also, see the attached feature on pre-season ASO highlights – with events at Hingham's Derby Street Shoppes, and historic Old Ship Church, along with Duxbury's Drew Archival Library.)

The 2011-2012 concert season continues on Dec. 3 with "Holiday Fireworks," as we've labeled this year's edition of our traditional Joyful Noise! concert. It will take place at the Thayer center in Braintree – and will combine holiday favorites by Leroy Anderson and others with thrilling works by Handel and Dvorak, capped by the most beloved symphony of all time, Beethoven's dramatic Fifth.

ROY HARRIS

The ASO's Masterworks Gala and Masterworks Classical concerts this season will be on Friday, March 30, and Saturday, March 31, at Boston's treasured Jordan Hall and at the Duxbury center, respectively. Both programs will feature Beethoven's "Leonora overture No. 3" and the "Shostakovich Symphony No. 1." But there is a different solo work for each. Hung-Kuan Chen makes a return performance at New England Conservatory's Jordan Hall, playing the "Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1" on Friday, while violinist Xiang "Angelo" Yu will perform the glorious "Bruch Violin Concerto No. 1" in Duxbury.

Interspersed within the season, too, are our Discovery Concert, aimed at the South Shore's youth Jan. 29 at Thayer in Braintree; the popular Chamber Concert on Feb. 11 at Hingham's House of Prayer Lutheran Church; the ASO Competition Finale on March 4 at Thayer in Braintree; and "Classical On Tap," an intimate look at ASO music and one musician on April 22 at Bridgeman's Restaurant, Hull.

The orchestral season will end with the ASO Pops Concert, a "Broadway Revue" on Saturday, May 5, at the Thayer center in Braintree. Music from "Phantom of the Opera," "Les Miserables," "The King and I" and "Oklahoma" is featured, just for starters.

Season subscriptions, as well as individual tickets, are now available. See www.atlanticsymphony.org, or call the ASO office in Weymouth at 781-331-3600. And get ready for some great South Shore music.

Atlantic Symphony Orchestra music director Jin Kim.

Pre-season ASO highlights

Even before the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's exciting Opening Night on Oct. 22, three pre-season events give music fans a chance to gear up for the season.

The first is a "Celebration of Music and Lights" on Thursday, Sept. 22, at 6:30 p.m. at Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham, where the Triton Brass Quintet will appear, along with ASO members, at the shopping center's "hidden pond" area, behind the Whole Foods Market. The event offers attendees a chance both to celebrate, and to remember, special people in their lives.

The members of the award-winning Triton Brass Quintet, artists-in-residence at The Boston Conservatory, have also served for six years as chamber music faculty at Boston University's Tanglewood Institute.

More information is at the www.derbystreetshoppes.com website.

Then, two October "Masters Uncorked" programs – one in Hingham, the other in Duxbury – are sure to delight. Featuring ASO concertmaster Ethan Wood and Maestro Jin Kim, these events offer a glimpse into all things orchestral. The Sunday, Oct. 9, edition, at 5:30 p.m. is at Old Ship Church, 90 Main St., Hingham. It is followed on Sunday, Oct. 16, at 5:30 p.m. at Duxbury's Drew Archival Library, 147 St. George St. Each program is $20 a person, $10 for those 18 and under.

Check them out at the www.atlanticsymphony.org website. Or call the ASO's Weymouth office, 781-331-3600.

RISD Reunion exhibition at South Shore Art Center

RISD Reunion at South Shore Art Center showcases work by five artists who launched careers from one particular school of art. In the 1960s, Rhode Island School of Design drew Todd McKie, Richard Merkin, Karen Moss, Leigh Palmer, and Phyllis Gay Palmer into its dynamic world of creativity. Show dates are Sept. 16 through Oct. 30, 2011. An opening reception will be held Friday, Sept. 16 from 6-8 p.m., free and open to the public.

After earning his master's degree at RISD in 1963, Merkin taught painting and drawing at the Providence school—a stint that spanned more than 40 years. The four other artists participated in RISD's European Honors Program based in Rome, where they found a unique base for independent reflection and personal development—pursuits the artists continue to embrace half a century later.

And even though their mediums, subjects and styles are markedly different, their art shares a distinct vibrancy coupled with a steadfast commitment to individual exploration and growth.

Work by these artists can be found in noteworthy collections, including ABC, Boston Public Library, Citibank, Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Center, deCordova Sculpture Park and Museum, The Gund Collection, IBM, Microsoft, Museum of Fine Arts Boston, The Museum of Modern Art, Smithsonian American Art Museum, Pepsico, and Sprint Corporation, among others.

With RISD Reunion, South Shore Art Center is delighted to celebrate not only the five artists featured in the exhibit, but also Rhode Island School of Design, an influential and valued art education institution located only an hour away in neighboring Providence.

Gallery Hours are Monday through Saturday, 10-4 and Sunday, 12-4. www.ssac.org 781-383-2787.

SOUTH SHORE ART CENTER

If You or Someone You Know Is Struggling with Hearing Loss...Don't Miss This Opportunity!

WANTED
30 People

30 People Who Have Difficulty Hearing, Especially In Noisy Situations, To Evaluate New and Exciting Open Ear Digital Technology, Risk Free!

Mass Audiology will have Hearing Instrument Specialists available to perform comprehensive hearing evaluations at no charge for the first 30 qualified callers to determine if you're a candidate for this new ultra-modern, open-ear Reveal Link M480 hearing system. Applicants selected will be asked to give their opinion on these remarkable new hearing devices for 2 weeks. These state-of-the-art instruments solve a really big problem by amplifying high frequencies without plugging up the ear canal as in traditional hearing aids, and is hardly noticeable when worn. The devices will be fit and digitally programmed on the spot in one of our offices.

Participants who wish to keep their instruments can do so at a tremendous savings due to their participation.

However, if you feel the hearing aids do not improve your hearing, simply return them. The 30 participants also receive free batteries for the evaluation period. A very small, fully refundable security deposit will be required.

Candidates will be selected by September 30th 2011

HOLLY HILL FARM

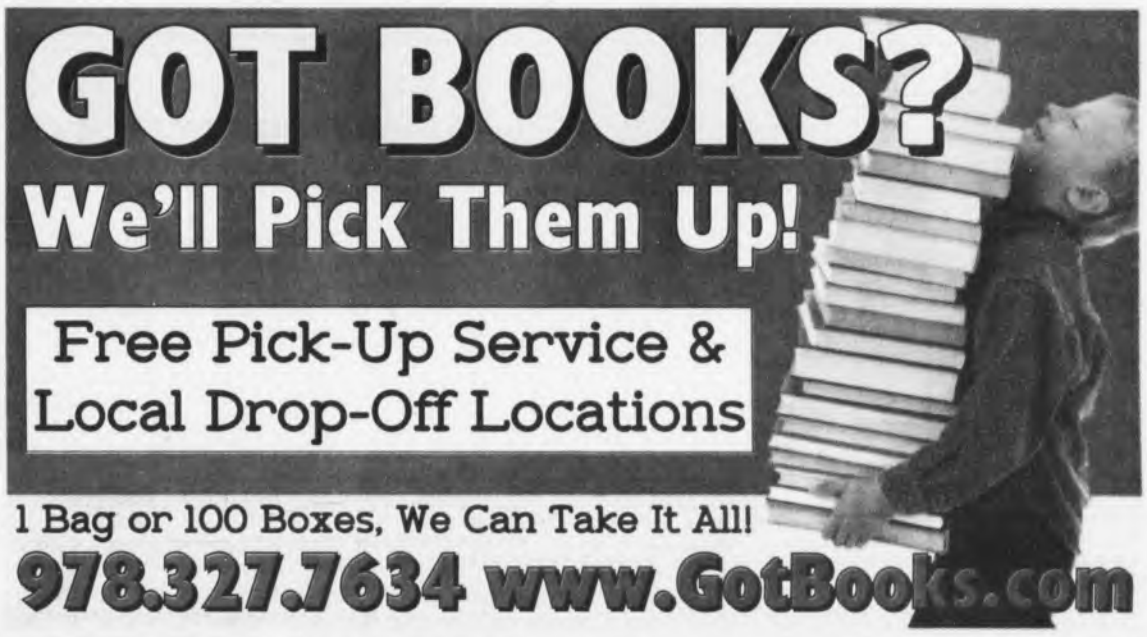
Tomato Festival a treat for many

Holly Hill Farm held its second annual Tomato Festival last weekend. Hundreds of people came to the farm to enjoy the beautiful weather and sample 12 varieties of organic tomatoes grown at the farm. Sally Rossi-Ormon of Scituate, farm educator for the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, was busy baking delicious flat breads in the wood-fired mud oven with vegetables grown on the farm.

Lisa Barlow, an assistant chef from Hola Restaurant in Marshfield, came to judge the tomato recipe contest. The winner was Janice McPhillips of Hingham who made a roasted tomato pie made with tomatoes grown on the farm. There were hayrides and a fairy house making expedition for the kids and several vendors selling locally made treats including baked goods, jams, and grilled sausages and hot dogs.

Holly Hill Farm events

Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset is having a Harvest Tapas and Wine Dinner on Saturday, Sept. 17 at 5 p.m. Acclaimed chef Maryann Saporito of Hola Tapas Restaurant in Marshfield will prepare a tapas feast made with produce from the farm and baked in the wood-fired mud oven. The meal will include wines to complement the tapas, selected by The Weinery of North Scituate. The evening will include a silent auction of art, jewelry and wine. Tickets are $75 per person and proceeds will benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Seating is limited so call 781-383-6565 to reserve a spot. This event is rain or shine.



Holly Hill Farm is having its fourth annual Discover the Woods Day on Sunday Oct. 2. There is a 5K run at 9 a.m., a 1 mile fun run/walk at 11 a.m. and in the afternoon there will be guided nature walks all through the 130 acres of woods that abut and surround the 5 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs. There will also be a home composting workshop at 1 p.m. so you can learn how to make compost at home, just like Mother Nature does in the woods. Race registration forms and more information are available at www.hollyhill-farm.org or by calling 781-383-6565. Proceeds from these events will benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom for school field trips, workshops, and summer programs for children and adults.

Sally Rossi-Ormon of Scituate makes flatbreads to bake in the oven while hungry people watch.

From left, Tess Wier, summer Holly Hill Farm intern, Linda Storm of Scituate; and farm owner/resident Jean White slicie 12 varieties of tomatoes for the tasting.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 26, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You'll soon have a chance to take a big step up from where you are to where you want to be. Check it out first. Remember: Even the Mountain Sheep looks before it leaps.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week brings a challenge that could determine the future direction of your life. If you're ready for a change, accept it with confidence. A loved one supports your decision.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A disruption creates a delay in completing your projects. Use this time to pursue a personal matter you were too busy to deal with before. You'll find it will be time well spent.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You still need to be on the alert for any signs of problems that could create serious misunderstandings. A more positive aspect begins to emerge toward the week's end. Be patient.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With things slowing down a bit this week, it would be a good time for luxury-loving Leonines to go somewhere for some well-earned pampering. Things liven up around Friday.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Single Virgos looking for partners are finally getting a break from Venus, who has moved in to make things happen. Attached Virgos see their relationships blossom.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You've been working hard to get things done. Now take a breather and recheck your next step. You might want to make some changes in view of the news that comes your way.

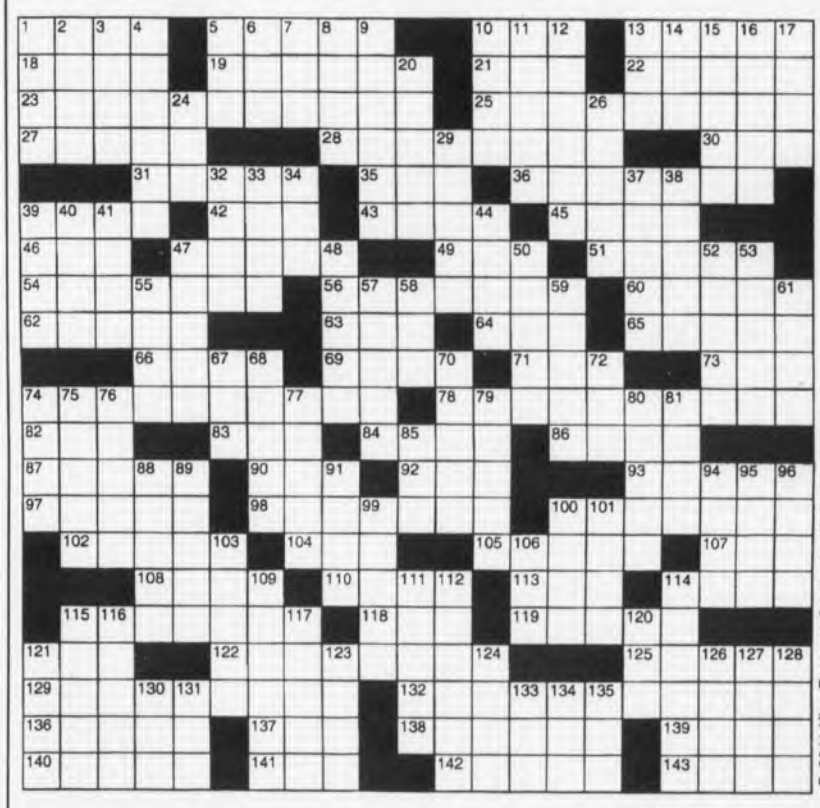
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The watchword for savvy Scorpios this week is "preparation." Consider sharpening your skills to make the most of the new opportunity you're about to take on.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) There might still be some loose ends that need tucking up if you hope to get that important relationship repaired. A new spurt of activity starts soon.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good idea to keep the positive momentum going by finding and getting rid of anything that could cause you to stumble. Keep the path ahead clear and open.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A period of contemplation is advised before you make your next move. Be sure that where you decide to go is the right place for you. A health matter needs attention.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) That new energy surge that hit you last week continues to send out good vibrations. Try investing a part of it in creating something noteworthy on the job.



(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You like to balance your personal universe, and in doing so, you help bring harmony into the lives of the rest of us.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CONSERVATION COMMISSION

Petitioners come forward

Citizens find their way to Selectmen's agenda

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

For the petitioners, two months was a long time to wait.

On July 12, the Board of Selectmen shocked citizens of Cohasset by unseating three seasoned Conservation Commissioners who were up for reappointment (Sarah Charron, Debbie Cook and Dick Karoff), installing three new members in their stead. 120 residents signed a petition asking the board to rescind their decision, reinstate the Commissioners, and agree to an investigation regarding the matter and the board's total involvement with Cat Dam. The petition was mentioned during the public commentary in an August selectmen meeting. The item finally found its way to the selectmen's agenda on Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr apologized to the group of 40-plus petitioners in attendance, saying the reason for the delay was not him trying to avoid the matter but rather trying to find enough time to properly address it.

"We waited two months," said Susan Kent of 646 Jerusalem Road. "Thanks for finally sharing your thoughts."

"The voters hold us accountable for our actions every three years; they expect us to hold our appointees accountable."
Selectman Paul Carlson

The agenda allotted a short time slot, from 8 to 8:30 p.m., to the petition, but the discussion ended up lasting until after 10 p.m. No one seemed eager to clear the meeting room afterward, either, although the board was

Bike-decorating contest popular as ever

Cohasset Day organizers say the fourth annual decorated bicycle contest had some of the most creatively decorated bikes to date. Pictured here is Liz Mitterando, who won "Best in Show." Cohasset Day 2011 also featured classic cars, high fashion, delicious food and everything from a tug o' war to a dunk tank. Local restaurants provided great food while the music of Loco Locals, Aldous Collins and Jackson Weatherbee had them dancing in the street. For more on Cohasset Day, see pages 16 & 17.

SENIOR CENTER

Planning underway

Subcommittee talks future staff budget

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The newly formed Senior Center Planning Group is up and running following its first official meeting two weeks ago, where the group formed two subcommittees to tackle budgetary and legal issues. The budget subcommittee, consisting of the planning group's Chairman and Selectmen liaison Paul Carlson, Director of Cohasset Elder Affairs Coral Grande, Chairman of Cohasset Elder Affairs Board of Directors John Campbell, and Social Service League Vice President Sandra Halverson, had their first meeting on Monday, Sept. 19.

The group attempted to nail down a potential budget for the future senior center, which has yet to be built. Carlson hoped to have some numbers for two or three years ahead and work backward to give an idea of costs that would need to be covered up front and what the potential inflation could be overtime.

Drug take-back container

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

What
If you have prescription drugs in your medicine cabinet that you no longer need, the Cohasset Police Department has a new drug take-back container – and you are invited to use it.

Why
Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey and Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca agree that getting un-used prescription drugs out of residents' medicine cabinets is an important tool in keeping them out of circulation – and thereby preventing addictions and the crime and misery that often accompany them.
With the Food and Drug Administration recommending against flushing unused medicine down the toilet or disposing of it in household trash, for environmental and other reasons, these containers provide a safe method. Morrissey has contacted Covanta Energy and arranged for Norfolk County Departments to be able to have drugs collected in the bins incinerated by that company at no cost to the town.

How
District Attorney Morrissey worked out an arrangement with Bay State Community Services' Impact Quincy program that provided a two-thirds subsidy for police to acquire the $900 containers. Morrissey awarded Cohasset a $300 grant from the DA's office, drawn from drug profits forfeited in narcotics prosecutions, and a $300 grant from anti-drug funds that Impact Quincy had through the Department of Public Health. Thirteen communities applied and all were awarded grants. Cohasset is the sixth town to take delivery of the collection box.
In May, District Attorney Morrissey wrote to Norfolk County police chiefs to ask them to consider hosting a drug collection container. Chief DeLuca worked with Health Agent Joseph R. Godzik and the Cohasset Board of Health and arranged for the board to finance the remaining $295 of the net price.

Quote
"It is in the lobby of the police station and ready for use," Chief DeLuca said. "A few minutes of your time today could save someone else a lifetime of consequences."

Residents are encouraged to deposit their old prescription drugs at the police station in the new take-back container. COURTESY PHOTO

Martin Geoghegan

Name: Martin Geoghegan.

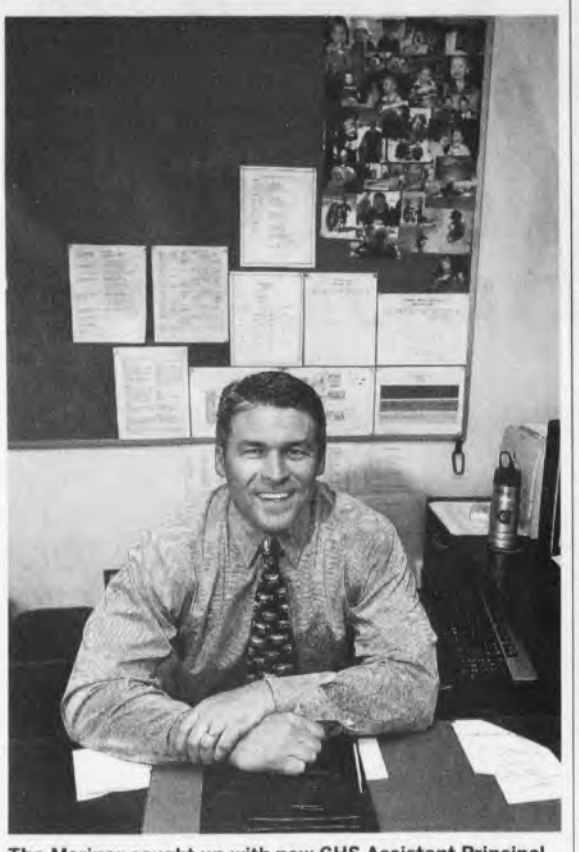
Occupation: Assistant Principal at Cohasset High School.

Best day of your life: Three-way Tie — Wedding day and the births of my two sons (now 8 and a half and 10 years old).

Best vacation: Last April, we took the boys with their grandparents to Disney World for a few days and it is definitely one of the most amazing places on earth.

Favorite season: Fall; not to take anything away from the beauty and relaxed nature of summer, but the weather is usually perfect and school begins — I guess I'm a little geeky in that way, having been a teacher and administrator. The start of school is always an enjoyable time.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving, the greatest holiday of them all. It is just a time to be with friends and family, and be thankful for what we have.



Favorite meal: My favorite meal is Shepherd's Pie. It is excellent comfort food.

Best book: My favorite book is "Rules of the Red Rubber Ball." It has been called an adult version of Dr. Seuss's "Oh, the Places You'll Go." It mainly talks about enjoying what we do and remembering to always have fun. It is something I try to live by.

Best movie: "Braveheart." The film centers on always following your beliefs and convictions, and never giving up.

Best TV show: "Seinfeld." Just a true classic.

Best music, group, or artist: America's finest poet and storyteller, Bruce Springsteen.

Pet peeve: Something that annoys me is cancer or anything that can hurt kids, which is why I walk, this year for the 10th time, last Saturday, the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk. It's such an impressive event and one I treasure participating in.

Goal: My goal this year is to be a tremendous asset to Dr. Gill and the rest of the CMHS community as their assistant principal. I am looking forward to a fantastic year filled with some great learning experiences for all.

Person you'd most like to meet: I would have loved to have met Randy Pausch, the author of "The Last Lecture."

Biggest worry: No worries right now.

Best part of Cohasset: For me, it is the Middle-High School. It is a wonderful place to work with some truly great educators.

NEWS ALERT

Mosquito Control issues advisory

Mosquitoes will continue their search for blood meals until the first hard frost, which is when temperatures fall below 28° Fahrenheit for a few hours.

At the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project it is understood that the "psychological" end of summer has arrived for many people, Labor Day has passed, students are back in school and many people are pulling boats from their moorings, etc. However, the mosquitoes are not yet ready to leave people alone. They will continue their search for blood meals until the first hard frost, which is when temperatures fall below 28° Fahrenheit for a few hours.

Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project urges people to continue to take precautions by draining standing water on their property, including old tires; limiting exposure at times when mosquitoes are most active, dawn and dusk; by using EPA approved repellants, and to consider wearing clothing that will reduce the potential for being bitten by a mosquito.

For more detailed information, visit the website at www.plymouthmosquito.org.

Big Brother Big Sister clothing collection

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation has placed a clothing donation drop-off box in the Aubuchon Hardware parking lot at 823 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy.

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation collects donations of lightly used clothing of all types for men, women and children, shoes, sneakers, accessories, handbags and jeans. They turn donations into funds for the mentoring programs, by selling them in bulk to local thrift stores. Fundraising projects like the clothing collection program are crucial in helping Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies match more children with adult mentors. Q&A on nuclear plant

Marshfield mom wants to get information out

By Kelly Anne Clinton
kclinton@wickedlocal.com

Anna Baker, a Marshfield mother of two, is advocating for more awareness of the potential harm of the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Station. Since the earthquake and tsunami, which devastated Japan on March 11 and consequently caused malfunctions of the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant, Baker had questions. One of them being—could that happen here? The Pilgrim nuclear power station is located about 30 miles south of Marshfield in Plymouth.

Baker said to get answers she attended a question and answer session at the Duxbury Public Library put on by Pilgrim Watch.

"I knew there was a power plant there, but I was never that concerned until the Fukushima disaster," Baker said. "I started looking into how far away we were and the potential dangers, and I went to the session and I realized there were more problems than I had known about."

Baker said many of the questions she had were answered at the session, but with more information came new concerns. Wanting people in surrounding communities to be aware of the potential harm Baker organized a rally in May in front of the Plymouth plant to raise awareness.

"This is not a political group or an anti-nuclear group," Baker said prior to the rally in May. "We are a group of concerned residents who are interested in educating others and encouraging the people at Pilgrim to do all they can to ensure public safety. United States officials extended the danger zone in Japan to 50 miles from the nuclear plant following the disaster; much farther than the Japanese government did for its own citizens. We are within the 50-mile radius of Pilgrim here in Marshfield. If anything similar were to happen here, it would be a major problem."

Marshfield, along with many South Shore towns, is also included in the 50-mile radius that surrounds the nuclear power plant in Plymouth. Baker has organized another question and answer session for residents in Marshfield, Scituate and other surrounding communities at the Marshfield Public Library on Tuesday, Sept. 27 at 6:30 p.m.

Pilgrim Watch, a grassroots organization that serves the public interest in issues regarding the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Station in Plymouth, puts the session together.

"I'm really just hoping to build an awareness and educate people in the surrounding communities on the safety problems at the plant," said Baker.

With more people informed and more people involved she hopes she can find a way to ensure the safety of the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Plant.

"I don't think people really know it's a threat, but clearly it's something that people have to be worried about," she said.

She hopes to attract all worried citizens, including parents, like her, with young children.

"If people are interested in schools and libraries for children then they should also be interested in protecting them from a major threat that's not too far away," said Baker. "In order to make any change at all, we have to begin by just showing up."

For more information on Pilgrim Watch visit pilgrimwatch.org.

Mississippi woman to be charged in summer 'baby-hoax' incident

A 44-year-old Biloxi, Miss., woman has confessed to the baby-hoax call received by Cohasset dispatch center last July. Sharp detective work is being credited in locating the woman, who has allegedly made similar calls to police in various locations across the country.

On Monday, July 25, at about 11:15pm, the Cohasset Police Department's emergency dispatch center received an emergency telephone call from a woman who was reporting that she was giving birth to a baby behind a gas station in Cohasset Village. The female was moaning in pain and screaming for help, police said.

Police and fire department units were dispatched to the scene. The woman was never found. Police searched the area for over an hour including Dumpsters and trash receptacles and called in assistance from the Scituate K-9 unit. Cohasset Police notified area towns to check their gas station areas and police also called South Shore, Quincy and Jordan hospitals to see if anyone had just given birth.

Police also thought the incident might have been a ruse to tie them up while a crime was taking place. They sent cruisers to check businesses along Route 3A to be sure there was no suspicious activity.

During the course of the summer, Cohasset detectives investigated this crime, which included obtaining a subpoena ordering Verizon to provide Cohasset detectives with the originating cellular telephone number where this hoax call came from. Had the call come in on the 9-1-1 line, it could have been traced immediately, police said.

Early in September Cohasset Police Detective James McLean read a nationwide police broadcast that was sent via the NCIC (National Crime Information Center) computer from the Tallahassee, Florida Police Department. This police broadcast detailed an incident in Tallahassee that was almost identical to the incident that occurred in Cohasset in July. McLean contacted detectives in Tallahassee and was able to determine that their suspect had committed similar crimes in Oakland, California; and Dothan, Alabama.

The suspect was identified as Connie Olson, 44, from Biloxi, Mississippi. She is homeless and mentally ill, police said. Cohasset detectives were able to call her and interview her. Police said she provided information that only the hoax caller would have known, and subsequently confessed to the crime.

Olsen will be criminally charged with making a false report to police. She will be arraigned in Quincy District Court sometime in October. Police Chief Mark DeLuca praised the work of his detectives stating, "This was a great piece of old-fashioned police work."

Five car crashes investigated

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• Police investigated a two-car crash at Beechwood Street by Heritage Lane on Monday (Sept. 12) at 9:02 a.m. A 67-year-old Hanover man in a 2008 Ford Escape was headed east on Beechwood (from Route 3A) when he attempted to make a left-hand-turn onto Heritage Lane by the railroad tracks. In doing so, he cut off a 2004 Subaru Forrester, operated by a 29-year-old Cohasset woman. Both cars were towed; there were no apparent injuries. The Hanover man was cited for failure to yield.

• At 12:40 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 13), police responded to a single-car crash in the area of 744 Jerusalem Road. Police said a 27-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2010 Pontiac Vibe was headed south on Jerusalem Road when she went off the road, hit a pole and a stonewall. She was not transported to the hospital; her car was towed. The woman was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes. Police said driver inattention was the cause of the accident.

• At 12:48 a.m. on Thursday (Sept. 15), police responded to a crash near 481 N. Main St. Police said the driver, a 20-year-old Hingham man, said he dropped his cell phone and when he reached down to retrieve it, drove off the road. Police said the 2003 Toyota 4runner, the man was driving, took out eight cement guardrail posts (between the T station and Cedar Street) and then hit a pole. He was not transported to the hospital but his car was towed. He was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes and speeding.

• At 12:37 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 15), police responded to a car vs. deer accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the Rose Hill subdivision. Police said a deer darted out in front of a 2009 Audi, operated by a 52-year-old Cohasset woman, who was headed south. The deer had two broken hind legs and had to be put down at the side of the road. MassDOT disposed of the deer. The Audi was drivable and the operator was not injured. Police said they had 20, 9-1-1 calls about the accident.

• At 6:05 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 16), police responded to a two-vehicle crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and the entrance to Old Colony Square (near the train station). A 2011 VW Jetta, operated by a 23-year-old Hull man had stopped to make a left into the shopping center when it was struck from behind by a 2010 Ford Fusion, operated by a 46-year-old Walpole man. The 23-year-old was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Both vehicles were towed. The Walpole man was cited for following too closely. He told police he had momentarily become distracted when the accident occurred.

Warrant

At 8:42 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 12), police arrested a 31-year-old Hull woman on several active warrants for larceny. Police said the woman, who is known to police, was a passenger in a 2004 Kia Sedona that was traveling by North Main Street by the common when police spotted her. She jumped in the back seat and tried to hide under some clothing before police approached the car, police said.

Cat attacked

The Animal Control Officer, who was away last week, is following up on a report last week that two Shepard-mix dogs attacked a cat near Beach Street and killed it. A neighbor of the cat's owner reported the incident.

Breathalyzer

Scituate police brought a 44-year-old Scituate woman, who was under the influence of alcohol, to Cohasset PD last week because their breathalyzer was out of service. CPD then conducted the courtesy booking and logged the information into the computer system.

Boat sunk

A 41-year-old Cohasset woman notified police last Tuesday (Sept. 13) that her 12-foot Zodiac inflatable boat with a 2008 Honda outboard motor on it had been vandalized and sunk as it was tied to the public dock. Police said the vandals filled the boat with trash and punctured it, causing it to sink. The boat and motor are worth a total of $4,000.

Bank alert

Police alerted local banks last week after the Hingham Federal Credit Union on Brook Street in Scituate was robbed by a white man in blue pajama bottoms and a gray shirt. The man is still at large.

Backyard

A 16-year-old boy who is properly licensed told police he was lost on an unclear part of the roadway and did not intend to drive through the back yard of a home off Jerusalem Road last week. The homeowner, a 50-year-old Cohasset man, reported a Land Rover had driven through his backyard. He left his house and followed the car to Rustic Drive (a dead-end) where he blocked it in until police arrived. The incident is under investigation; no charges have been filed.

Summonsed

A 28-year-old Hingham man is being summonsed to court for operating after license suspension following a traffic stop at 11:42 p.m., last Friday (Sept. 16) on King Street near Dunkin Donuts. The gray 2001 VW was pulled over for having a defective headlight. A registry check revealed the registered owner had a suspended license. The car was towed.

Arrest

A 30-year-old Quincy man was arrested last Saturday (Sept. 17) at 6:24 p.m. after an officer ran a random registry check on the car he was driving that revealed he had a suspended license. He stopped the vehicle; confirmed the license was suspended (subsequent offense) and placed the man under arrest.

LIBRARY

Internationally acclaimed authors come to town

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Nothing beats a good book. Whether we read for knowledge, insight, or entertainment, we are all driven by the same hunger – to feel the possibility of wholeness in our lives. Good writing connects us to others, and within that tapestry of humanness, we discover something about our origins, our frailties, and the consequences of flying too high.

The next best thing to a good book is its author, which is the feature of Paul Pratt Memorial Library's first annual series of Sunday AuthorTalks. Ten distinguished authors – all New York Times bestsellers – will come to Cohasset to talk about their works on Sunday afternoons, from October to May.

Following each talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunities for further discourse, conversation with the author, and book signing. "One of the core missions of libraries is to connect readers with books and ideas, and this program is designed to do just that. We are excited to offer Cohasset residents the opportunity to engage with talented Massachusetts authors here in their own community," Director Jackie Rafferty said.

The idea for Sunday AuthorTalks was launched last February when members of the Board of Trustee's Program Committee began investigating possibilities for author visits. The decision to limit their search to Massachusetts writers was prompted in part by the library's inability to provide for transportation and overnight accommodations; however, the committee learned quickly that the restriction was in fact a windfall that led them to a trove of local internationally esteemed artists – some of them old favorites, some who had recently published, and some who had just published for the first time.

"Sunday AuthorTalks will surely spark interest, ideas, debate, and further reading, and we hope, too, it will attract some of our high school students," said committee member Lynne DeGiacomo.

Creating a mix of genres became an interesting challenge for the committee because members wanted the roster of writers to reflect the diverse interests of Cohasset readers. Consequently, journalism, history, biography, science, and fiction are all represented in this year's series.

Each month features one author; however, in January, a special panel of three fiction writers will discuss both their own novels and those of other authors within the context of book group selections. Buttonwood books will provide books for sale at each event.

Admission is free to all events but seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. Phone the library to reserve a ticket, 781-383-1348, or pick up your tickets well in advance at Buttonwood Books, South Shore Art Center, Cohasset Historical Society, or the Cohasset Library.

"Sunday AuthorTalks is an outstanding event, and both Friends of the Library and the Board of Trustees are excited about presenting it to the town. It's truly a Boston quality program, and the best part is that no one has to go more than a mile or two to be a part of it," said Rafferty.

To understand the world a little better or gain a different perspective of human nature or simply soak up some knowledge, join neighbors, friends, and other readers at Sunday AuthorTalks. Break some bread, enjoy a glass of wine (or any other beverage of choice) and perhaps a little conversation. Sunday afternoons. October through May.

Visit cohassetlibrary.org to learn more about the authors and find links to book reviews, author bios, and other works.

Sunday AuthorTalks at 4 p.m., at Cohasset Library, followed by a wine and cheese reception.

Schedule:

Oct. 2: William Powers, "Hamlet's Blackberry."

Nov. 6: Charles C. Mann, "1493."

Dec. 4: Tony Horwitz, "Midnight Rising" (to be published Oct. 24, 2011).

Jan. 8: Fiction Forum with Brunonia Barry, "The Map of True Places"; Randy Susan Meyers, "The Murderer's Daughters"; Ilie Ruby, "The Language of Trees"; Feb. 12: Jennifer Haigh, "Faith"; March 4: Heather C. Richardson, "Wounded Knee"; April 1: Vincent Cannato, "The History of Ellis Island"; and May 6: Matthew Pearl, "The Technologists" to be published Feb. 21, 2012.

Call 781-383-1348 for more information and join the library on Facebook. Sunday AuthorTalks made possible by a generous gift from the Cohasset Rotary Club. Wine and cheese reception is sponsored by A Taste of Wine and Spirits and Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Eagle Scout beautifies view at recycling center

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset High senior is also a leader in school, participating on Student Council, the Teen Advisory Board and working as a Peer Leader in the middle school.

Cohasset High senior Morgan McCarthy wears many hats, from sailing team captain to National Honor Society president, to executive editor of the school newspaper. While the 17-year-old may excel in many subjects, he wouldn't call himself a construction expert.

Yet when it came time to propose his Eagle Scout project, construction is exactly what he found himself doing.

McCarthy's mentor Merle Brown, Chairman of Boy Scout Troop 28, manages the glass bottle recycling center at the Cohasset recycling facility, where the troop often volunteers. Brown first told McCarthy of the building's need for a new roof, and McCarthy decided to propose that for his Eagle Scout project.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest a Boy Scout can achieve. In order to become one, a scout must have earned 21 merit badges and completed a service project that shows leadership skills and benefits a local community non-profit.

McCarthy, who has been a Boy Scout since 2005, was awarded Eagle Scout on May 1, 2011.

McCarthy's service project took place over 223 hours (Eagle Scout projects require at least 100 hours) and involved "30 different people, including scouts, advisors, adults and friends," he said.

Over a few weekends in July and August 2010, McCarthy and his helpers re-shingled the recycling building's roof, as well as painted and fixed parts of the building that were in dire need of repair. The building was painted the same shade of blue to match the other buildings in the facility, McCarthy showed the Cohasset Mariner in a PowerPoint presentation.

Through these repairs, McCarthy hoped to benefit the town by "providing a nicer and cleaner atmosphere for those utilizing the facility." He added that the project also helped save the town money by not having to hire workers to fix the building.

The project cost $1,172.01, which was funded by a generous donation from the Rotary Club, whom McCarthy presented his plans to, as well as private donations.

McCarthy also placed a bulletin and a bucket in front of where he and his crew were working at the center. The bucket alone collected $127.

McCarthy, who was a Cub Scout growing up before moving on to the Boy Scouts, said that one reason he has stuck with the program over the years is because he's enjoyed all the outdoor activities — "skiing, rafting, camping, hiking, biking."

"I started on the track to become an Eagle Scout because I knew what it represented and what it takes to get there," McCarthy said.

Before becoming an Eagle Scout, McCarthy honed his leadership skills as a patrol leader from 2008 to 2010, which found him in charge of one of Troop 28's subgroups. Being an Eagle Scout, McCarthy said, "instilled leadership qualities in me, helping me understand other people. I've worked with adults, kids younger than me and have tried to lead kids the same age as me — which is difficult."

The Cohasset High senior is also a leader in school, participating on Student Council, the Teen Advisory Board and working as a Peer Leader in the middle school. While McCarthy is still considering colleges, he plans to study neuroscience ("My brother is a chiropractor, so I'm interested in that") and perhaps go on to law school.

Despite his dallying in building improvement, "I don't want to be an engineer," McCarthy said. "But part of being a Boy Scout is trying new things. I've taken a furniture design class but never roofed a building before. I welcomed the challenge; I wanted to make the project mean something."

Morgan McCarthy is one of Cohasset's newest Eagle Scouts. Morgan's project involved re-shingling the recycling center building's roof, as well as painting and fixing parts of the building that were in dire need of repair. COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset Cultural Council supports local arts

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Struggling local arts programs have an advocate in the Cohasset Cultural Council.

The Council is part of a statewide funding network, The Massachusetts Cultural Council's Local Cultural Council (LCC) Program, which supports thousands of community arts, humanities and science programs and events annually. Cohasset's branch often supports the South Shore Arts Center, its largest grantee in fiscal year 2011 — the Center received $1,600 from the council.

Sarah Wood Torrey is the new council's new chairperson, replacing former chair Diane Kennedy. Torrey has served on the council since 2007. New to the group this year are Susan Keene and Juliana Chittick Tiryaki; the rest of the council consists of Alex Adkins, Douglas Eymer, and Selene Carlo-Eymer. Each member is a volunteer.

Each year, the council is allocated around $3,800 to fund community programs. The group meets each year to decide how to divvy up the funds, based on applications they have received. Their grant application for the next fiscal year is due in mid-October.

"Members of council meet, make the grant decision, mail the application out, and receive the grant on a reimbursement basis," Torrey explained. The council decides on an amount to fund each group ahead of time.

In order to be eligible for funding, the program or event must be held in Cohasset or benefit the town's community in some way.

In order to be eligible for funding, the program or event must be held in Cohasset or benefit the town's community in some way.

"We sometimes fund programs that are not based in Cohasset, but that does benefit Cohasset," said Torrey. "We generally focus on Cohasset."

One example of this is the Duxbury Arts Association's Midsummer Art Show, which many Cohasset residents attend. This year the council granted $100 to the event.

Other local recipients include the Cohasset Dramatic Club, which was given $500 to pay for musicians for their winter/spring musical, "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee"; the Cohasset Middle-High School Art Boosters' Annual Cabaret, which was granted $300; the Rusty Skippers Community Band, which received $400 for sheet music; and the Mass. Audubon Society, which was granted $200 for "An Introduction to Birding in Cohasset."

Perhaps for the Cultural Council, deciding on grant recipients is the hardest part of the job. This year, Torrey hopes to see a variety of applicants, including new programs that may not know the Cultural Council exists and is ready to offer a helping hand.

"We are hoping to see a mix," said Torrey.

"There are so many great arts organizations in town and organizations doing arts-based programs that might not know we're here," Torrey continued. "It's important to let people know we're here, and we have funding available."

For more information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, visit their website at https://www.mass-culture.org/cohasset, or call 781-383-3493.

"It's useful to come up with a reasonably complete number — our best guess now," Carlson told the group.

The budget committee discussed how much it would cost to hire food and custodial service employees at the future center. Campbell had been tasked with conducting research on several Massachusetts towns, including Duxbury, Northborough and Franklin, to find out how much they spend on employee wages.

The center will likely employ a part- or full-time cook and custodian, along with transport, outreach and activities coordinators. Many of these positions at the current Senior Center, housed in the South Shore Community Center, are part-time or voluntary.

In addition to hiring new staff for the upcoming center, "We need to increase the hours of the people we already have," Grande said.

Campbell presented figures from various centers across the state. At many center, food service employees tend to be hired on a part-time basis as paid as little as $10 an hour or as much as $15.

"That seems light," Grande said of the pay scale.

Halverson wondered if many of these cooks supplement their income with catering.

"The point is, you can get people for that amount of money [in this economy] to run the program," Carlson said.

The group also discussed the merits of hiring folks on a full- or part-time basis, acknowledging that with full-time work, they will need to offer a benefits package.

Campbell said he felt it would be best to keep as many employees part-time as possible, such as having a part-time day custodian and a contract cleaning crew at night, but neither Carlson nor Grande liked the idea.

"It sounds like we need somebody on duty all the time, which means we need to pay benefits," said Carlson.

Grande agreed. "I'd rather us pay for someone full-time with bennies and put it all in one job description."

Having one full-time custodian "is easier from an advisory standpoint, rather than supervising several positions," said Carlson.

Grande and Campbell agreed to sit down and hash out some more numbers, and draft a spreadsheet to present at the next full Senior Center Planning Group meeting.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE BRIEFS

Cataldo sets five major goals

During the Wednesday, Sept. 21 school committee meeting, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo discussed her five major goals for the rest of 2011, "the first step in my strategic plan."

These goals are as follows:

- Communication and developing positive relationships in the district
- Academic, social and emotional needs of students
- Establish organizational structure
- Current budget process
- Review technology plan

School committee member Linda Snowdale asked Cataldo if the committee could use these goals as part of Cataldo's evaluation tool. The new Superintendent will be evaluated for her performance thus far in November.

Cataldo said, "Absolutely," agreeing that her performance could be evaluated based on whether or not these goals are carried out.

Overall, the committee seemed pleased with Cataldo's plan.

"A lot of this covers what stakeholders were looking for in a Superintendent," said Snowdale.

Cataldo said that these goals "are based on my visit [to Cohasset] in the spring, and my talks with people in the district about what they needed. I spoke with teachers, students, nurses, police and fire — I made as many connections as I could."

Snowdale, along with Jeanne Astino, were voted to comprise the subcommittee charged with developing the evaluation tool.

Five-year financial plan

During Wednesday night's meeting, the school committee discussed its five-year financial projection at a high level.

There is a 3.4 percent increase on expenditures from last year. Assumptions built in including no cost of living or salary increases, or increases in the athletic or transportation budgets.

Superintendent Cataldo said the school committee would need to "look at the budget carefully this year."

Recently, there has been some concern expressed over the school's revolving accounts, particularly concerning the school lunch program. The accounting firm Roselli, Clark and Associates gave the superintendent a report on the program's business operations but did not conduct an audit. The committee discussed how most balances on revolving accounts have been reconciled by the town financial director, John Stanbrook.

School committee member Paul Ognibene said that he would like to try to translate the figures into reports for people unfamiliar with budgeting, and present it at the next school committee meeting on Oct. 5.

AROUND TOWN

Jonathan Tulio brings home the gold!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Blessings

Hello Cohasset, I hope this week was a pleasant one for all, even with a bit of rain. I spent this past week doing many things, one of the most important is taking a few minutes each day to count the blessings, family and friends that we all have in our lives and for all of us to stop "whining" about the small stuff. Way too many of our friends and members within our community are dealing with some really rough issues and could use the prayers and help from those who can and are able to do so. I think it is safe to say that all of us have been in tough situations, myself included and with the love, caring and support from friends and family, it makes the days and nights a little easier to get through. With schools back in action all over the place, we all need to remember to slow down while driving, especially during the times early in the am and later in the afternoon when busses, bikes and walkers are headed to and coming home from school.

Have a wonderful upcoming week and make sure to send any celebration news, event information and photos with captions no later than Tuesday by 5 pm. I have had a number of readers recently commenting that they were not seeing information on a special event or is it ok to send a special birthday, new baby arrival or other celebration piece in the Around Town column and my answer to each and everyone who has asked as well as all who read the column that in order to include it, I need to have you send it to me. Happy Fall everyone!

Medal winner

Members representing Jade Forest Kung Fu/Tai Chi of Cohasset recently participated in the 1st Annual Chinese Kung Fu Championships help at the Reggie Lewis Athletic Center in Boston. The event drew in excess of 400 competitors from Boston and the surrounding area. Jade Forest owner and Chief Instructor John Loupos spent the day officiating at the tournament as a Head Judge. Jade Forest student, Jonathan Tulio of Cohasset, won a Gold medal for sparring in the 8-9 year old Advanced Children division.

Gardens

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its next session of the "Four Seasons in the Garden" program on Thursday, Oct. 6 at the Lightkeepers House. The morning's activities will begin at 9:30 with a seminar exploring the fall garden and getting it ready for winter, fall planting including bulbs and what if of particular interest at this time of year. A morning coffee will be served with light refreshment. In the afternoon five member gardens will be on tour as well as the Lightkeeper's Garden. This is an opportunity to join friends for lunch prior to visiting our fall gardens, noting the changing face of Mother Nature. Advance purchase tickets are available at the Windsor Tea Shop, Darilyns, and Buttonwood Books and Toys and Kennedy's Country Gardens in Scituate for $20 for one day or $75 for all the remaining sessions. Tickets are available on the day of the event for $25.

Essay winner

I received this awesome story to share with all about the Holly Hill Farm. At the farm, a scholarship fund, named for Frank White, the owner and visionary of the farm and the educational programs is in place. This year they held a "Consider This!" essay contest on Why Local Farms Matter. A large number of entries were received and one of the winners was from here in Cohasset. A great big congratulations is being sent out to Cohasset's own, Jack Wipf who entered and won, keep up the great job and support Jack and for everyone in Cohasset and elsewhere, make sure to visit the Holly Hill Farm!

UR honors

David Patrick Toomey, a sophomore majoring in molecular genetics at the University of Rochester, was named to the dean's list for academic achievement for the 2011 spring semester.

Cohasset Day helps the food pantry

By Sean Cunning
Special to the Mariner

Fourth Annual Cohasset Day was held this past Sunday, Sept. 18th. It was hosted by the Economic Development Committee, The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and over 20 volunteers. Cohasset Village was closed-off and the town was open for fun to residents and visitors.

The event began with a kid's bike parade followed by a classic car rally, fashion show, featuring local models and three different stores, live music and a sampling of some of Cohasset's best restaurants.

This event raised $1500 and was donated this week to the Cohasset Food Pantry. The Food Pantry serves local residents in need of food and household items.

The Committee would like to thank everyone involved. A special thank you goes out to Tim Chamberlain from the EDC as well as Matt Cunningham, President of the Chamber of Commerce. Also Peter Brown was instrumental in organizing the Classic Car Rally.

Volunteers from Country House Furnishings and Interiors, McSweeney and Ricci Insurance, Pilgrim Bank, Santi Holistic Healing, and Sullivan Garrity and Donnelly Insurance were on hand for the set-up and coordination needed to run this event.

A few restaurants cancelled at the last minute putting more pressure on the restaurants that participated. A special thanks to Mangia Pizza, Red Lion Inn, Bia Bistro, French Memories, 5 South Main/Baked, and Mr. Dooley's for their donations of food, employees and money.

The committee welcomes any feedback on ways to improve the event. We are already meeting this week to review the day and make changes where needed for 2012.

OUR VIEW

Is it autumn or fall?

"No spring nor summer beauty hath such grace As I have seen in one autumnal face."
-John Donne

It is often said that people love New England because of the changing of the seasons. However, as any true Yankee knows – sometimes Mother Nature plays tricks on us, leaving out spring and/or a big part of a summer. She almost never forgets winter, though.

If there is a single season that we New Englanders are known for and can be most proud of it's our fall. Fall can always be counted on for a mosaic of color, cooler temperatures – enjoyable holidays like Halloween and Thanksgiving, and for sports fans: football. The fall line of clothing is usually looked forward to toward the end of summer when we kick off our sandals, retire our shorts and summer outfits, and get back into real dressing.

We often wonder if we could make it through one of our winters if it weren't for fall. There is just something about taking a deep breath and enjoying all the season has to offer.

So how does autumn fit in with all of this? Why are there two names for our favorite season? We are sure there are experts out there or those better read that know the answer. However, taking the lazy route of Internet searches — nothing definitive pops out.

Some say autumn is the British word and fall is the American word for the season.

One website said the name fall originates not from the fall of leaves but because it is the time when the sun falls below the equator.

Another website said both fall and autumn, as names for the season, are latecomers: "Fall derives from an Old English verb, but it wasn't used as a noun to designate the season until the 16th century. This use most likely developed from the Middle English expression 'fall of the leaf.'" Old English speakers called the season Harvest.

We would love to hear from our readers who might be able to shed light on autumn vs. fall!

But regardless of its name – we love the season.

"Delicious autumn! My very soul is wedded to it, and if I were a bird I would fly about the earth seeking the successive autumns."
-George Eliot

Changes needed to be made

PAUL CARLSON

The residents who are directly impacted are in fact entitled to a full, unbiased hearing like every other person with business before the commission.

(This statement, which I read aloud at the Sept. 20 Board of Selectmen meeting is my person statement and was not made on behalf of the board. - Paul Carlson).

Under our form of self-government, all government officials, whether paid employees or volunteers are accountable either directly to the voters or to elected officials. As Debbie Cook said in her letter to the Mariner, "it is totally the right and responsibility of the Selectmen to appoint whomever they wish." In the case of the Conservation Commission, the Massachusetts General Laws (Ch 40, section 8c) place the responsibility for appointing conservation commissioners solely in the hands of the Selectmen. We may only remove commissioners for cause after a public hearing.

At the end of their term we have the responsibility either to reappoint them or to appoint somebody else. The law is crystal clear that the board does not have the right to rescind or reconsider our appointments. I have a note from town attorney Paul DeRensis confirming this.

Alternatively, we could ask the members of the board to resign. But they are doing an excellent job of reforming the commission's policies and procedures to make them compliant with the Open Meeting Law and good accounting practices. I heard today, that they may return $30,000 – $40,000 to the town coffers. I see no reason to ask these commissioners to resign.

We cannot have a system of automatic, lifetime reappointments simply because the appointees wish to be reappointed. The voters hold us accountable for our actions every three years; they expect us to hold our appointees accountable.

I attended all of the Conservation Commission hearings on the tidal gate Notice of Intent as did some of the other Selectmen. Outside of the local property owners, there was very little public interest. The Mariner did not cover the hearings. The press was only present when the judgment was reached.

After all these meetings, it became clear to me that we needed to make changes. I saw commissioners who avoided discussion of the concerns of our citizens. The operative word is discussion. Property owners stated their concerns. Property owners raised the likelihood of a substantial degradation in their environment. Property owners offered up substantial compromises. All went unanswered by the commission. The majority of the commission simply would not engage with the property owners. At the end of the hearings, one commissioner offered up a motion to set aside 15 minutes for discussion with the property owners; none of his colleagues would second the motion. The hearing was closed – no discussion, no engagement.

I have not attended many Conservation Commission hearings so I do not know if this is standard procedure. If it is, then no wonder town citizens stepped up for appointment to the ConCom to change this behavior.

If this is not standard procedure, if the commissioners normally do discuss the issues with the property owners and try to work out solutions, why were they so reluctant to engage these property owners? The residents who are directly impacted are in fact entitled to a full, unbiased hearing like every other person with business before the commission.

The petitioners state, and I quote, "A conservation commission must operate in an impartial and judicious manner, free from political influence, if all residents are to be treated fairly and equitably."

I agree that the conservation commission must be impartial and judicious. I wish I had witnessed impartiality and judiciousness. I did not.

I agree that our fellow citizens must be treated fairly and equitably. I wish I had seen our fellow citizens being treated fairly and equitably. I did not.

However, I do not agree that that the conservation commission must not be accountable to elected officials. I do not agree that the commissioners are entitled to automatic re-appointment. The laws of the State of Massachusetts, the MMA Selectman's Handbook and common sense are clear on this issue.

We have many fine committees that carry out important town business fairly and without bias. We are all indebted to our fellow citizens who devote countless hours away from their homes and families. All other committee members were reappointed. The conservation commission matter was unique in my experience and the remedy in my judgment was appropriate to serve the best interests of the town of Cohasset.

Paul Carlson lives at 18 Old Coach Road.

Buttonwood Books hosting launch party

A launch party for award-winning author/illustrator and Scituate resident Dean Morrissey will take place on Sunday, Oct. 2, at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza. The celebration is for Morrissey's new book, "The Wizard Mouse," a story about a field mouse that travels far from home and helps restore a wizard's magic. The tale is whimsical and the illustrations are resplendent with the color and texture that Morrissey fans expect.

The event will begin at 1 p.m. with Morrissey reading his book, followed by a book signing and community reception. Festivities will include an art display featuring selected pieces from Morrissey's studio and an activity for children. Refreshments will be served. This is a free event and all are welcome.

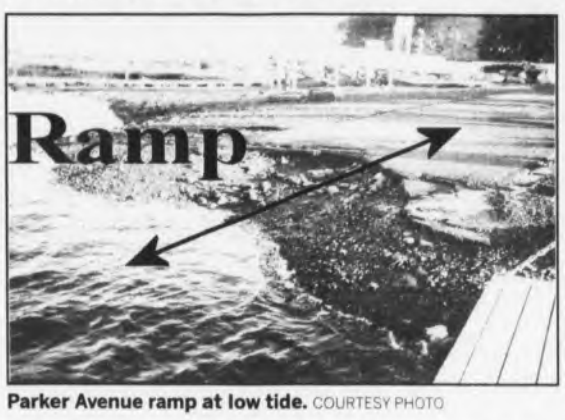
Anyone who is unable to attend who would like to order a signed copy can call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

MAKING TRACKS

Exciting plans afoot for village area

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

What a great day — For those of you who attended Cohasset Day, the weather was nearly perfect and most seemed to have a really good time. This event really showed our beautiful town. It was a great day to be a Cohasset resident. However, we do intend to use this as a lead-in to some additional work we have been doing which will further improve Cohasset. About 6 years ago we underwent a "Revitalization" project that completely reconstructed the streets and sidewalks in the central village area. Street trees and brick accents were added that really enhanced and visually softened the harshness of the newly paved sidewalks and roads.



This past week we applied for a grant from the Commonwealth to continue similar work in adjacent areas of the Village. Since the last revitalization, we have kept in touch with merchant organizations and others who use the Village areas. We have developed a list of additional improvements from the feedback we have received. If these could be implemented it would enhance the area for property owners, the businesses who serve us and for us the customers who need these goods and services.

So what might we do and where would we do it? The most common comment is that there is inadequate parking in the village. We have plans to add 47 new spaces on Town-owned property behind the Teen Center. Next, we will add a pedestrian walkway along the side of the Town Parking Lot behind the South Main Street stores. There are two new buildings at either end of the walkway, but lots of development opportunities between them, for new construction or renovation. The walk way will be landscaped and softened with plantings and different hardscape. The parking lot itself will receive new lighting, to improve safety as well as plantings to soften its visual impacts.

The intersection at the South Shore Art Center will be made safer and Ripley Road will be reconfigured to increase parking and slow speeding traffic on Ripley Road. There will be upgraded and uniform sidewalks at the Ripley Road businesses and steps will be taken to connect this business area tighter with the balance of the commercial area. Since Ripley Road is a main corridor into and from the Village it will be improved with a new roadway as well as new curbing and sidewalks up to the library. If anyone has any questions stop by our office in Town Hall and take a look at the conceptual drawings. We'd love to hear your comments.

Switching gears — Cohasset business is way more than the Village area. In fact, we officially recognized this with the Planning Board's designation of the "Harbor Business District" as a unique zoning district. One of the most traditional and oldest businesses in town is lobster fishing. In fact, did you know that Cohasset has the 13th largest lobster catch in the Commonwealth of nearly 340,000 pounds?

Last week we had a visit from Louis Elisa, Executive Secretary and Director of Development for the Seaport Advisory Council. This branch of the State government is concerned with the development of the commercial maritime resources of the Commonwealth. So, Cohasset's lobstering and our harbor is a perfect fit with their mission.

Secretary Elisa toured the harbor area with Selectman Ted Carr, who arranged the meeting, Town Manager Mike Coughlin, Lorri Gibbons, Harbormaster, and Mark Brennan of our office. The goal was familiarize the Secretary with Cohasset, our Harbor and some of its pressing capital needs. Lorri has been tracking the areas where improvements are necessary to assist in the support of our commercial harbor.

For example, Fisherman's Dock, which is adjacent to the Old Salt House pier, is in need of serious repair. The fishermen use this area daily to go to and from their boats and to clean their equipment. The attached photo shows the loose stones in the seawall at this dock. Left to its own devices, we could see serious trouble here in future years.

Another area that serves both the commercial fishermen and the pleasure boaters is the Parker Avenue Ramp. This ramp has deteriorated so much that at low tide there is no ramp. Only the gravel bottom of the beach as can be seen in the photo. This really slows down our ability to get boats into and out of the harbor, especially at the times of impending storms. Plus, wouldn't it be nice to have a double ramp? It looks to be a real possibility if the ramp is rebuilt since there appears to be enough Town owned land.

So, the upshot is that the Town presented some of its harbor-related project needs to the Secretary via two proposals. This was a very important step in order to obtain future grant funding from the seaport Advisory Council.

COMMENTARY

Hurricanes, Facebook and 'The Big Lebowski'

DIANE K. DANIELSON

However the real social media story was our own Cohasset Police. When their phone lines went down, they took to Facebook to communicate updates and get information from residents.

It was an eerie feeling during Hurricane Irene as I watched friends and family disappear from my Facebook and Twitter feeds. First it was the Mid-Atlantic crew, then NYC and finally, New England. Living here in Cohasset, my own power went out around 11 a.m. that Sunday. I posted my final status update, an homage to "The Big Lebowski," about 30 seconds before the power went.

"In a crazy week of earthquakes and hurricanes, as the tree branches come down around me and the lights are starting to flicker, it's somewhat comforting to know that 'The Dude abides.'"

For those who haven't seen the 1998 cult film, suffice it to say, Jeff Bridges' main character, The Dude, would probably not let a little thing like a hurricane interrupt his daily routine of bowling and White Russians.

While there was a lot of talk of the media over-hyping Irene, it's hard to question that social media played a role in minimizing harm and damage. While Irene was huge, it was slow moving. This gave time for authorities to make tough decisions, and people to hear about them and take proper precautions. It also allowed people experienced with hurricanes to share knowledge.

For me, I learned through social media to keep my son's inhaler near him at all times because as a hurricane gets closer, asthma sufferers can have difficulty breathing. In addition, once the power goes out, you don't want to be running around in the dark trying to find a tiny inhaler. Fortunately we heeded this advice, and when we needed it, we had it ready to go.

Other useful tips included the wind tracker from Boston.com – this let us know when the worst winds were going to hit. Also that the worst winds were going to be less than 60 mph.

Twitter even provided some social media humor. The @IreneOnTheTown feed (http://twitter.com/IreneOnTheTown) was hilarious as it checked in locations on FourSquare and took New York by storm both literally and figuratively.

However the real social media story was our own Cohasset Police. When their phone lines went down, they took to Facebook to communicate updates and get information from residents. If you haven't already, look for the Cohasset Police Department page on Facebook and give it a "like." As we found out in Irene, landlines can go down, but smartphones (including access to Facebook) managed to stay connected.

I admit I was a bit overprecautious thanks to the social media chatter. I had visions of John Cusack in the movie 2012, especially after the earthquake earlier in the week. This is why I moved my car to a location without trees, froze water, printed out important client materials, decided I didn't have to fill my tub with water, but still made sure everything was charged and ready for a prolonged power outage or escape to a shelter.

Yet, just when things started heating up, that's when I thought about "The Big Lebowski," because as The Stranger (played by Sam Elliott) says: "The Dude abides. I don't know about you but I take comfort in that. It's good knowin' he's out there. Takin' er easy ..." And as the tree branches showered down around us, I let go of any attempts to remain connected and spent the afternoon reading, napping and playing board games with my son.

There was something appealing about blocking out the rest of the world for just a little while. I appreciated all the helpful information I got from social media and the ability to check in with friends and family, but it was also OK to just shut it all off for a little while and abide.

FOR THE RECORD

The focus is on YOUR photos

GREGORY MATHIS

We're about to take Your News and Your Photos to the next level, hopefully improving the manner in which you get your photos to us.

A little more than a year has passed since we started asking for your photographs and the response has been terrific.

You've shared photos of your cute pets, your children going back to school, your cool summer vacations, and seasonal spring, fall and winter snapshots. Your photos have made it into photo galleries that have appeared on your Wicked Local website and some have made it into print in your local community newspaper.

In March, when we launched a redesign of the newspaper, we included a page called Your News. As the name implies, Your News has become a landing spot for your photos and other content submitted by our readers.

We're about to take Your News and Your Photos to the next level, hopefully improving the manner in which you get your photos to us.

We've recently added a new and useful tool to our Wicked Local websites that is intended to streamline the submission process and allow our online readers to submit photos with a few easy clicks.

Here's how it works.

You can upload your photos by going through the Your Photos link in the main navigation bar on the website homepage or clicking on a specific subject located under the Your Photos section of the website under Photo Galleries.

You will need to go through a brief registration process, similar to the registration to make comments on stories. It's quick and easy and will allow us to make sure no one is abusing the system. We don't want anything inappropriate appearing on the websites.

Once you've registered, you have access to the photo upload function. Click the green "Upload" button and follow the five steps, clearly spelled out in the instructions along the right hand side of the page.

Step 4 is particularly important from our standpoint. The caption for the photographs should have all the important details. For instance, if there are people in the photo, you should include all the names – first and last name. Identifying people from left to right is always a good rule of thumb, but not essential. The caption should also capture what is happening in the photo if it isn't too obvious and you should let us know what town you're from. Remember, when you submit the photo to us, you're giving us permission to publish it on our website and in the newspaper. The more details you can give in the caption the better.

If you go to our website, you'll see opportunities to submit photos for a couple of current Your News subjects, including pets, local sports, holidays, outdoors and schools.

The success of Your News – online and in print – depends on you. As we get this next phase of the program up and running, let us know what you're taking pictures of or what might make a good theme for the next reader callout. We welcome your suggestions and your submissions.

As I said about a year ago in a column on this very subject, please hit us with your best shots!

South Shore Democrats Unity Party

South Shore Democrats and Independents are welcome to mix and mingle with like-minded locals and meet Democratic office holders, Senate primary and other candidates at the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's fourth annual Unity Party. Helene Lieb has agreed to host the Unity Party at her home at 18 Deep Run, Cohasset, from 7 to 9 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 1. There will be drinks and hors d'oeuvres, a silent auction, live music, conversation and some speeches.

Attendees will hear words of wisdom and inspiration from John Walsh, chairman of the Massachusetts Democratic Party, as well as some other elected officials. Congressman Garrett Bradley will be in attendance as well as Senate primary candidates and local candidates.

Suggested contributions are at several levels: $35, $75, $100 and $150. Checks payable to Cohasset Democratic Town Committee can be mailed to Peter Pescatore, Treasurer, 12 Lantern Lane, Cohasset, MA 02025. Tickets will also be sold at the door.

Call Kevin McCarthy, chairman of the CDTC, at 781-534-0509 for more information.

BRIEFLY

Gulf Association to meet Oct. 12

The annual meeting of the Gulf Association will take place at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 12, at the Lightkeeper's House.

Topic will be Ospreys and Water Birds of the South Shore, an illustrated talk by John Galluzzo of Massachusetts Audubon Society. Refreshments will be available.

Registry of Deeds offers computer seminar

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer assisted land records research at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Dedham from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 20. The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the general public. The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises. There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org. There is no charge for the seminar, but anyone planning to attend is asked to register by calling Alicia Gardner at 781-461-6104 or by email to agardner@norfolkdeeds.org. Include your name, address, email and a daytime phone number when you register.

Coming into compliance

ConCom adopts new rules and regulations

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following the controversial events of summer, during which three Conservation Commissioners were unseated and replaced with three new members by the Board of Selectmen, the Commission has had to come together and work through a difficult circumstance. Following July's membership shakeup, the ConCom has formed two subcommittees to bring the group into compliance with state laws and regulations: one to establish committee bylaws, consisting of new member James Gilman, Jack Creighton and Edward Graham, and one to review finances, comprising new associate member Michael Milanoski and new member Jim Marten, with veteran member Veneta Roeback acting as secretary.

Following the August 4 meeting during which the subcommittees were established, both groups have started to sift through records from the past five years, "highlighting issues to fix the governance going forward, focusing on open meeting law and municipal finance law," said Milanoski.

Cat Dam

One major issue plaguing the ConCom is Cat Dam, and it simply isn't going away anytime soon. The members reviewing the commission's minutes from the past year were hard-pressed to find anything written about Cat Dam, except for an executive session on Nov. 4, 2010, during which the tape recorder was shut off. During their Aug. 22, 2011 meeting, the commission drafted minutes based on Chairman David Farrag's recollection.

The purpose for the executive session, according to Farrag, was to discuss the potential legal action the ConCom could take against the Board of Selectmen if the board failed to resubmit the Cat Dam Notice of Intent (NOI). According to the newly drafted minutes, Town Attorney John R. Hucksam was present at the meeting.

In order to be compliant with open meeting law, the commission had to acknowledge that this executive session took place, and then vote on these minutes.

The finance subcommittee also uncovered the commission paying a court stenographer $4,632 to transcribe only the Cat Dam discussions; and they did so eight different times.

"The good news is, we found an actual record of the Cat Dam meetings," said Milanoski. "The bad news — it wasn't in the minutes."

The commission is still behind on minutes from the past year; Milanoski said that they will probably need to vote on the 2010 minutes all at once, possibly during the next meeting. From now on, all minutes must be reviewed and approved at every meeting, Milanoski explained: "It will be an agenda item going forward."

Finance

The finance subcommittee found that the commission has gone over their $30,000 general fund budget on certain expenditures, including how much they paid their stormwater agent, Norfolk Ram. The commission paid the firm $17,765, even though they "never had an appropriation from Town Meeting that we can find to compensate for that," said Milanoski. During the September 15 meeting, the commission voted to cease using Norfolk Ram for stormwater support services.

"If you don't have the funding available, you can't assign consultants to do work for you," Milanoski said.

The commission discussed finding a better way to offer stormwater application services to residents. One possible solution is to have the conservation agent act as the stormwater agent, "so residents can go to one agent who can coordinate wetlands and stormwater as one applicant," said Milanoski. If additional assistance is required, the agent could bring in an engineer, like someone from Norfolk Ram. "The agent becomes the quarterback for all environmental permitting."

This agent would be the ConCom's administrator, Paul Shea, who has over 30 years' experience in the environmental field.

The commission "is not trying to reduce standards on the stormwater process, but streamline it to be more effective," Milanoski explained.

Improving the ConCom's finances is another way Milanoski hopes the group can streamline its processes. The new finance software being implemented in town should help; "it won't allow departments to spend over budget without some override issue," he said.

The software should catch any mistakes, like the paperwork the finance subcommittee found indicating that $27,100 would be spent on court reporting services this year. Quipped Milanoski, "That's a lot of money to spend."

Now, the commission will have to set up warrants, highlighting what the expenditures are, who they are going to, when the expenses took place and what was the total spent. The Town Manager will also have to approve all wetlands funds.

"At the end of the day, we're trying to have financial transparency, and we have to live within the budget that has been approved for us by Town Meeting," Milanoski said.

Bylaws

The commission is currently reviewing a draft of committee bylaws stating the ConCom's purpose and duties. It also discusses the appointment of commissioners and term lengths for each one: three years for the seven voting members, and one year for associate, non-voting members. These appointments are to be made by the Board of Selectmen, although the commission may appoint the associates.

This item may be met with some resistance, since the ConCom has never limited membership terms before. Following this summer's shakeup of personnel, it's just one of many changes the commission has had to endure.

"Any business entity, government body, or board of directors has to have rules and regulations to operate," said Milanoski. He hoped those proposed would help the commission "be a well-run organization."

ConCom Financial Rules and Regulations

Adopted by Cohasset Conservation Commission on 9/15/11

- ConCom shall adopt annual budget for department consistent with Town Meeting approval.
- A summary sheet of all applications (wetlands and stormwater) shall be prepared by ConCom Secretary for acceptance by ConCom at every meeting with rolling update.
- Every NOI or stormwater application that requires review fees will be assigned a new PO number based on unique filing number and will be accepted by ConCom to set budget for each project via a summary list at each meeting. Any cost increase shall require ConCom notification and to expand PO and project budget.
- Chairman shall sign every purchase order request as department head provided unencumbered funds are available in budget.
- Town Manager pre-approval is required for all Wetland Protecting Funds expenditures per Massachusetts General Law 131 section 40.
- ConCom Secretary will fill out warrant and email 48 hours prior to each meeting for ConCom review and approval of proceeding weeks' expenditures. Detailed back-up will be available at each meeting.
- All authorization of expenditures from wetlands and stormwater shall be voted on by full ConCom and require an approved purchase order prior to authorization of work.
- Chairman can authorize emergency expenditures if matter cannot wait till next meeting, but only within approved budget or with approval of Town Manager. Chairman shall immediately notify Commission of his/her action.

PETITIONERS

still waiting to go into their executive session to discuss a pending litigation.

Two months might have given both the board and the ...oners enough time to ...ther their thoughts, but it did not appear to lessen the sting of the selectmen's controversial decision.

Selectmen's defense

The selectmen each offered their comments on the matter of the ConCom membership shakeup.

Paul Carlson and Fred Koed both chose to read back statements they had previously made on the issue. Carlson read aloud from his letter to the Cohasset Mariner, while Koed read comments he made during the July 12 meeting when the controversial vote took place.

Carlson said that the board could not undo its decision.

"At the end of their term we have the responsibility either to reappoint them or to appoint somebody else. The law is crystal clear that the board does not have the right to rescind or reconsider our appointments. I have a note from town attorney Paul DeRensis confirming this," he read.

"We cannot have a system of automatic, lifetime reappointments simply because the appointees wish to be reappointed. The voters hold us accountable for our actions every three years; they expect us to hold our appointees accountable."

Carlson stood by his decision, saying that he had attended all of the ConCom hearings on Cat Dam and felt that members of the commission were "ignoring" the property owners with a vested interest in the flushing of the tidal gates. This is why, Carlson believes, so many citizens came forward at once to ask to be appointed to the ConCom (the Mariner previously reported that on Monday, July 11, seven letters expressing interest in being appointed to the ConCom were delivered to the selectmen's office; six of the letters were hand-delivered in a single package. ConCom chairman David Farrag called the sudden interest in the ConCom "unusual" at the time). Carlson stated that these citizens "stepped up for appointment to the ConCom to change this behavior."

Koed's statements were in tune with Carlson's.

"Having attended several ConCom meetings, I felt it was an adversarial proceeding," he read.

Koed went on to explain that, back when the board began discussing altering the flushing schedule at Cat Dam, "not a single member of the ConCom came to the Board of Selectmen who appoints them and said, 'Guess what, under our interpretation, that is going to require an NOI [Notice of Intent].' And I think they owed us that duty... that to me is a duty of loyalty.

"I will be the first to admit that I am not an expert of the ConCom procedures," Koed continued. "I would rely on them for their expertise."

Koed called the ConCom's waiting to inform the board of the NOI a "gotcha moment."

However, Koed also said his decision was "nothing personal" and that he appreciates the commission's hard work and "reluctantly brought this motion forward."

In no uncertain terms

The petitioners did not hold back during their dressing down of the board of selectmen. A list of terms frequently used to describe the board's actions during Tuesday's heated meeting:

"Acrimony"
"Appalling"
"Crippled"
"Disrespected"
"Inappropriate"
"Interfered"
"Mistrust"
"Outraged"
"Politically-motivated"
"Shameful"
"Slap in the face"
"Suspicious"
"Trouble"
"Turned people off"

Leland Jenkins told the crowd, in brief, "My decision had nothing to do with Cat Dam; it strictly had to do with the way the ConCom operated... I didn't like the attitude of the commission."

Jenkins added that he attended the commission meetings on Cat Dam but saw few of the petitioners there.

Diane Kennedy told the group, "I was in the minority on this vote. I stand by my vote; I always vote my conscience." She added that although "I respect my four colleagues, I don't always agree with them." She went on to thank the three recently unseated commissioners for their work "in the trenches."

Kennedy said she hopes this event would help the board move forward "in the governance direction."

Ted Carr, who voted alongside Kennedy on July 12, said he felt strongly that he should publicly apologize to the three ousted ConCom members. Carr felt the board's decision "did not honor them for their service; they made a long commitment."

"I know people are upset," Carr continued, "but I would love to use that energy in a positive way." He added that he understood why people would "lash out," and should "rightly do so."

Carr went on to say that he "would like to get a group together to look at boards and committees and how we appoint people. It's one of our duties to appoint boards, and I think we should do everything we can to recruit people to join boards. The town revolves around volunteerism. I hope you will work with us in the future."

Petitioners' outrage

The selectmen's various defenses of their decisions did not seem to satisfy the petitioners, who were quick to point out just where they felt the board had gone awry. Each petitioner's statement was met with applause.

Adrienne MacCarthy of 85 Doane Street was the first to approach the board, telling them while she normally watches the selectmen meetings at home, "I nearly came here in my pajamas on the 12th."

MacCarthy said that she and the other petitioners were there to express their outrage over what happened to the three commissioners, calling the selectmen's decision "appalling" and saying that the commissioners were "blindsided."

"From my perspective, it looked planned," MacCarthy said.

Merle Brown of 546 Beechwood Street, himself a former selectmen and conservation commissioner, told the board that they should have discussed their concerns over the ConCom's operations with chairman David Farrag before unseating the three members.

"That's what happened when I was chair," Brown said. He further chastised the board for not sending their liaison to the commission to all of the group's meetings: "You need to take the time to visit the other boards."

Brown also pointed out that not one of the newly appointed commissioners offered to join the ConCom in an associate position, although there were two open at the time. Since the ConCom "is a complicated commission," members are usually brought on as non-voting associates first.

Carr agreed that "associate positions on boards are a great place to start," and that the ConCom is indeed "complicated," requiring the members to take a course and undergo specific training.

Chartis Tebbetts, 9 Jerusalem Road, agreed with Brown that the board should have approached the ConComm to discuss procedures before ousting members without warning. She claimed the board was "taking out [their] frustrations" on the commission. Tebbetts called this "a slap in the face" to the commissioners.

Former selectman Karen Quigley took the stand next, though she "swore I was not going to speak this evening, and I'm not prepared."

"That's when you're at your best," Carr told her.

Quigley offered up her experience as a selectmen, explaining that she was the board's liaison to the conservation commission and attended nearly every meeting.

"That qualifies me to be a better judge than the three individuals who didn't attend ConCom meetings," other than those pertaining to Cat Dam, "who have vested personal interest" regarding that matter.

Quigley said that the board "behaved in a manner that was not in the best interest of this town," even claiming that the board seemed to bully the commissioners into voting a certain way regarding Cat Dam.

The board made "outright threats to the ConCom," Quigley said, such as, "'You don't understand your role here. You have to vote this way or you're going to cost the town a lot of money.'"

Quigley admonished the board to "go do your job and be the liaisons you're assigned to be."

Two petitioners, Susan Kent and Tom Callahan, took the board to task for "interfering with a commission in the middle of a hearing."

The biggest applause of the night went to veteran conservation commissioner Veneta Roebuck, who said she was "devastated" by the board's "behavior that night." By unseating the three commissioners, "You cut out the bottom of our commission," she said. "There's an intelligence, training and history there. Now, it will take us another 20 years to train [new members]... I want you to understand what you did. It was not a good move at all."

Board agrees to investigation

Russ Bonetti asked the board if they would agree to turn the matter over to the Attorney General's office.

Carr responded that he had no problem with that; Carlson agreed he was willing to "clear the air."

Troika debate

A debate was sparked when Ronnie McMorris of 89 Doane Street, who started the citizens' petition, asked the board to agree to the second part of the petition: set up a committee appointed by troika (a group made up of the Board of Selectmen chair, the Advisory Board chair and a moderator) to investigate the board's involvement in Cat Dam to determine if there was a conflict of interest in the ConCom reappointments.

Carr asked the crowd how they felt about that. Before any more petitioners could respond, Carlson questioned whether troika was appropriate, since it would require Carr to appoint someone to investigate himself, basically.

Carlson also pointed out that Peter Pescatore, chair of the Advisory Committee, could not serve on the troika either since he has "expressed his opinion on a blog" about these issues. He added that Dan Evans was the "one obvious choice" to serve as moderator, since he "is a neutral person."

Carlson's comments only drew further outcry from the crowd.

"It's a small town... we can't afford to be that picky," said Agnes McCann, 104 Doane Street, explaining that everyone has expressed their opinion on this matter at some point. "People are going to blog!"

"We have a system in place," said Kent. "We have to trust the system is going to work. You can't change it at the first opportunity to investigate... the fact that someone has an opinion doesn't mean they can't do their job."

The board asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis for his suggestion regarding troika.

"I'd like to take that under advisement," he said.

Since it was pushing 10 p.m. and the board still had an executive session planned, Carr told the group that he would like to continue this discussion another time, when the matter could be discussed first thing during a board meeting and taken care of earlier in the day.

"I'm not postponing any decision; it's the prudent thing to do tonight."

Carr closed by telling the group he would be at the new Irish pub [Mr. Dooley's] after the meeting and would be happy to talk with folks there.

HEALTH NOTES

Legislation and health

STEVE BOBO

The relationship between the health of a citizen and his government.

These measures represent the most far-reaching expansion of the nation's health-care system since Medicare was created in 1965.

New medical research on keeping the general population healthy has become a flood of information. By 2008, the material on clinical procedures and medical practice for memory disorders in such ailments as Alzheimer's had become a barely manageable flood. Sue Halpern's book on memory research, "I Can't Remember What I Forgot" chronicles work on memory disorders. Spending years on studying, assessing and reporting the welter of new ideas, drugs, foods a and therapies that may be used to stave off Alzheimer's and other forms of dementia, she leaves us with more information – too voluminous and complicated to comprehend. – and this in less than 250 pages. Since that time, more information has come forth and is continuing to be assimilated. It's no wonder that the media is carrying such doom-ridden invective about costs going out of control.

Modern technology has given us literally billions more pieces of information in today's gadgets: Cell phones, tablets and such, than it was possible to process in the days of single land lines of only a few decades ago. The costs and difficulty of providing the materials, education of practitioners and production of equipment to accommodate these improvements is bound to carry with it a burden of mistakes, false alarms and dead ends – all faithfully reported in today's newspapers and other media outlets.

Nevertheless, passage of health-insurance reform is of paramount importance. A compromise bill now being considered in Congress would extend coverage to an additional 32 million Americans over the next decade by expanding Medicaid eligibility and creating state-run insurance exchanges and federal subsidies for lower-income families who lack access to employer-provided coverage.

All Americans would be required for the first time to obtain insurance or face an annual penalty; Employers could face penalties of $2,000 per worker for not offering affordable coverage. In exchange for the new business, private insurers would be subject to an array of rules, including a ban on the practice of denying coverage to people with preexisting medical conditions and a requirement that adult children be permitted to stay on their parents' policies until age 26.

The compromise bill would offer more generous tax credits to people who may otherwise be unable to afford insurance and would fully close the "doughnut hole" – a gap in the Medicare prescription drug program that is costly for many seniors – beginning with a $250 rebate for those affected this year.

It would delay until 2018 the implementation of a 40 percent tax on high-cost insurance policies. To cover the cost of those changes, the compromise would impose a 3.8 percent Medicare tax on investment income for the wealthy in addition to an increase in the regular payroll tax for those families. And it would slice an additional $60 billion from Medicare, with the privately run program known as Medicare Advantage targeted for particularly deep cuts, bringing the total reduction in projected spending on the program to more than $500 billion over the next decade.

These measures represent the most far-reaching expansion of the nation's health-care system since Medicare was created in 1965. Major elements of the coverage expansion would not be implemented until 2014; consumers would quickly see a variety of benefits, including a ban on insurance industry practices such as dropping people from coverage when they get sick or limiting lifetime benefits. Private insurers would also be required to fully cover preventive care without deductibles or co-payments.

It's going to take time – and patience – to implement such massive changes. Nevertheless, we in Cohasset can be assured that we will eventually benefit by greater interest in our town and its management; particularly its attention to dissemination of useful health practices such as vaccinations, etc. now going on.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

"Convenience" Foods Are Harming You

By Brian Cook

Have you ever stopped to flip over a packaged food item, look at the label, and then - realizing you don't know what the ingredients mean anyway - proceed to eat it?

STOP THE MADNESS!

Nutrition is a major factor in overall health, and we need to make it a priority. As busy Americans we have been trained that effective multi-tasking and "to-do list" completion are ultimate markers of success. Healthy eating should not be a task that gets bumped to the bottom of the list.

Clean, healthy foods-in other words, the ones not found in convenient, ready-to-go packages, provide so much more nourishment for the body. Would it take training and practice to eat this way? Definitely. Would there be a learning curve with small behavior changes over time? Absolutely. Would there be missteps and challenges to learn from? Of course.

Therefore, the only reasonable path out of the packaged-food pandemonium that is jamming your digestive tract and adding unnecessary sugars and cholesterol to your bloodstream is to get educated in the company of like-minded people.

Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff trains you how to choose healthy, clean foods that support a strong, youthful body. Our program is rounded out with cardiovascular training, strength training and accountability to help you meet your goal. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com

Client Barbara Walsh believes Get In Shape for Women has transformed her entire life. "I am a busy, married, mother of two, working as an ER physician in a large inner city trauma center with a crazy schedule. Over time my eating habits became horrible because of convenience. I joined GISFW to lose weight and become healthier. It was the most amazing investment that I have made in myself. I have learned an entire new way of thinking about eating. I have found that it has helped me feel better, have more energy, and focus on my health on many important levels. The best thing about GISFW: it is an absolute BLAST! This is the single best commitment I have made for my mental and physical health. I have been a member for over 3 years and will continue to be for many more to come!"

WILLCUTT CORNER

Momentum fueled for Senior Center

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

The endorsement from the Selectmen is the most recent milestone in the goal to realize a new senior center.

A unanimous endorsement by the Board of Selectmen recently, has fueled momentum for Willcutt Commons, the proposed Senior Center slated for Sohier Street.

In a letter to the editor published in the Sept. 16 edition of the Cohasset Mariner, the Board stated: "The Cohasset Board of Selectmen has unanimously endorsed the proposed public/private partnership plan to build a much-needed Senior Center. This proposal represents an innovative, exiting approach to funding an important municipal facility with the potential to honor and serve our large and growing senior population." Additionally, in a separate article in the same issue of the Mariner, Mike Coughlin, Cohasset's new Town Manager, is quoted as including the success of this public/private partnership as one of his 11 goals for the end of the year.

Cohasset's current Senior Center, while serving a growing population, is leased in the short term from a small corner of the Community Center on North Main Street. It includes overcrowded office space plus a shared community room and kitchen. Due to these space constraints, Cohasset Elder Affairs labors to maintain state-of-the-art programs designed to assist the town's senior population to remain active, engaged and to "age in place."

Via this public/private proposal for Willcutt Commons, along with grants and private donations, funding for the construction of the center would be provided by an endowment managed by the Social Service League. The town would then lease the facility on a long term basis.

In its letter to the editor, the Board of Selectmen announced the formation of a Senior Center Planning Group whose focus will be to ensure the to-be-built facility balances the needs of Cohasset's seniors with those of the entire town. This group will include members of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, Elder Affairs, the Social Service League, Friends of Elder Affairs and private citizens. Marita Carpenter, President of the Social Service League, applauded the Selectmen's endorsement, saying, "The League is pleased that the Board of Selectmen supports Willcutt Commons and understands the importance of serving the Town's senior population. We are looking forward to working with so many passionate Cohasset residents who have generously offered their time and talent to the new Senior Center Planning Group."

The endorsement from the Selectmen is the most recent milestone in the goal to realize a new senior center. In August, the Social Service League hired KVAssociates as the project manager to facilitate the construction of the building. KVA is a full service construction firm experienced in similar municipal projects, including a proposed Senior Center in Wellesley. As the project moves forward, the Social Service League continues to welcome the opportunity to answer any questions you may have. They can be reached at 781-383-0771.

Liza Carens Salerno is a freelance writer and a volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

Cohasset Food Pantry drive

Through the month of October, Cohasset Family Chiropractic will offer a new patient evaluation, a value of $115, in exchange for $35 of groceries to benefit Cohasset Food Pantry. Current or former patients will receive a $10 discount in exchange for four grocery items.

SPORTS NOTES

YOUTH LACROSSE

Fall Lacrosse Programs

Cohasset Club Lacrosse is once again running their Fall Liv2Lax Skills programs for area boys and girls grades 1- 8 starting this weekend and running through late October.

Laxers of all skill levels will get a chance to get the rust off, polish their skills for next Spring, get introduced to the game, or just have some fun playing a little "Fall Ball" before the leaves fall and the snow starts to fly.

Online registration, schedules, and program information by grade/group is available at our website at www.cohassetclublax.com or by calling 781/383-6074. Pre-registration for our Winter after-school sessions is also available. See you out on the fields

FOOTBALL

It's all about execution

Skipper mistakes costly in Border War loss to Hingham

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

Cohasset football coach Peter Afanasiw might feel like a history teacher at this time of the season.

The Skippers will conclude their first segment of Border Wars on their schedule with a game against Scituate of the Patriot League on Friday night.

Saturday, Cohasset came up on the short end of a 14-10 decision in a border battle at Hingham.

"It was our first loss to a Patriot League team in a couple of years," said Afanasiw about the loss to Hingham. "We have another border war with Scituate and that one is a little more special. The kids play SciCo (Scituate/Cohasset youth) Football together. We also have another with Hull on Thanksgiving."

Scituate will be coming off its first win, a come from behind effort against Plymouth South. They scored 13 points in the fourth quarter for a 22-19 win over the Panthers.

The biggest thing that the Skippers will attempt to turn things around in their attempt to get back into the win column is clean up their execution. Cohasset had chances to put the Harbormen, who they had defeated the last two years, away and didn't.

YOUTH FIELD HOCKEY

A fun start

Field Hockey Club enjoys a new season

The Navigators team of the Cohasset Field Hockey Club played the Easton seventh grade team and tied 1-1.

It was a great game and the team played very well. Everyone player played every position (defense, mid, and forward) and all of the girls played the positions whole-heartedly. The defense and offense were both equally strong and competitive. In the last three minutes of the game, the entire team used all of their energy to score another goal for the win, but fell short by clock.

In eighth grade action, the Skippers also played a great game and won 2 - 0 against the Easton eighth grade team. The team worked together during every aspect of the game. The defense, mids, and forwards all collaborated into a well played game today. The ref actually commented on their surprisingly advanced skills; referring to their level as Junior Varsity. This win is a great way to start the season, and the Skippers are looking forward to winning more games. Go Blue.

The Club has four teams, more than 80 players and more than 41 games on the schedule.

They will host a Jamboree, Oct. 23 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The jamboree will be played on several fields in Cohasset.

CROSS COUNTRY

Across the board improvement

Runners continue to get better each week

The Cohasset/Hull High girls and boys cross country teams made the long trek (two hours on a bus) to Harwich Tuesday for their second meet of the 2011 campaign.

On the girls side, the Lady Skippers/Lady Pirates easily outran their Lady Rough Rider opponents to come away with a 20-37 victory. Leading the way for Cohasset/Hull was senior captain Christina Secatore, who was second across the line in a time of 22:54 over the 2.89 mile Harwich course.

Christina was followed by a parade of four teammates who took places three through six: Olivia Franklin in 24:52, capt. Corin Postell in

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week Two: A shakeup on both sides

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The second week of high school soccer produced some significant changes Inside the 6. On the girls' side, Marshfield falls from its first-place perch, two teams drop off the charts, and one makes an impressive debut. For the boys, Hingham and Weymouth go one-two for the second week in a row. A couple of moves and a reentry also highlight the boys' rankings. These rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 18.

Boys

1. Hingham – The Harbormen did what they were supposed to do – take care of the winnable games. They beat a pair of winless teams, but did so handily, topping Whitman-Hanson, 5-0, and North Quincy, 7-0, to remain unbeaten.

the Harbormen 15 and could only manage a field goal by Shane Haggerty in the two possessions.

The Haggerty field goal gave Cohasset a 10-7 halftime lead.

"We didn't execute," said Afanasiw. "They brought a lot of pressure at us every single down. It was a matter of the offense being a block or two away on certain plays. It wasn't for a lack of effort there was just too many bodies at the point of attack. You have to give the Hingham coaches and kids a lot of credit."

The other Cohasset possession on a turnover inside the Hingham 15 ended up disastrously for the Skippers.

Hingham's Tim Schlosky picked off a pass to stop a Cohasset scoring threat.

"It is high school football," said Afanasiw about the interception. "You want to have the big plays and it makes the game interesting, but it is all about execution. We could not make the play we needed to make. It was hard fought battle. I am very proud of my team. If you said that Hingham and Cohasset played 15 years ago in football, you would have said that you are kidding. It tells you how far our program has come."

Cohasset football coach Peter Afanasiw

Cohasset's only touchdown in the game was in the first half and was a 70-yard run by Kyle Livingstone.

The Skippers, 7-0 lead was short lived as Hingham's Kevin McCarthy answered on the ensuing kickoff with an 89-yard touchdown return for the tying score.

Hingham began the second half with a 15 play, 77 yard scoring drive that Reed McLeod finished with a 1-yard run.

The Harbormen had another scoring threat, but Cohasset stopped it with a fumble recovery at their own 10.

The Skippers could not mount a drive into Hingham territory in the second half.

5. NORWELL (1-0; NR)

5 To Watch

Elizabeth Constantino (Notre Dame) Not bad for an opening week. The freshman didn't do too much. After winning the JV race (20:56) by over 30 seconds at the Martha's Vineyard Invitational, she clinched a tight dual meet victory over Marblehead (21:03) by being the Cougars' top finisher, with star senior harrier Kelsey Whitaker out. The future looks scorching for this young star.

Tess Walter (Scituate) The junior's time of 20:31 on her home course of 2.8 miles helped propel the Sailors to a narrow 26-29 win over the Dragons of Duxbury. This is impressive on two counts- it is a personal best on the course, despite being run in the first week of the season and in 85 degree temperatures. There is rightful excitement for Walter. Just think what she's capable of when the temperature drops and the training picks up!

Nate Stephansky (Whitman-Hanson) The state is very familiar with the Panthers #1 runner Pat Ryan, but the junior Stephansky comes in a bit more under the radar. All he has done so far? Finished on Ryan's heels in dual meet dominations against Middleboro (17:32 for 5000 meters) and North Quincy (14:22 for 4000 meters). Coach Matt Vercollone has to be excited about what he has seen to this point.

Ryan Mathieson (Braintree) I don't care who Brookline ran against him, if you can tame the brutal hills of the Larz Anderson course, all 2.76 miles of it, and come away with a win, you've done something special. Although the Wamps did not see the entire Warrior squad, their 22-38 margin of defeat shows a great deal of growth from Kera Vanderspeck's up and coming team against what many believe will be the repeat Division I All State champs.

Kurt Joyce (Weymouth) The senior in his first career XC meet against archrival Newton North nearly did the impossible, holding off North's Dave Demarest until the final 50 meters in what would have been a crucial place in the Tigers' 25-30 win over Weymouth. Joyce's time of 15:49 was good enough for 7th place on the 2.8 mile Wompatuck State Park course, and his future looks very secure in the Wildcats' top 5.

25:21, Ellie Tedeschi in 26:13, and Stephanie Brierly in 26:15. Lady Skipper/Lady Pirate Emily Robbins displaced an opponent with a strong ninth place effort in 29:58.

"The girls ran a great race," said CHS/HHS head coach Ted Coyle. "Their times are improving and I was very pleased with their effort."

Although the boys were not as successful as the girls, the Skippers/Pirates nonetheless displayed faster times than in their outing the week before. Sophomore captain Harry Hellboch was the top CHS/HHS runner in a time of 21:32, good for ninth place overall. He was followed by teammates Matthew Menice (26:22), Tom Saide (29:16), Chris Daniels (29:31), and Jack Quigley (35:18) to complete the Skipper/Pirate scoring, with Kristophe Suprenant (37:23) the sixth CHS/HHS runner to complete the race.

"The boys also are getting faster and lowering their times," said Coyle of his young boys' squad, of whom two are sophomores and four are freshmen. "They continue to work hard and are progressing, which is what we want to see."

Both the Skiper/Pirate boys and girls have two meets on tap in the coming week. They are slated to host Braintree Friday afternoon in a non league contest. However, if the weather conditions make their home course at Wheelwright Park unsafe, the meet may be moved to Braintree.

The teams will travel to Rockland Tuesday.

NDA SOCCER

Strong start for NDA

The Notre Dame Academy Girls Soccer team has started out its 2011 season on the right foot, winning two of their first three games in impressive fashion.

The Lady Cougars are looking to improve on their 2010 season earning a 19th seed in the south for the state tournament after finishing the regular season eight wins, six losses and four ties.

NDA is returning eight seniors to this year's squad along with four talented freshmen. The team has players from Cohasset on the squad.

Head coach Liz Lima, now in her fifth year at NDA, believes this year's squad has the experience to hopefully make some noise in the state tournament.

The Cougars are lead by senior captains Lauren Varela and Gabby Kenyon, who have both been regulars in the Cougar lineup since their freshman year.

NDA lost their opener 4-1 to Franklin, but followed with wins over Ursuline Academy and Pembroke.

2. Weymouth – Three games in less than a week, and the Wildcats could not be tamed. They walloped Dedham, 6-0, tied at Framingham, 2-2, and beat Newton North, 1-0, to remain unbeaten on the season and atop the Bay State Carey division.

3. Duxbury – One up, one down for the Dragons, who opened their Patriot League schedule on cruise control with a 3-0 win over Quincy.

4. Marshfield – It wasn't exactly a week to remember for the Rams, but they remain in the top six, sliding down one notch. This came after a 0-0 draw against Plymouth South and a 2-2 tie vs. Bridgewater-Raynham.

5. Scituate – A 2-0 win over an unpredictable Pembroke club, followed by a 3-0 win over Quincy, kept the Sailors well afloat in the rankings.

6. Norwell – After disappearing from the top six last week, the Clippers reemerge. This comes after a 2-0 win over a good Carver team and a huge 1-1 draw against league foes Harwich on the road.

On the bubble: Cohasset, Silver Lake, Plymouth North

Week One Rankings: 1. Hingham, 2. Weymouth, 3. Marshfield, 4. Duxbury, 5.Scituate, 6. Silver Lake

Girls

1. Weymouth – Playing three games in one week is a daunting task. Getting a result from two is impressive, considering the quality of Weymouth's opponents. The Lady Wildcats beat Dedham, 3-1, lost to unbeaten Newton North, 1-0, and then beat Whitman-Hanson, 1-0.

2. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons made light work of their Patriot League counterparts, knocking down Quincy, 5-0, to take their first league win this fall.

3. Plymouth North – Entering the rankings for the first time this fall, and deservedly so, the Lady Eagles topped Falmouth, 2-0, and beat rivals Plymouth South, 2-1, to take sole possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast League.

4. Marshfield – In its only game of the week, the Lady Rams lost, 2-0, to Plymouth South. This isn't the Plymouth South of old, having lost nearly all of its power from last year. A tough loss for Marshfield.

5. Norwell – Three up, three down for the Lady Clippers, and three conference wins at that. After starting the week with a 6-0 win over Cohasset, Norwell beat Carver, 4-3, before blanking Harwich, 3-0

6. Braintree – Making their debut Inside the 6 this season, the Lady Wamps came away with two shutouts last week to snap a season-opening, two-game slide. Braintree beat Milton, 2-0, and followed that up with a 1-0 win over Brookline.

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

There are no winless teams in the South Coastal Hockey League after the third week of the season.

The Classics Div. Rangers and the Legends Div. Whalers both came up with respective 5-4 wins in their games to each notch their first win of the season.

The Rangers appeared that they would have an easy win as they led by two goals over the Bruins on three different occasions, but needed to win their shoot out for their 5-4 win.

Darron Jacobs of Pembroke had two goals and an assist, while Hanover's Joe Craig and Jim O'Toole of Rockland added a goal each and Jay Parker also of Hanover had three assists for the Rangers in regulation. Paul Lafond of Hanover and Jeff Uva scored for the Rangers in the shoot out to give them a 2-1 advantage and the win.

Mike Martin had two goals and an assist for the Bruins, while John Zimmer added a goal and two assists and John Tympanick scored for the Bruins.

Marshfield's Chuck Morrison scored two goals and Steve Concannon of Scituate added a goal and an assist in the Whalers 5-4 win over the Toros. Norwell's John Maguire and Paul Flagg both added a goal and an assist each for the Whalers.

James Ward of Norwell scored two goals, Paul Brinkman and Pembroke's James Holmes added one appeice for the Toros.

Hanover's Mike Murphy scored the only goal of the shoot out as the Sharks stayed undefeated in Legends Div, play with a 3-2 win over the Crusaders. Art Riccio also scored for the Sharks.

Scott Mondeau and Mike Simon scored the goals for the Crusaders.

James McNeill scored two goals, Todd Roach, Charles Ryan and Paul Murphy scored one each as the undefeated Saints held on for a 5-4 Legends Div. win over the Stingers.

Paul Smyth and Pembroke's Peter Tamborella each had a goal and an assist for the Stingers. The Stingers also got a goal each from Chris Poudrier and Chuck Gosselin.

Pembroke's Paul Lyons scored two goals and added an assist in the Black Hawks Classics Div. 3-2 win over the Canadiens. John Dunn also scored for the undefeated Black Hawks.

John Davey and John MacLellan of Pembroke scored a goal each and Mike Martin also of Pembroke had two assists for the Canadiens.

COHASSET DAY

Each classic car has a story

Concours back for fourth year

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

The 4th Annual Cohasset Classic Car Concours (CCCC) motored along the town's beautiful coastline on Sunday as one of the premier events of the 2011 Cohasset Day Celebration. The tour ended at the center of Cohasset Village as these classic beauties literally stopped traffic — foot traffic — as people enjoyed the parade of 40 gorgeous automobiles.

The classic, antique, sports and racing cars came from 13 cities and towns — from as far away as Smithfield , R.I. — with half the cars from Cohasset. Cars ranged in age from the oldest, a 1924, 4-cylinder Ford Touring Car owned by Cohasset's Brian & Grace Wilkin (the 3rd place Pre War Class winner) to the powerful, 6-liter engine of the 2010 Aston Martin owned by Cohasset's Bill Earon, who captured 1st place in the Exhibition Class.

Every car came with its own story, from the one-of-a-kind in America parade leader, the red and black1935 DKW Auto Union (Winner of the Chairman's Choice Award), to the rare 1936 Bugatti Ventoux 2 lite Coupe —which took the Pre War Class' 1st place —to another rare 1937 Packard 1501, winner of 2nd place in the Pre War Class. Back again for his 4th consecutive year was the fire engine red 1992 Ferrari 348 TS, driven by Paul Wuori, an original member of the '60's era McLaren Formula 1 racing team. Jim Hazen's black 1954 Aston Martin was just back from the Lime Rock, Conn. race track along with Tom Hamilton who drove his E Class Race car, a 1986 Porsche 944 Turbo PCA. Each car was as different as its history. Also joining this year was a rare1965 Alfa Romeo Giula Coupe which won 1st prize in the heavily contested Post War Class and an even rarer 1954 Arnolt Bristol Bolide whose perfect score won Best of Show. Erling Falck of Marblehead took 2nd in the Post War class with his 1957 Porsche 356A Sunroof Coupe and Tom Littauer's '59 MGA garnered 3rd Place in the Post War Class.

The Cohasset Concours is catching attention outside of this zip code. Last year's CCCC was covered in the January 2011 issue of the nationally recognized "Classic Motorsports" magazine. This year, the Porsche Club of New England named the CCCC its key event for its "Drive Your Porsche Day" celebration.

A huge thank you goes to everyone who made the event a success, from the car owners to the CCCC Committee judges and logistics teams to the hundreds who cast votes for their personal favorites on the Common judging event. Special thanks to the Jenkins' for lending their magnificent estate for the morning event and for Ted and Henri Richardsson (sons of Peter & Kate) for their 4th consecutive year of logistical support and Rachel Littauer, serving her first year as the official Assistant Scorer.

The beauty of a classic car comes from its details and it's the same with the event itself. The following are members of the 4th Annual Cohasset Classic Car Concours Committee who worked hard to make 2011 an event to remember: Pete Brown, Founding Chairman; Peter Richardsson – Head Judge; Kate Richardsson – Head Scorer & Official CCCC Photographer; Ted Richardsson – Event support; Henri Richardsson – Event Support; Rachel Littauer – Assistant Scorer; Stephen Murphy – Judge & Logistics; Jim Sandell – Judge &Logistics; Jim Hazen –Judge & Logistics; Jim Theriault – Judge; Mike Walker – Judge; Brian Wilkin -Member; Carol Brown – Head of Catering; Jackie Klienz – Catering Support; Leila Hill – Catering Support; Andi Gilchrist – Catering Support and Linda Fechter – PR Support.

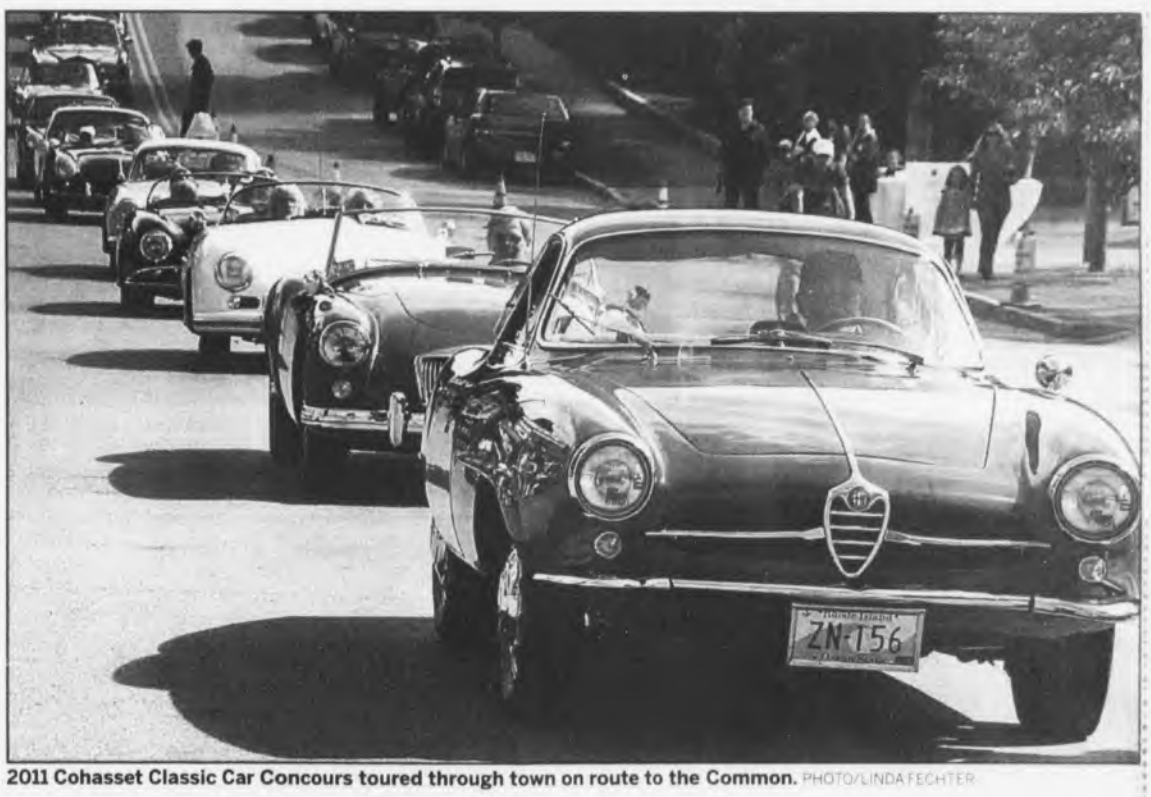
Town holds special day

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset Day 2011 had gorgeous cars, high fashion, delicious food and everything from tug o' war to a dunk tank. In addition, there was the 4th annual Decorated Bike Parade & Contest, which featured some of the most creative decorated bikes to date. The winners of the Bike Parade were: Best Cohasset Spirit- Madeline Milanoski; Best Use of Creative Materials-Victor Wellman; and Best in Show — Liz Mitterando.

Local restaurants provided great food while the music of Loco Locals, Aldous Collins and Jackson Weatherbee had them dancing in the street. Attendees had a great time while also doing good — $1500 was donated on behalf of Cohasset Day 2011 to the Cohasset Food Pantry.



Cohasset Day, founded in 2008, is a joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee.

Amie Theriault, Santi Holistic Healing and Kerry O'Keefe from SG & D Insurance Agency made sure everything ran smoothly. Volunteers from Pilgrim Bank, McSweeney & Ricci and Tybee Acupuncture were also an integral part of making it a great day for all. PHOTO/LINDA FECHTER

LIFE AT CHS

Getting ready for Spirit Week!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Hello Cohasset! It's officially autumn, so get ready to watch the leaves turn into brilliant golden hues and fall to the ground, go apple picking on a cool fall day, pick pumpkins in the Cohasset pumpkin patch, and enjoy the fall holidays of Halloween and Thanksgiving! Sayonara summertime, I'm ready to drink coffee, eat apple cider donuts, and drink hot chocolate at cold football games.

This past week was pretty busy at CHS, but things have definitely become a routine now. Tuesday was back to school night, and parents got the pleasure of going to their children's classes for short periods of time to meet their teachers and get a quick overview of the class syllabus, schedule, and expectations. Students in NHS and Student Council had to guide many lost parents through the school, directing them to each class. Overall, the night seemed to be a success! Additionally, freshman parents got to learn about the school, scheduling, rules, and more at the Grade 9 parent coffee on Wednesday morning.

The week didn't start out too well for Cohasset sports. The football team fell short to Hingham this Saturday, losing 14 to 10 in a hard-fought battle. Girls' soccer lost 4-1 to Carver on Monday. Although boys' cross country lost, the girls' cross country team won their second meet at a tough course in Harwich on Tuesday afternoon. However, the soccer and field hockey games, golf matches, and cross country meets on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday were more successful. Tonight is the first home football game against Scituate at 7 p.m.! Come to the high school to cheer on the team, listen to the pep band play the Cohasset fight song, and spread some spirit with the help of the cheerleaders (who are doing so well this year, I can't wait to see their half-time routine). It is guaranteed to be a great time, and is a fun way to spend your Friday night. For more sporting results, see the sports section of the paper.

Student Council had many meetings throughout the week to plan Spirit Week next week! Monday kicks off the week with a Pep Rally, followed by Spirit Days, homecoming soccer and field hockey games, the homecoming football game, election of the homecoming court, and a themed homecoming dance. Tickets to the dance will be on sale next week. I expect everybody to come to school fully dressed up and full of school spirit come Monday morning!

That's it for this week Cohasset, next week is guaranteed to be extremely busy, but also a lot of fun. I can hardly wait!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High. Her column runs monthly during the school year.

SEPAC news and events

SEPAC is offering notable speakers for the new school year Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Council (Cohasset SEPAC) has been busy at work this summer securing a tremendous schedule of speakers for the First Tuesday of the Month meetings.

This year, the presentations are covering a wide array of topics that directly affect all families in Cohasset.

The current SEPAC officers welcome two new board members. The new officers are vice-president, Kim Carvette and Osgood Liaison, Kim Whittmore.

New this year, located in the PSO calendar is the entire line up of speakers for the school year, SEPAC's new twitter address and contact information of the SEPAC officers.

The board welcomes new superintendent Barbara Cataldo to Cohasset. The SEPAC board was fortunate to meet with Mrs. Cataldo over the summer to discuss the evolution of special education in Cohasset. "It was a terrific jumping off point. We discussed many topics that have been brought directly to our attention by Cohasset parents." says Helane Childs, SEPAC secretary.

Orientation to IEP's will be Cohasset SEPAC's first meeting on Sept. 20, from 9:30 to 11:15 a.m., a week later than usual in order to ease the first week of school commotion, at the Osgood library directly after Osgood School drop off time. Coffee and bagels will be served. Dr. Denise Messina, the Cohasset School District's director of Student Services, will explain what Special Education is, how a student is identified as needing services, transitioning from Early Intervention to an Individual Education Plan (IEP) or 504 plan, and the range of services beyond the regular classroom. "This is a great informational workshop for parents and guardians of younger children and children just brought to CARE teams or with new diagnosis." states Diane Herth, SEPAC president. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo will be in attendance. Check out the website at www.cohassetsepac.org to learn about how they can help you and your family. Information is added weekly to the website.

If you would like to be notified of professional speakers coming to Cohasset or speaking on the South Shore pertaining to learning and special education e-mail Diane Herth at CohassetSEPAC@gmail.com and they will add you to their weekly or bimonthly notification list.

GIMME SHELTER

They are all 10-weeks-old, neutered, litter-trained, playful, purring and adorable. You can mix and match these irresistible baby kittens. COURTESY PHOTO

Little bundles of love

HSAR is offering a $50 reduction of the adoption fee for every cat and kitten in the shelter for the entire month of September.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping that these guys and gals will be adopted in pairs.

Etta is a gray female; Holly, black female; Elton, black male; Sunny, gray-and-white tiger male, Cher, gray-and-white tiger female; and Buddy, black-and-white male.

They are all 10-weeks-old, neutered, litter-trained, playful, purring and adorable. You can mix and match these irresistible baby kittens.

HSAR has a shelter filled with adoptable felines, so please check out their website at www.hsar.org to view some of the available cats and kittens.

HSAR is offering a $50 reduction of the adoption fee for every cat and kitten in the shelter for the entire month of September. They are doing this in order to find suitable homes for current residents and free up space for other homeless cats and kittens.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

HSAR thanks the many people who generously donate to their cause. They couldn't do it without you!

HSAR's 2012 Kittendales Calendar is now available. Joanne Berman, and her sister, Susan Berman Davis have donated their time and talent to this collectible and unique calendar. It makes a great holiday gift. All the kittens are from HSAR. It's a great combo of adorable kittens and fine-tuned male physiques. More info on the HSAR website.

BRIEFLY

Gulf Assoc. to meet Oct. 12

The annual meeting of the Gulf Association will take place at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 12, at the Lightkeeper's House.

Topic will be Ospreys and Water Birds of the South Shore, an illustrated talk by John Galluzzo of Massachusetts Audubon Society. Refreshments will be available.

Car trunk sale this Saturday

Scituate Rotary Club Car Trunk Sale gets underway at 9 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 24) in the North Scituate MBTA parking lot on the corner of Henry Turner Bailey Road and Country Way.

Car donation $20 to benefit local Rotary programs like DARE and scholarships. Walk-in donation $2 to the Rotary International "eradicate polio" bucket For information call Lisa Tompson on 781-545-7376.

The Trunk Sale is a "yard sale on wheels" — a great way to sell no longer wanted or needed items without having to hold a yard sale. Just load up your car and drive to North Scituate on Saturday, Sept. 24 between 8 and 9 a.m., pay $20 to a Rotary volunteer, park your car, open your trunk and start selling!

Melanoma EF Race and Walk

The fourth annual Melanoma Education Foundation Race and Walk will take place on Sunday, Sept. 25, in Wompatuck State Park. The 5-mile USATF sanctioned run and the 3-mile Family & Friends Walk will start at 10 a.m. Registration is $20 and begins at 8:30 a.m.

Online registration and fundraising pages are available at www.mefrace.org. Contact Race Director Jan Danowski at danowski@verizon.net for more information.

Right now, investing in your home is the smartest move.

In this economy, you may lose money on most other investments. That's just not the case with this one. When you choose the most reliable replacement windows, you're investing in your home, and you'll see your returns every day when your drafts are gone and your heating bill is lower.

For a strong window that will last, look to the company that has lasted.

Renewal by Andersen is the exclusive start-to-finish replacement window subsidiary of Andersen Windows—a company with a 108 year reputation for quality. Our replacement windows are held to Andersen's same high standard, while some other less reliable windows have been reported to leak and fail after just a few years.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Margaret J. Smart

COHASSET – Margaret J. Smart of Cohasset, died peacefully Sept. 16 at Harbor House in Hingham.

Born Nov. 1, 1923 in Rumford, ME, she was the daughter of Dr. Henry Peter Johnson and Hazel MacGregor Johnson. She graduated from Oak Grove School, College of William and Mary and Boston University. In 1949, she married William J. Smart after meeting him in the Alumni Office of Boston University, where she worked as an executive secretary. After 32 happy years of marriage, he predeceased her in 1981. "Bud and Peg," as they were affectionately known by friends and family, lived in the Merrymount section of Quincy for nearly 20 years. In 1973, they moved to Cohasset, where Peg was an active member of the community. She volunteered for the Cohasset Public Library, FISH and served as treasurer of the Cohasset Consignment Shop. She was also a member of the Cohasset Garden Club. Peg adored politics, home entertaining and sports, especially her beloved Boston Red Sox and New England Patriots.

She is survived by her four children: Anne M. and Elaine M. of Arlington; James A. of Seattle, WA; and, Gail Scibelli of Port Washington, NY as well as two grandchildren, Sara and Danny.

A memorial service will be held on Saturday, Nov. 12 at 1:00 p.m. at the First Parish Church, 23 North Main St., Cohasset, MA. For more information on the memorial service, contact gscibelli@createthegroup.com.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Peg's memory may be made to Harbor House, 11 Condito Rd., Hingham, MA 02043-1746, attn: Elizabeth Leary or Perkins School for the Blind, 175 North Beacon St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Katharine G. Howe

Katharine G. Howe

NEW LONDON, NH – Katharine Gansevoort Binnian Howe passed away on Sept. 8 at her home in New London, NH after a six month encounter with melanoma.

The only daughter among five children of Walter B. Binnian and Katharine G. Thomas, 'Kitty' was born on April 25, 1922, in Cohasset, MA, where she lived for the next sixty-six years. She was an avid sailor and gardener, member of the Cohasset Yacht Club and Garden Club, and a frequent traveler. She toured England, Europe, China and New Zealand with her beloved husband, John F. Howe.

In 1943 Kitty married Anthony Rogers Whittemore, with whom she raised four sons prior to his death in 1959. She met the challenge of raising her somewhat unruly boys alone with characteristic courage and an adventurous spirit. In 1966 she married 'Jeff' Howe and cheerfully added his three children to her household. Known affectionately as 'Kiffy' to her extended family, she and Jeff lived in Cohasset until 1997, when they relocated to New London, where Jeff had spent many childhood summers.

Katharine was a proud descendant of American Revolutionary War General, Peter Gansevoort, "the hero of Fort Stanwix"; of Lemuel Shaw, Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court; and of nineteenth century American author Herman Melville, her great-grandfather.

She was predeceased by her four brothers: James, John, William and Samuel Binnian. She also lost one of her own sons, Timothy R. Whittemore in 1963 to melanoma at age fifteen. She is survived by her husband of forty-five years, and her three sons; Anthony D. Whittemore, MD, and his wife Rhoda, of Sherborn, MA; James M. Whittemore, Esq, and his wife Katherine, of Harpswell, ME; and Peter G. Whittemore, MDiv, of Cohasset. She is also survived by her step-children; John F. Howe Jr. and his wife Casey, of East Sandwich, MA; Peter S. Howe of Framingham, MA; and Mary R. Howe of Andover, NH. Katharine had a special place in her heart for her brother Sam Binnian's children; William, Betsy, Anne and Emily. Her grandchildren, for whom her affection was unlimited, include; Anthony R. and Joshua S. Whittemore, and Sarah B. Mendes; Timothy J. and Samuel E. Whittemore, and Lincoln B. and Caitlin A. Erhard; Heidi P. Howe, David A. and Jonathan D. Rose, and Timothy H. Howe; Leah A. and Samuel A. Howe; Alexander B. and Hannah D. Eaton, and Andrew J., Daniel L. and Hester E. Merzi. She also leaves ten great-grandchildren.

A private service will be held at the Central Cohasset Cemetery in October.

In lieu of flowers, the family encourages donations to the Lake Sunapee Region VNA & Hospice, P.O. Box 2209, New London, NH 03257.

William J. White

William J. White

COHASSET – William J. White, age 73, of Cohasset, Sept. 12, 2011.

He is survived by his loving wife Marilyn (Bryan) White of 51 years; four children: Mary Ann O'Toole of Dudley MA, Susan White-Stigliano of Milton, Marilyn White of Marshfield and Patricia Cifrino of Cohasset; eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Bill worked for Pan American Airlines for 20 years, then the Federal Aviation Administration where he worked his way up to Deputy Director of Flight Standards in the United States. He enjoyed fishing, boating and spending time with his grandchildren. He was a gracious encourager who had a gift for bringing out the best in others. He was a very talented handy-man and will be greatly missed. "He came, he saw, he fixed it."

A private service in his honor will be held this week at the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne. A memorial Mass is planned for Sept. 24 at 10:00 a.m. at St. Anthony's Church, 129 South Main St., Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Bill's memory may be sent to The Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

For online guest condolences and further info please visit, www.dolanfuneral.com.

Ethel M. Frederick

COHASSET – Ethel M. Frederick of Cohasset, age 87, Sept. 14, 2011, at home with family.

Beloved wife of the late Edward Frederick. Mother of Dr. Edward Frederick, DDS of Scituate and the late Jeanne Marie Frederick. Grandmother of Patrick Donovan of Cohasset, Brian Donovan of Hull, John Donovan of Brockton, Kathleen Foss of Cohasset, Edward Frederick III of Quincy., and Shannon Frederick of California. Great-grandmother of six.

Ethel worked as a Loan Officer for the Small Business Administration for many years.

A funeral Mass was celebrated on Monday, Sept. 19, 2011 at 11 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset. Visiting hours were held Monday 9-11 a.m. prior to the funeral Mass in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset, MA. 02025.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 3, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cosmic changes create a potential for disruptions in your travel plans. In the meantime, you might want to consider shifting your focus to another area of your life that needs attention.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for beauty-loving Bovines to enjoy something special for the senses. It will restore your spirit and return you to the workaday world ready for the next challenge.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With your planetary ruler, Mercury, going retrograde, you might want to slow down the pace in pursuing some of your projects. Rushing things could be counterproductive.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Tensions begin to ease in those once-testy relationships. This helps create a more positive aspect all around. Expect to hear news that could lead you to rethink a recent decision.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The pace of activity that had slowed last week now begins to pick up. This is good news for Leos and Leonas who have career-building plans that need to be put into operation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Venus offers encouragement to romance-seeking Virgos who are ready to get up, get out and meet more people, one of whom could be that long-sought soul mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An ongoing problem with a co-worker might need to be sent to arbitration. Get all your facts together so that you have a solid base from which to make your argument.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You are usually decisive about most matters. But you might want to defer your decision-making this week until you get more facts. Someone is holding out on you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That quiet period is ending, and a new burst of activity creates some problems at the workplace. But things are soon resolved, and everything goes back to normal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Relationships could be either helpful or hurtful as you pursue your career goals. You might have to make some difficult choices depending on what your priorities are.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might still have some doubts about a career move that could involve a lot of travel. If so, continue to check things out until you feel secure about making a decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Love rules, as Venus continues to exercise her cosmic influence on both single and attached Pisces. New developments might cause you to change your travel plans.

(c) 2011 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You often think of others before you consider your own needs. You enjoy helping people and would make a fine teacher or caregiver.

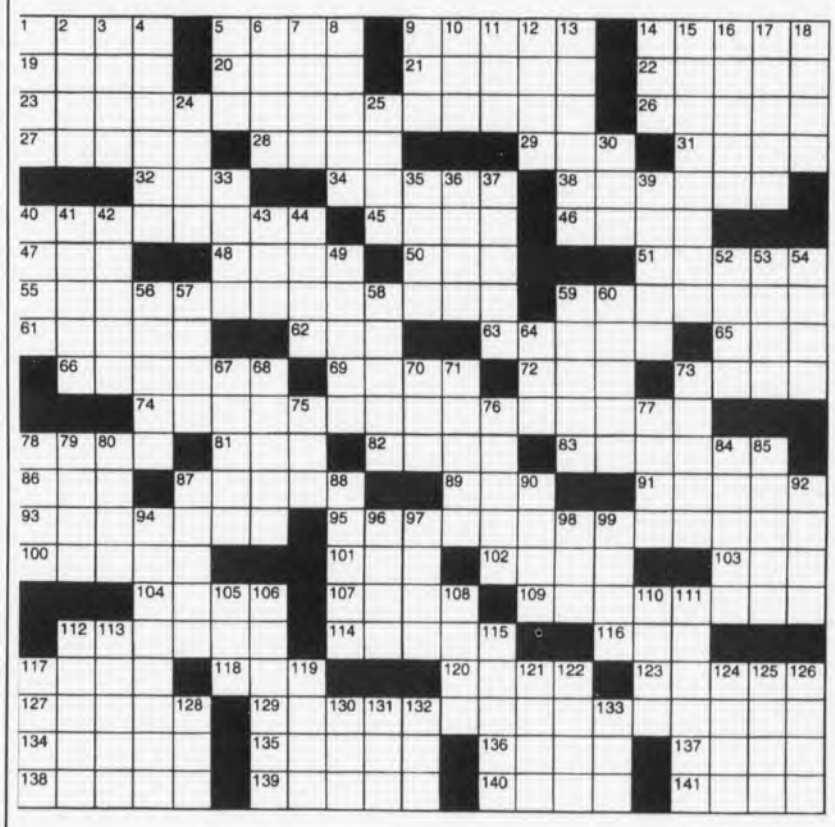
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
